

THE OREGON SCOUT.

AMOS K. JONES EDITOR. City and County Official Paper.

Saturday, May 7th., 1887.

THE NEW PARTY.

Latest advices state that it is now absolutely determined upon by Henry George and Dr. Mc Glynn to organize a political labor party. The work is taking definite shape in California under James G. Maguire, a man of some prominence in the State. It is undertaken by organizing clubs in different parts of the State. A constitution has been formulated and will be printed and sent to clubs which have been organized in San Rafael, Santa Rosa, San Jose, Los Angeles, Riverside, Sacramento and other cities and towns. If the clubs will approve the constitution, they will be at once permanently organized and work for the presidential and state elections will be commenced. Mr. Maguire is commissioned for this work by Gaybert Barnes, secretary of the National Executive Committee.

The commission under which Judge Maguire is acting as State Organizer, is signed by Gaybert Barnes, as secretary of the National Executive Committee, which is composed of John Makin, James Redpath, and Rev. Docter Edward Mc Glynn, so well known from his controversy with Archbishop Corrigan on account of his connection with the labor movement and Henry George's land theories.

The constitution which is about to be mailed to the embryonic clubs, recites a portion of the Declaration of Independence and claims that it has been overridden and its aims defeated. The overruling of the party demands first, that taxes shall be levied on lands only; second, that all poll and road taxes and all licenses, except those imposed for the protection of public morals shall be abolished; third, that all specie and all paper money shall be issued by the national government and the national banks shall be abolished; fourth, that the government shall acquire and operate all railroads and telegraphs; fifth, that the importation of alien contract labor and the employment of domestic convict labor shall be prohibited; sixth, that United States Senators shall be elected by the direct vote of the people; seventh, that giving or taking a bribe for a political act shall work a perpetual disqualification to vote or hold office; eighth, that the importation of Chinese shall be prohibited and their employment discouraged; ninth, that owning of land by aliens shall be prohibited.

Those who join the clubs are required to subscribe to a pledge that they will obey the rules of the party, support and vote for its candidates; that they will defend its men and measures when ever called upon to do so, and that they will go to the polls and work as well as vote on election day.

ANOTHER PROBLEM.

It would seem in these later days that it is impossible for a law to be written or enacted that cannot be picked to pieces by the harpies of the legal profession, or "constructed" to suit the purposes of designing persons. The inter-state commerce law is a simple of this, and now the question as to the legality of the special law passed by the last legislature for the holding of an election in November, is being discussed.

The Salem Statesman says the question has often been asked since the close of the last session of the legislature whether the special election in November next for the purpose of voting on the proposed amendments to the constitution was, of itself, constitutional. Section 23 of article 4 of the constitutional of Oregon says: "The legislative assembly shall not pass special or local laws in any part of the following enumerated cases, that is to say: 13th: Providing for opening and conducting the elections of the state, county or township officers; and designing the places of voting."

Then section 18 of article 5 of the constitution provides that the governor shall issue writs of election to fill vacancies in the legislative assembly; but he is given no power to call a special election for any general purpose. The question is an important one, and will likely be brought to the courts before the election is held.

The Blanchgrass Blade, published at Lexington, Oregon, comes this week, asking to exchange. As the Blade is a most excellent paper, with a head level on most of the questions of the day, we comply with pleasure.

Only a few cans of the prize Sewing Machine baking powder left at Levy's. Try your chance, you will probably draw the machine.

NOTES.

The Alien Land Law passed by Congress restricts the right to own real estate to American citizens, aliens can neither hereafter acquire. The right of any foreigner to become an American citizen is not questioned, but they must become naturalized before they can own property. If foreigners wish to partake of the advantages of the American government, they must first become identified with that government, and a part of it. The acquirement of immense tracts of land by foreign syndicates for the mere sake of speculation is summarily knocked in the head, and in the future these moneyed nabobs of the old world will have to renounce their allegiance to the crowned heads and don the quiet garb of the Republic, ere they can enjoy the benefits and reap the reward accruing thereto.

The West Shore for April is at hand, replete as usual with well written articles and excellent engravings. Several winter scenes in the Pinecreek mining district are illustrated in this issue.

Cove Cullings.

Willie Breunen gave a pleasant party at the hotel to his young friends, Wednesday evening.

Miss Annie Rimehart, one of Sumnerville's most popular young ladies, visited Cove friends and relatives this week.

Sowing is about finished in all parts of the Cove. Indications are very favorable for a big yield of grain this season.

Mrs. E. O. Henry opened a select school in the public school building last Monday, with an attendance of about twenty-five.

Mrs. O. P. Javeox started for an extended trip through Illinois and Dakota Wednesday. She will visit in Grand Rapids, Dakota, also Chicago.

The following letters remain uncalled for in Cove post office: Mrs. A. Baker; Frances C. Carpenter, J. F. Davidson, Noel Hopper and L. Shelton.

Miss Emma DeHass, niece of the well known dairyman, Jno. Wagner, and sister of John DeHass, arrived in the Cove this week, direct from Kansas. The young lady expresses herself well pleased with her new home.

Last Friday, Frederick Mitchell while near Telocaset, was thrown violently to the ground by his horse falling, and was painfully bruised. From the effect of the shock and the horse rolling on him, Mr. Mitchell has been confined to his bed several days.

Mr. F. I will wait for you.—A. R. Mr. S.—I can't wait till Thursday for you.—ditto. No more amateur young lady barbers can operate on my head. M. H. Don't you forget it, I'll have my hat tied on the next time I ride to Union with Dave.—R. M. I will wager a new hat, soda water is my straight drink for ninety days.—B. Be it ever so humble there is no place worse than home when the wife is away.—O. P. J. Special delivery of letters to Cove has commenced and I am carrier.—H. The horse was weary and I was fresh, so concluded to lead him home, which was only four miles.—J.

Written for the SCOUT. THE EDITOR'S LUNCH.

Listen, my children, and you shall hear of the editor's luncheon of crackers and beer. 'Twas a cold Friday night in eighty-seven, as the clock on the mantle was striking eleven; when the lively city of Union town was wrapped in slumberland's dainty gown; the stream that divides the south from the north, down into the darkness went bubbling forth; the innocent citizens all were asleep, except the printer—the Lord's black sheep. All night did they work, or till twelve o'clock, when the last of the SCOUTS from the feed-board was struck. And then for a picnic of crackers and beer—a thought they all cherished with an inward cheer. There was Brownlow and Jake and long-legged B., besides the two Joneses—five in all, law men! Now down to the table, sat the innocent five, and into the conials did faithfully dive. Now, Jake was the youngest, but the heartiest one, and as jolly a boy 'er dwelt under the sun. He liked his sardines and he liked his good beer, but his eyes were the biggest, in this case 'tis clear, for when two of the bottles were took from the shelf, he insisted on opening the third—jolly off; but the wiser old Brownlow, who looked far ahead, "the other we'll save till next week," coolly said. Now they drank and they ate, and they ate and drank, till they'd passed for an O. R. & N. water tank; and at last that wo Joneses withdrew from the ring; but tight to the lunch did the other three cling. The beer was so good, the sardines so grossy, that to stay at the festive was a thing very easy; so they laughed and joked, and drank and eat, as if running a race to see which could beat till their stomachs refused to admit any more, then of course they quit, but they should long before. The first to give up the luncheon was Jake, but he quit on account of his dear stomach's sake. Next, Bee drew out of the frolicsome game, while Brownlow went eating and drinking the same. Next morning the office was unoccupied, and the printers were suffering with pains in their sides. Their faces were downcast, and their countenance pale, and their whole constitution was certainly frail.
