Red Clover.

A correspondent of the Oregonian, writing from Oswego, Oregon, says: Red clover is the great renovating plant. It is universally esteemed the best plant with which to restore worn-out or overcropped soils. In fact there is no other way in which this can be done so easily and cheaply as by green manuring with clover. Farmers who have exhausted their lands by successive cropping with grain or timothy are resorting to clover and stock as their only hope. Commercial fertilizers are out of the question, and barnyard manures cannot be procured in sufficient quantity. Here clover comes in as a beneficent gift, enabling the intelligent farmer to maintain or restore the fertility of his land, and at the same time replenish his purse.

For pasture, no grass that I have ever tried begins to be equal to clover, either in quantity or richness of crop. All grazing animals are fond of it and do well on it. I have seen hogs made ready for the butcher on clover alone. Clover is the only grass that ought ever to be sown in an orchard. All others are positively injurious, as they extract the moisture when it is most needed by the trees, and impoverish the soil. But clover either pastured by hogs or left to rot on the ground is a benefit. Now, one would naturally expect that a plant which, in its green state is so rich in all the elements of nutrition, would be good in proportion when dried, for the drying and curing process only eliminates the water. And so we find that for hay no other grass is quite equal to clover. For milk cows nothing is so good, as all intelligent dairymen know, and beef cattle can be kept fat all winter on good clover hay alone. I know there is among many horsemen a prejudice against clover hay as a fodder for horses, but there is no foundation for this prejudice, either in the analysis of the plant itself or in the experience of those who have used it. It is said that clover hay will give horses the heaves. Probably it will if it is spoiled in curing, so will timothy or any other hay, and timothy, though not musty, is apt to be very dusty if not cut at just the right time. I have fed my horses on clover for the last twenty years, and have never had a case of heaves, neither have any of my neighbors, and they all feed clover almost exclusively, with one or two exceptions. Timothy is constipating, and horses fed on it alone are apt to have staggers. Clover is somewhat loosening, and mixed with timothy counteracts the binding effect of the latter, thus making a perfect ration. I am fully satisfied that the use of clover as a food for horses will rapidly increase as the years go by, and experience proves its value.

Our practice has been and still is to sow clover in the spring with oats, plowing the ground if possible in the fall or winter. The seeding should be done as early as the ground will permit. First we sow the grain and thoroughly harrow it, which pulverizes the soil to the depth of two or three inches. Now we sow the clover seed, using eight pounds to the acre if clover alone is sown, but if timothy is mixed, six of clover and four of timothy. This will make the crop thick enough if it is put in right. We finish the operation by running a chaf crusher or roller over the field, preferring the crusher if the ground is as dry as it ought to be. This "firms" or presses the earth around the seed, and does not cover too deep. The result is the seed all comes up and grows more rapidly than if closely brushed in.

Clover likes a firm subsoil, and only requires an inch or so of fine soil on the surface in which to start. Its long tap root finds no difficulty in penetrating the hardest soil. Land plaster sown at the rate of a barrel to four or five acres, if sown early in the spring, will always insure a good crop, even in the driest season.

Clover is a biennial plant with perennial qualities. Sometimes it gives us four or more crops, and sometimes it dies out in three years. So it has to be renewed often, but this is no objection, as every time we break up a field of clover we have a mass of roots equal to a fair coating of manure. Clover makes its growth early in the season, and should be cut soon after it is in full bloom, usually early in June. Herein lies the only real difficulty with clover, as at this time we are apt to have rains, and as clover is somewhat slow in curing it is frequently damaged and sometimes entirely spoiled. To avoid this it should be cut as possible. To facilitate and hasten this curing and housing the various labor-saving implements and appliances must be resorted to. Besides the mower, every farmer who raises much hay should possess a good hay tedder, bulky rake and horse fork, and the neighbors who are individually unable to buy their implements should cooperate in their purchase and use. All these things are expensive, but their use often makes the difference between saving a crop and losing it. The tedder is a tool of the greatest value, but not yet appreciated. It is only a question of a little time when its merits will be better known and its use general. With it clover can be cured in half the time it usually takes and cured much more uniformly. Clover should never be cut when the dew is on, and it is not best to get too much down at once when the weather is "catching." A most excellent plan is to commence mowing at 10 or 11 o'clock and continue till night. As soon as the dew is off the next morning start the tedder and keep it going until noon constantly, exposing the grass to the drying influence of the sun and air. After dinner it can be put into medium-sized cocks for a day or two, or if the weather be uncertain carried directly from the windrow to the barn. By this plan the hay is tumbled or scattered while it is simply wilted, and we avoid knocking off the leaves. But if left in the swath till dry enough to rake, the top is so dry that the leaves fall off and the stalks break up, while the bottom of the swath is yet damp and uncured. The use of the tedder enables us to get the clover in much sooner and better. It is a very nice point to decide when the hay is just dry enough to prevent too much heating in the mow. If it is fine it requires a little less airing; if coarse and heavy a little more. All this applies equally to the curing of other grasses, though they are more easily managed and generally ripen later.

Figs.
Figs should be picked when the skin is fully checked, that is to say, when it shows small white seams upon the surface, by which time the fruit has reached its maturity. It must be dried upon trays in the sun. Care should be taken that it is turned over at least once a day, until the greenish tinge entirely disappears, when the fruit is ready to be taken in doors for packing. While drying the figs should never be left out in the open air after 5 o'clock in the evening, nor should they be exposed to the sun again until all the dew is dispersed in the morning, as the least moisture will entirely spoil their flavor and appearance, and render them unfit for use. Avoid packing windfalls, because they are utterly worthless for commercial purposes and will greatly detract from the value of a whole consignment—perhaps lead to its final rejection. Before packing the figs should be hastily dipped into clean, boiling-hot sea water, to guard against all danger of attack from the worm, so destructive to the fruit; then properly packed and thoroughly pressed in tin cans, hermetically sealed and labeled. In all cases the fig should be left in its natural state and sugar or other confections discarded. These directions must be strictly observed if one wishes to obtain a choice article that will command ready sale and top prices in the market. Even our common black fig, treated according to the above method, will "astonish the natives."

To Make Fowls Lay Well.
Fowls to lay well should have access to raw bones ground or pounded up fine; ground bone being preferable, as there is less waste and it is more easily digested and assimilated. If freshly ground, raw bones are more nutritious than when burned. If they can be obtained conveniently, ground or pounded oyster shells are good and economical to feed to laying hens, which, of course, should be fed regularly on good wholesome grains and food, placed in such a way that the birds will have to take plenty of exercise in getting it.

Notes.
In an area embracing less than one-half of the Hor-e Heaven region, W.T., 2000 acres have been planted with Indian corn this season. The lower Yakima country is proving well adapted to that crop.
A dry piece of ground should be selected in which to build the poultry house. The ground, if well underdrained and prepared by putting on a thick layer of sand and fine gravel, will be much better than a board floor for the fowls.
It is said that a train load 330 cattle, from Cotulla, Texas, which had been fattened on prickly pear and cottonseed meal, was lately marketed in Chicago. They attracted considerable attention, being the first large lot of cattle ever fed that for market.
Turpentine will kill the scale pests and will not injure the trees in the least to which it is applied. The turpentine should be put on the trees with a brush, just as varnish is applied to furniture, and the results of the application are said to be satisfactory. It is a cheap remedy at all events and is worth while trying.

According to the San Francisco Merchant there are now in California at least 4000 vine-growers, and the area planted in vines is not less than 160,000 acres. The value of this land, with the improvements, is not less than $60,000,000. Employment is found for at least 40,000, who, with their families, represent a producing population of 150,000 persons.
The great flow of milk of cows is truly artificial. In a state of nature the cow gives only the necessary quantity, and gives it only the necessary time to sustain the calf. The greater and longer yield of milk is the result of better feeding, better treatment and longer manipulation of the teats. Hence, to increase the yield of milk, feed and milk well.

The Glenn ranch, in Colusa county, Cal., comprises 52,000 acres, of which 23,000 are in grain this season. Of the 23,000 acres, 14,000 were summer-fallowed and 9,000 winter-sown. F. C. Lusk, who has charge is confident that the product this year will be 25 bushels to the acre. There are at present engaged in summer-fallowing 10,000 acres, 80 eight-mule teams, making 640 head of mules at work.
The famous Squawmie hop-growers' ranch, at Squak, King county, W.T., is supposed to be the largest in the world. It contains 300 acres of hops. They have twenty span of horses and mules, a saw-mill which is soon to be run night and day, a logging camp, 100 acres in oats and wheat, and 50 acres of potatoes, etc. They have their own carpenter and blacksmith shops, and they keep a hotel and large store besides, and by next fall will have 800 men in their employ.

AN INTERVIEW WITH DR. PRENTICE OF 626 SUTTER ST., SAN FRANCISCO.

After calling several times at Dr. Prentice's office and finding it thronged with patients, an audience was gained in his evening with Dr. Prentice at 626 Sutter Street. His office is centrally located, being on the line of the Sutter Street cable cars. The doctor appears to be a man of about 40 years of age, not as old as one might expect for a man of his position and wide practice.

"Doctor, it is said that you have consented to remain until the first of June. Is it so?"
"Yes; in compliance with many requests of patients wishing to see me, living at a distance, I have postponed my visit to Europe until the first of June."

"Doctor, many marvelous stories are told about you straightening cross-eyes in less than a minute, and making the blind see as did the disciples of old."

"How many patients have you had during your stay of four months in San Francisco?"
"Well, sir, replied the Doctor, without referring to my books, I should say about 2,000."

"Could you cite us some cases of your rapid and marvelous cures?"
"I think the best way would be to demonstrate it to you right on the spot here."

When he took me into his operating room, where Miss McNamara of San Rafael, Cal., was waiting to have her eye straightened, which had been crossed all her life. It was a terrible disfigurement to the girl. Without notice, an assistant, holding the eye open, Dr. Prentice proceeded with the operation. Not a moan nor sound escaped the patient to indicate that she suffered any pain. After a few dexterous movements, and in less than thirty seconds by the watch, Dr. Prentice said, "It is done; you are cross-eyed no longer. And as I laid her again in the face, and scarcely believe that transformation, for a beautiful girl stood before me, who a few moments previous wore an ugly cross-eyed expression."

"Doctor, are you ever obliged to use chloroform or any other anesthetic?"
"No; I do my work rapidly and easily, and my patients never complain of pain."

"Do you possess or try to exert any magnetic power?"
"I do not try to exert any particular magnetic power. I do, however, with my patients, and find in Providence for the best results and I get them."

"Is your treatment for Diseased Eyes, Catarrh and Discharges different from that pursued in this country?"
"I do not use any caustics at all, such as nitrate of silver, sulphate of copper, nitric acid, and the like. I use the mildest remedies possible, and do not pain the eye at all, and I get a quicker and more permanent cure than I ever did with the old harsh treatment."

"Do you treat all diseases?"
"I prefer that only those cases will come to me for treatment who have tried all the other means within their reach and failed to get well. It is such cases that have made my reputation and I take great pride in it. I do not wish to interfere with the good medical treatment and would prefer that ordinary cases should go to him. There are enough so-called incurable cases, to keep me busy, such as catarrh, deafness, piles, fissure and ulcer of the rectum, which I usually cure in one treatment, so that the patient, if living at a distance, can return home in from one to three days. I would like to see, president of the Gainesville National Bank, after all other treatments had failed to cure his piles, was cured in one treatment and returned to his distant home the same day. The cure is always permanent because I remove the Cause."

"And you will positively remain until June the first?"
"Yes; I think that I will leave June first, and until that time can always be seen at 626 Sutter Street, San Francisco." During this interview the offices became crowded to suffocation with patients, and we were obliged to bid the doctor good evening. We recommended everyone to send a stamp and get Dr. Prentice's journal the "New Idea" which will be mailed free to any address.

THE EFFECTS OF MENTAL EXHAUSTION.

Many diseases, especially those of the nervous system, are the products of daily renewed mental exhaustion. Business avocations often involve an amount of mental wear and tear very prejudicial to physical health, and the professions, if arduously pursued, are no less destructive to brain and body tissue. It is the most important attribute of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, that it compensates for this undue loss of tissue, and that it imparts new energy to the brain and nerves. Its rapidity with which it renews weakened mental energy and physical vitality is remarkable, and shows that its invigorating properties are of the highest order. Besides increasing vital stimulus and counteracting the effects of mental exhaustion, this potent tonic cures and prevents fever and ague, rheumatism, chronic dyspepsia and constipation, kidney and uterine weakness and other complaints. Physicians also commend it as a medicated stimulant and remedy.

WHAT A FORTAGE STAMP WILL DO.
Now read this carefully, and note every word, for it may lay the foundation for your future happiness and health. Any man or woman, young or old, that suffers with any disease, no matter what it is called, or of how long standing, or who has doctored you, if you will sit down and write me a full history of the case, and all the symptoms, I will write you my opinion of the case, the probabilities of a cure and cost. I am prepared to treat everything requiring surgical application, as well as medicinally; am a graduate; 30 years practice. Men and women both can write to me in strictest confidence. Persons coming to the city are requested to call on me. Enclose a stamp and address.
