Nervous Exhaustion.

A Few Useful Hints For Nervous People.

"I am so nervous" is a very common expression, used by both old and young: and very few can now be found who are free from nervous troubles. We regret to see that the malady is rapidly increasing. And from what cause? There are various reasons. It may be because of a low condition of the general health: the vitility of the nervous system is depressed; or from a want of perfect digestion and assimiliation of food, and the vitilising power of pure, rich blood. the nerves are not properly strenthened and nourshed, and consequently become weak and diseased.

There was a time when "nervousness," and that class of disease known as nervous affections, were apparently confined to ladies; but at the present day it is an undoubted fact that as large a portion of nervous diseases exist among men as among the gentler sex; and their distressing affects and lasting and enervating results are a thousand fold more serios, as they extend to posterity and are productive of a weakened and enfeebled race. Nervous and physical debility, caused by

is a frequent and distressing disease, its depressing influence being felt alike on both sexes and all ages. Among the first symptons of this affection are usually a derangement of the digestive organs. A feeling of languor will be experienced, and a gradual failing of strength, with general weakness and pain in the back. More or less exhaustation is experienced on waking in the the mornsng. There is often a bad taste in the mouth; the vision becomes dim, the memory is impaired, and the patient is troubled with frequent dizziness. Persons thus affected are often despondant, and ruffer from gloom and depression of the mind. The nerves become so weakened that the least excitement or shock brings on a tremor or trembling, often attended by palpatation of the heart.

LADIES

Are particularly susceptible to nervous disorders, owing partly to their more delicate nervous organization and partly to their sedentary life and consequent confinement in-doors. Such affections are attended by restlessness and nervous excitement, anxiety or depression of the mind, loss of interest in society and the daily affairs of life. There is also loss of sleep; the patient on rising in the morning, feeling tired, languid and unrefreshed. From slight nervous attacks to hysteria, from simple "nervousness" to utter prostration, there are many and varied forms of diseases of the nervous system none of which should exist, and of all of which can be cured by the use of

Dr. Pardee's Remedy

Which first stimulates the liver and kidney's to healthy action, regulates the digestive organs, and from the first dose begins its work of purifying and building up the worn-out system It produces sweet and healthy sleep, enriches the blood, and imparts to the pale and sallow cheeks the glow of health, brings brightness to the eye and elasticity to the step. More real benifit can be derived from one half dozen bottles of Dr Pardee's Remedy, than from a hundred dollars invested in any other way.

Ask your druggist for it, and take no other.

creditors, but the old man denied most vehemently that he had any such intentions and claimed that he would pay all his indebtedness before he ever took his departure. As he seemed to be honest in his promises the people at length began to think they were mistaken in regard to his intentions and he was not so closely watched. On Tuesday night of last week he however "skipped out" and a number of crediors are left lamenting. One of them pursued as far as Woodward's, but heard that he had passed that place at 8 o' clock that morning and was at that time 2 P. M. no doubt safely across the Washington Territory line. It is said that they have located at some place near Prescott, and we would warn the citizens of that place to give them a wide berth.

Died.—On Wednesday Aug. 24th. at 2 o'clock A. M. of diptheria, after an illness of 18 days, Charlie, the six year old child of S. L. and Ella McKenzie. Charlie had not been well for some time preceeding the attack of diptheria that caused his death, and when that terrible disease, so fatal to the young, fastened its relentless hold upon him, all the efforts of human skill seemed powerless to prevent dissolution. In vain did parents and kind friends minister to the wants of the little sufferer. Charlie must die. The fiat had gone forth and the final hour must be faced! How hard it was to watch, and wait for the last breath, the breath that was the dividing line between the life that was and the life that is to be-only those who have suffered a similar loss can know. No wonder that a proud father bowed his head in anguish and a loving mother wept as though the heart was broken. The funeral on Wednesday evening was largely attended by friends of the afflicted family, who sought by this last tribute of respect for the dead, to soften so far as possible the blow that had fallen upon the parents of the dead child. Charlie was a bright boy, beloved by all, on account of his cheerful, sunny disposition. Bright tempered, light of heart as an angel, he won his way into the affection of all with whom he came in contact. Lonesome indeed is the home of the stricken family! A link is broken in the family circle, a vacant chair sits in the corner of the room, the childish laugh that gladdened the heart is hushed! The fond mother no more feels the arms of her oldest, her first born child, around her neck. The father looks in vain to catch a glimpse of the boy who was the sunlight of his home. Charlie is gone! The words send a thrill of anguish to the heart as we reflect that never again in this life can we hope to see the bright form of the loved one now gone. We cannot penetrate the curtain of futurity, that hides him from our gaze, but we must realize the fact that at some time in the not far off future we too must pass through the Portals that seperate death from life. We know too, that not until that time has come can we hope to meet the loved ones that have passed from our lives, and be swallowed up in the grave. Then can the now stricken family hope to clasp to the heart the boy that now sleeps so quietly upon the hill where lies the city of the dead of this vicinity. God grant that when that meeting takes place that all may meet. That no face may be missing! But that all united may stand around the great white throne of God.
