HIT IT HARD.

A Dollar Investment Produces $5,000.

As noiselessly as the snow comes down did the magic number 69,368 slip from the wheel of The Louisiana State Lottery on the eighth instant, and as noiselessly were the glad tidings communicated by the managers to the fortunate owner of the lucky number Mr. Thomas R. Miller, now residing at 1213 Lawrence Street, in this city, that he had drawn one-tenth of the second capital prize of $50,000or in other words, the handsome sum of $5,000-on an investment of $1, which amount the company hold sub ject to his order, and would be happy to remit to him at his pleasure.

Coming as this magnificent prize did. without an effort, it may be pardonable if in the language of precious s nes, it is likened to the topaz-No vember's jewel-which, so long as its owner holds undisputed possession, is supposed to keep off bad dreams, it?" They tried all sorts of ways, but and in other ways brighten the sun- it could not be done, because each one shine of his daily life.

correct statement of the facts, actuated "you say they're yours, and I'll say him to look Mr. Miller up, which he did yesterday morning, and found him, as informed, at his residence, 1213 Lawrence street. Mr. Miller is a firstclass, industrious mechanic, 38 years of age, and holds the confidence and respect of all those with whom he is acquainted.

He has been a resident of Denver for about a year, and he is so infatuated with the "Queen City" that he has concluded to invest his money here in real estate, which will doubtless pay nearly as great a dividend as on his investment of one dollar in the Louisiana lottery.—Denver (Col.) News,

TEA DRINKING IN JAPAN.

Occasions of Einborate Ceremony Among the Higher Classes.

Some letters recently received from Japan from an American traveler who is having exceptional advantages for becoming acquainted with the native life of the country, give some very curious and interesting items about teadrinking there. He says "tea-drinking is the great feature of Japan. It is not only a national taste, it is a social institution. On the railroads ten is offered first-class passengers at stations as water is provided for them with us. In traveling by private conveyance the little roadside inns for accommodation of travelers are called-and are-teahouses; tea is about all they have to offer. When you go into the shops they bring you tea; it is a part of the general courteousness and courtliness of their way of doing even in petty trading. But all this is merely incidental, quite aside from the real business of teadrinking. The tea you get in such ways is, of course, generally inferior, but the great difference when you come to the regular tea drinking is in more than the quality of the tea. Every house among the well-to-do-classes has as an attachment a tea house-not merely a room devoted to the beverage, but a little detached house, and in these tea-houses the social life of Japan is carried on. It corresponds in a way to our club life. Circles of friends meet in them (men only) habitually, and those that are especially devoted to these festivities, or who frequent important and influential tea-drinking circles, are called tea men, just as we talk about club men. The detachment of the teahouse from the rest of the house is a necessary measure of privacy in a country where partitions are merely screens, and privacy in the tea-house was imperative at the time previous to the last revolution, when the tea-houses were the centers of political debate and conspiracies. There are still many teahouses where politics are the chief theme, and there are others where art and literature are the main interests to the quests. "The whole matter of tea-drinking on these occasions is full of elaborate ceremony. Servants are dispensed with, it being part of an entirely theoretical assumption of simplicity that the host shall do every thing with his own hands. The real origin of the custom is probably in that desire for privacy before referred to, Unless Japanese servants are more tractable than ours it would be a good deal easier to do it all oneself than to teach them, for the utmost punctilionsness is observed in dous strain. This press for simplicity of every detail. The water is heated over charcoal, and there are definite ways of arranging it. I've seen a book giving forty different ways of doing that. The kettle is put on with ecremony, after a definite model. The tea-house is always ornamented with some work of art, a picture or a piece of writing (for writing is an art here) or a potted plant, and as this is changed at each writing it is part of the civilities devolving upon the guests to go up to this and admire it. Potted plants are a great thing here. All sorts of things are dwarfed and grown in pots, and the shaping of them is a sort of national fancy work. You know you often see in pictures on fans and screens queer-shaped plants and pots. Well, all that business of forcing and growing them in particular ways is one of the burning artistic questions in Japan. Little girls are taught it, ladies practice it, and there are rival schools and cliques in the art and great artists eminent for success in it, and lots of books about it.

"A feature of these entertainments is, naturally enough, conversation about celebrated tea-drinkers of the past, poets, artists, and statesmen, and often the very cups that they have used ligure in the festivities of generations hendreds of years later. This is felt to be a delightful touch of sentiment when it can be accomplished. They pour water under the boiling point on their tea, and it has not the bitter taste ours has. They drink it without sugar, or are supposed to do so, but they cheat, for they hand sweetmeats around with it, and the tea is drank through them. as it were; but of course a great deal of it is drank without any saccharine accompaniment. The choice tea-is altogether a different thing from any we know about. It is made from very young, carefully-chosen tea-leaves, and is only partially cured, and then in a powdered form is made into a some thing more like gruel than any thing else as to form. It is very delicate and seems to bring one very near to the plant in its first estate."-Chicago Times.

A Fable for Every Body.

In the depths of a forest there lived two foxes. One of them said one day in the politest fox language: "Let's quarrel." "Very well," said the other. "But how shall we set about would give way. At last number one A News reporter desiring to secure a fetched two stones. "There," said he, they're mine, and we will quarrel, and fight, and scratch. Now, I'R begin. Those stones are mine?" "Very well," answered the other, "you are welcome to them." "But we shall never quarrel at this rate!" cried the other, jumping up and licking his face. "You old simpleton, don't you know it takes two to make a quarrel any day?" So they gave it up as a bad job and never tried to play at this silly game again. - Western Plowman.

> -The number of persons engaged in crushing truth to earth is surprisingly sarga -Pomeroy's Advance Thought.

Of the 400,000 Hebrews computed to be in the United States, at least 4°5,000 are settled in New York. Among them are many millionaires. A New York paper recently published a list of nineteen Hebrews in that city whose fortunes range life with from $1,600,000 up to $8,000,000 each.

HEADACHE AND D'SPEP-IA.

No. 512 West 57th St., N.Y., June 19, 1885. I have been a martyr to bilious headache and dyspepsia. Any indiscretion in diet, over-fatigue or cold brings on a fit of indigestion, to be followed by a headache lasting two or three days at a time. I think I must have tried over twenty diffe ent remedies, which were recommended as certain cures by loving friends, but it was of no use. Like the Irishman, I got no better very fast. At last I thought I would take a simple course of purgation with Bassangurus Ports. For the first with BRANDRETH'S PILLS. For the first week I took two Pills every night, then one Pill for thirty nights; in that time I gained three pounds in weight, and never have had an ache or a pain sinc . WILLIAM E. ROCKWELL.
