CARE OF THE HAIR. How Most Women Can Come Into the Pos

session of Fine Tresses There is no necessity of cutting the hair short to improve its growth, uniess in the case of fevers, etc., when it is surg to fall out. To be sure, cutting the hair short does improve its growth, but in most cases the remedy is worse than the disease, for it takes it so long to grow to a length when it can be done up in the simplest way, that when it is of the length that it is too long to do up on papers, and too short for a coil, but must be simply combed out and let hang, it is a great temptation to cut it again, as it seems to be at that stage of growth that can not be kept in order. If at Senate bill granting to the Oregon this stage the temptation is resisted. it will have grown to a convenient length to put up in some way. for if cared for at this time it will grow

There is nothing that will improve the hair like brushing. Use a stiff-bristled brush, and brush the hair vigorously until the scalp glows. No matter how many times the hair is brushed during the day, it is of the utmost importance that it should be thoroughly brushed before retiring at night. A vigorous use of the brush night and morning, but more especially at night, will render the hair soft and silky and give it a beautiful gloss. It will, also, make the coarsest har soft and the dryest moist. Vary important is it that this treatment should be given to long hair, where a comb is of very little use but for removing suarls. The hair should always be taken down at night, no matter how elaborately it has been dressed, and given a thorough brushing, then parted behind and plaited into two long brails. which may be left loose, or if annoying, as it is to some to have their hair down at night when sleeping, they can be fastened in a loose mat at the back of the head with rubber hairpins. once, for the former are very apt to The number of individual pension rust when used for any length of time, for they are daugerous a H mets when in and do not fail out of the hair as easily as the steel ones. ## AMONG THE PAPUANS. How Family Quarrels are Conducted-Natives of New Britain.

The Papuans live in villages, which are again divided into small inclosures, occupied by the various families or which the tribe is composed. Each family has its chief or patriarch, whose position is one of considerable responsibility, for if any of the members of the little community of which he is the head transgresses the customs of the country, he is called upon to rectify the wrong. Sometimes, also, a fend will arise between two families, and then it becomes his duty to lead his people in battle. It was our good fortune to witness one of these family quarrels. A young "buck" was, according to our informant, accused of "stealing" a young girl, or, in other words, they eloped. As every female has a certain cash value in New Britain. the relatives demanded that the girl should be paid for in fall, which demand was refused. After much unsuccessful negotiating the indignant father of the girl demanded the blood of the gay Lothario, and the entire family went out on the war-path. We stationed ourselves at a safe distance from the scene of operations in order to watch the affray. One party of some thirty warriors, the relations of the young "buck," stationed themselves behind the trunk of a huge fallen tree, which formed an admirable breastwork. and calmly awaited the onslaught of the foe. The girl's relatives advance ! leisurely along the sandy beach until they had arrived within speaking distance, when they halted, and now an animated confabulation took place between the respective leaders, the one trying to persuade the other to accept a smaller price for the gill than that demanded, the other stoutly refusing any but the girl's full value. Being unable to come to an agreement, both parties began abusing each other in no measured terms, until finally, becoming more and more exercised, they began to swing their slings (a favorite weapon of the Papuau) and showers of stones were soon whizzing across the space between the two parties. Presently one old man, more excited or more courageous than the rest, got within spear dis nnce, and lot ny several spears. without, however, doing any damage. Owners of grounds who are laying plans and maxing arrangements to opens, and who cau make their own selections, or can rele or the nursery. man to carry out their wishes, should bear in mind that rather small trees will possess the following advantages: They may commonly be bought for less money than large or overgrown o les; they are more easily taken up, and with better and more perfect roots; they are more compactly and more securely packed for railway conveyance; the freight or express charges are less; they are less likely to be injured or dried in transit; there is less labor in handling and digging holes; they are better held by the roots, and do not require staking; they are not exposed to loosening winds; and they are more easily and perfectly trained into such a shape as will suit the owner. Here are nine reasons; and if the matter is carefully examined, every one will be found true. The only supposed advantage of large trees is that they will bear fruit sooner, but this is not commonly the case, and the check they meet with in removal often retards them so much that the younger trees, which are sentrely checked, outstrin them, and give handsomer and more thrifty growth and better fruit -Country Gentleman.

Unfold one adhere: iron dry a wrist-band and its band, which must not be relinquished natil perfectly dry, as the rounding of the neck of the garment and its finished look (unworn) can not be secured without this pains-some super-sensitive necks require careful smoothing of the inner surface of the baad as well; ironthe yoke, next the fcont of the shirt, purchase nursery trees when spring | and, after these, the bosom. Insert the bosom-board, and draw the shirt-front tightly over it; wipe with a clean, damp cloth, and, holding it firmly, iron dry and polish by much rubbing. During the operation, however, and when partially dry, lift all the plaits, either with the fingers or a very blunt knife, and then press down again. This reyeals the style of the front, and does not detract from its stiffness. When the desired polish has been obtained, with the tip of the iron. make a marking down the line of stitching on each side of the central plait, which depression gives the regular launderer's tinish; draw out the board, iron the shoulders and flaps, and, lastly, taking the back by its center-it will not harm the dry. stiff bosom-crease down the middle. and the garment is ready for folding; and this is the manner of it: lay it. front down, on the board, and bring the right outer edge to the central crease, and iron the folded edge only; take up and lay the sleeve lengthwise adown this fold; repeat with the left side, and, laying one hand across the back, at the bottom of the bosom, tuss it over it with the other, and hang it on the clothes-bar, for, as a most worthy mother used to instruct her daughters whom she trained to domestie as well as literary ways: "Never saddle and bridle chairs with the airing Houn" - Good Housekeeping.
