Washington Letter.

May 25th, 1888.

EDITOR OREGON SCOUT:

Washington is overflowing with strangers these days. The series of Baptist conventions, held by the five National Associations of that Church, brought over 4,000 people with it. The Knights of the Golden Eagle, that benevolent society which departs to-day, after having held their ninth annual convention here, paraded the streets, been reviewed by the President, visited Mt. Vernon, etc., brought 4,000 representatives. The Lawyers' convention now in session in this city has attracted a brilliant array of legal talent from the various states and territories. The ceremonies attending the laying of the corner stone of the Catholic University has brought together a large concourse of Catholics, among them being many distinguished clergymen. Then there has been a Jewish gathering here this week, a conference of Hebrew rabbis at the synagogue on eighth street, two hundred fine fire ladders from Hudson, N. Y., and excursions are entirely too plentiful to attract a notice.

The Baptist brethren, in sombre citizens' attire, came to the Capitol and mingled with the city's throng almost unobserved except for their guide-books and their sight seeing propensities. Not so with the Knights of the Golden Eagle, who made their presence felt conspicuously. Gold braided caps and uniforms, and hats with long white and purple plumes were to be seen everywhere. It was on Tuesday especially that the sounds of trumpet and drum stirred the air of Pennsylvania avenue all day. In the morning it was the visiting firemen; in the afternoon it was the Knights of the Golden Eagle. The Baptist friends were leaving and the lawyers were coming, and while neither made such a popular stir in their movements, they were none the less welcome. The great convention city holds out her hands in welcome to all, whether their advent is under swaying banner and heralded by martial music or whether they slip in unobserved, singly or in groups, from the station, gripsack in hand.

The Catholic demonstration was directed by General Rosecrans, who is himself a zealous Catholic. The Washington Catholic organization led the visiting organizations in the procession, the next post of honor being given to the clergy. The procession of clergy was led by the priests, followed by the bishops, and then the archbishops, with the cardinal in the rear. The blessing of the corner stone was the first detail of the programme, and then followed an address by Bishop Spaulding, with other exercises. The General's arrangements were very complete in every detail.

It would require the space of a large sized volume to tell you what took place in the Baptist convention, since it was the largest of the kind ever held in America. The temperance question was discussed among other things, however, and I will just mention that the National Capital was too attractive, and that some of the ministers who made speeches did not hesitate to say that sight seeing among the delegates interfered with the convention. A resolution was offered providing that the next annual session in Boston be opened with a three hours prayer service. Several speakers intimated that, in their view, there had not been prayer enough at this annual meeting. One member said: "When we go to Boston, I hope those who voted for this resolution will be present at the prayer meetings, and not go strolling over Boston Commons or visiting the Bunker Hill monument. There has been time enough to pray in Washington, but the brethren have been spending their time going to Mount Vernon or listening to the tariff speeches in Congress."

The report of the committee on European missions indicated great and material progress in every branch of the work. Another report called attention to the lack of workers in China. There is only one missionary to every 15,000,000 of inhabitants in that far off land. The report of work done in Japan showed the existence of 20,000 Protestant Christians in Japan, 17,500 of that number having been converted since 1880. Four new missionaries, who have consecrated themselves to a life among the heathen, were presented to the meeting of the missionary Union.

The Jewish convention was composed exclusively of rabbis. The Hebrew congregation gets its law from the talmud, and is independent in its government. An important topic of discussion at this annual session was the possibility of uniting the congregations as a religious organization, with the view of securing uniformity in many matters where there is now diversity of practice. THE WEST SHORE (ESTABLISHED 1875) PORTLAND-OREGON

The West Shore is the only illustrated magazine published on the Pacific coast, and aside from its excellent literary features, its object is to convey information, by both pen and pencil, of the great resources of this region, and the progress of its development.

Special illustrated articles appear in each issue, more than the price of the magazine. The subscription price is only $2.50. It is not only the cheapest illustrated magazine in the United States, but contains articles and engravings of great interest to every resident of this region, which can not be found in any other publication.

Subscribers for 1888 receive a large supplement every month. The first one is a beautiful map of the "Entrance to the Columbia River," printed in fine colors, and each of the others represents some feature of our sublime scenery. The supplements are alone worth more than the price of the magazine. Try it for 1888, and after reading, send it to your friends elsewhere. You will find it both entertaining and instructive.
