THE MAID, THE MEADOW, AND ME.

Dates a bright suntry day at remember Not a which was at large ofer the len; Not a bird broke the silence that greeted The maides, the meadow, and me, Sweet silence! Union silence!

The slivery stillbest of Lave? Fond visions! Fair visions! That flutter like anthems above!

The blue-belts, so modest, were bending; The grass waved away like a sea; How fair was the beauty that clustered

'flound maiden, and meadow, and me. The blue sky! Her blue eyes! Her face flushing red as the rose;

The bright glance-"I lov ethee," And pleasure that no limit knows, The meadow is bare, and the birds flown; O'er a mound weeps the low willow tree!

Tis the old place again-but how lonely!

How sad seems the meadow and me! How lonely! The maid sleeps In silence where happiness reigned; I'm dreaming! I see her! My eye-lids with tear-drops are stained. -B. W. HUFFMAN.

The Coming Phenomenon.

On January 1st the people of a portion of the Pacific coast will be treated to a grand spectacular play to the accompanient of the music of the spheres. McCoy will move to Portland.
