THE INAUGURAL.

A SYNCPSIS OF PRESIDENT HARRI-RISON'S ADDRESS.

A Brief Outline of the Policy to Be Pursued by the New Administration-Peace and Prosperity His Aim and Ambition.

With simple, solemn ceremony, in the presence of all the wisdom and authority embodied in the co-ordinate branches of the government, and surrounded by representatives of all the great nations of the earth, Benjamin Harrison was last diplomacy and in war, and ready to use Congress to order in special session.

After swearing in the new members the Senate and House proceeded in a body to the east front of the capitol, to those precautions for our peace and safety those precautions for our peace and safety witness and participate in the ceremo- which all great powers habitually obnies of inaugurating the President-elect. The following is a synopsis of General Harrison's inaugural address:

THE FIRST INAUGURATION. This occasion derives peculiar interest from the fact that the Presidental term purposes will not be entertained by any under our constitution. The first inauguration of President Washington took delays attending the organization of Con- dangers of hostile observation or environgress and the canvass of the electoral ment. We have a clear right to expect vote. We have not attained an ideal condition; not all of our people are happy and prosperous, not all of them virtuous and law-abiding; but, on the whole, the opportunities offered to the industrious to secure the comforts of life are better than elsewhere and largely better than they were a hundred years ago.

THE SECTIONAL ELEMENT.

The sectional element has happily been eliminated from tariff discussion. We have no longer states that are necesof pursuit among people which brings bility. wealth and contentment. It is not quite possible the farmers and promoters of the great mining and manufacturing enterprises which recently have been established in the South may yet find that a free ballot of the workingman, without distinction of race, is needed for their defense as well as for his own? I do not doubt if those men in the South who now accept the tariff views of Clay and the constitutional exposition of Webster, would courageously avow and defend their real convictions, they would not find it difficult, by friendly instruction and co-operation, to make the black man their efficient and safe attorney, not only in establishing correct principles in our national administration, but in pre- of American steamship lines. serving for their local communities the benefits of social order and economical and honest government.

The evil example of permitting individuals, corporations or communities to nulify laws because they cross some selfish or local interests or prejudices is full of danger, not only to the nation at large but much more to those who use this pernicious expedient to escape their vantage over others. They will presently themselves be compelled to appeal the case of some of them. to the law for protection, and those who deny that use of it to others.

There are men of all races, even the best, whose coming is necessarily a burden upon our public revenues or a threat to social order. These should be identified and excluded.
