

dy detail of the switchmen and two or three suggestive mottoes were borne aloft. One of these reminded all beholders that the switchman would be needed in 1892, when the Columbus fair was attracting the great world to the Garden city.

The horse-shoers' union came next, wearing aprons with a red horseshoe embroidered on a white ground. The boys looked strong, and they marched with a precision of step that suggested military training. A big float, showing how horseshoes are made, was an attractive feature in this division.

The carpenters and wood-carvers came next, and there was a terribly long string of them, too, marching four abreast. The carpenters had two or three bands and the wood-carvers had their band, and so there was no lack of music there while they were going by.

The iron-molders wore blue hats and blue woolen shirts, with the initials of their order in white across the breast. A bunch of flowers was also worn and natty canes were carried in military fashion.

The Chicago gas-fitters, the machinery constructors, the wood-working machine hands, the harness-makers, and Maurer Verein, with band and drum corps, followed, and then, in the fourth division, came the United order of American Bricklayers and Stone-Masons. They also wore aprons and gloves, and they made a fine appearance. Their number was impressive, and they carried themselves with becoming pride.

The fifth division was the last, and it was made up of cigar-makers, cigar-packers, and waiters. They displayed uniform hats, and carried the regulation cane in the regulation style, keeping step with the band that led them.

The Mississippi Valley Racing Circuit closed its annual meeting at Washington Park, Chicago, last week, at which event the champion three-year-old pacer, Axtell, lowered his record to 2:14. The exhibition of fast trotting was wonderful, there being about 50 heats trotted under 2:30.

The meeting of the Chicago Fine Stock and Industrial Association opens this week, but the real sensation of the day is the trial of the Cronin murderers which is now on under a full head of steam. Three days have already been spent in trying to get a jury, and one poor longcome school teacher, formerly of Springfield Lut now of Blue Island, has been lodged in the box.

There are, doubtless, few will read this but whom have read or heard of the mysterious murder and disposition of one Dr. Cronin here in Chicago, about three months ago. Briefly, the history is that deceased belonged to an Irish society called the Clan-na-Gael, which had received upwards of one hundred thousand dollars for the oppressed of Erin's green isle. Said money failed to materialize on the other side of the briny deep, and Dr. Cronin had instituted a vigorous and unrelenting investigation, to which honorable effort at avenging the poor of his nationality and subserving the ends of justice, he undoubtedly owes his passport to the realms of eternity. There are five "suspects" on trial and over a hundred witnesses to be examined. There is hardly another such a cowardly assassination in the annals of crime, and if there is evidence sufficient to fasten guilt, their lives must pay the penalty.

Still anticipating that I will cast my vote in Oregon for our nation's pride, Grover Cleveland, in 1892, I am sir, Yours respectfully,
W. H. McCOMAS.

WASHINGTON.

An Interesting Letter From Our Regular Correspondent.

August 30, 1889.
EDITOR OREGON SCOTT.—
There is a great clamor on the part of the various State Republican associations of Washington for "recognition". During this week meetings have been held by the associations and plans considered for onsting the enemy. The members in no measured terms denounced the retention of turn-out republicans, who either went over to the enemy during the Cleveland administration or else maintained a masterly inactivity. These State associations are of necessity constituted of government clerks and inasmuch as most of these organizations died during the Cleveland administration, and were only reorganized after the last election, it appears amusing to see the members pose as martyrs and lick imaginary wounds. In the terse slang of the "street," the heads of departments are "on to" these associations. They are generally conducted by a clique of four or five and are rarely representative of the employees from the state they claim to represent. This was true of even the boasted New York Democratic Association of Mr. Cleveland's administration, which had but a short popularity, and was speedily known as the "Albany Association," a name given it by "Sunset" Cox, who may be said to have had his own personal and private convictions concerning the friends of Mr. Cleveland who had known him in Albany and who cut such a wide swath here for a year or so.

All this rage of the associations is due to personal disappointments. After the last election, two-thirds of the republican holdovers, hundreds of whom were from doubtful states like New York and who failed to go home to vote, expected nothing less than to be chiefs or assistant chiefs of divisions. Hundreds talked vaguely of getting paid for sufferings and services by appointment to places in some other department. That these things have not been done is a great and sore disappointment. Men who have not been home to vote for ten years and who have not paid one dollar of political assessments since Mr. Cleveland's inauguration, expect promotion purely on political grounds. Sympathy for them is wasted. Even if to the victor belongs the spoils and departmental clerkships belong among the spoils, it goes without saying that people who had nothing to do with the victory except wait for it, are not entitled to the spoils.

The movement suggesting the removal of General Grant's remains from New York to Arlington or the Soldier's Home meets appropriation generally outside of New York City. The failure of New York to provide a suitable monument has disgusted General Grant's old friends and associates everywhere. There is very little doubt but that Mrs. Grant will consent to the removal and congress would make ample provisions for the tomb. The statement of the New York papers that General Grant frequently expressed a desire to be buried in that city appears without foundation. General Grant seldom alluded to such matters and even in his last illness, did not mention any preference. He did, however, in war times often express a desire to eventually rest at West Point. What he felt in after life, it is hard to tell. He was cosmopolitan. He belonged to no city but to the nation. Born in Ohio, reared in Illinois, educated at West Point, in a long war, afterward a resident of Washington and finally of New York, only the wish of his family and of the American people as a body, should be consulted as to his final resting place.

The president has been invited by Miss Clara Barton to visit the Red Cross headquarters at Johnstown, Pennsylvania, and will probably comply before his return from Deer Park. Later in the season, probably during the extra-session of congress, an effort will be made to secure a visit of representative legislators to the scene of the Johnstown disaster. President Harrison is one of the members of the Red Cross Association, being president of the Board of Consultation, while the secretary of war and the secretary of the treasury are the trustees of the association. This arrangement has existed since 1882.

Miss Clara Barton, president of the association, is a familiar figure in Washington, where her enthusiasm, courage and organizing ability have long been recognized. She is a woman whose whole life is sacrificially devoted to succoring the victims of war and disaster. Walter P. Phillips, general manager of the United Press, is secretary, and George Kenman, the eminent Siberian traveler and magazine contributor, is treasurer. Congress will be asked, at the next session, to establish headquarters for the American National Red Cross in this city. The Red Cross has now no official headquarters, though most of the executive offices live in this city, including Miss Barton.
