INDIANS FOUND THE CURE.

It is well known in the meteria medica that the greatest remedies are compounded from the juices extracted from natural herbs. The humble child of the forest, whose untutored mind knew nothing of our advanced medical science, has nevertheless been instrumental in teaching the great doctors of this age the elementary principles of their profession. Nature and nature's God has always cared for her suffering children, and provided a balm to heal all the curses that afflict mankind. The knowledge of the means come in a natural way. When the Sierra Chemical natural way. When the Sierra Chemical Company of this city first placed on the market their celebrated Great Sierra Kidney and Liver Cure, they knew it to be a wonderful discovery which came directly from the Piute Indians. It was submitted to the test of practical physicians, and reduced to a formula by show. cians, and reduced to a formula by chemical analysis. The good results of the medicines are shown by the testimonials that are constantly being received at their office, 2424 Mission street, San Francisco, and are being published daily.

Not for Fish.

Between Greensboro' and Salisbury the locomotive broke down and we lay for three hours while repairs were being made. There was a small lake near by, and the colonel got out his fishing tackle, hunted up a frog for bait, and tried his luck. He fished that pond lengthways and sideways and up and down and across for two hours and a half, and he was still at it when a white man came through the woods and stopped and inquired

"Had any luck?" "Not a bit."

"Fishing for fish?"

"Of course," "Just to pass the time?" "Yes."

WOMEN AND TIGERS.

A Narration of Feminine Exploits in Bagging Hig Game.

The method of bagging tigers in Nepaul is peculiar to the country, says Eva Wyndham Quin in the Nineteenth Century, and has this great advantage that one is nearly always successful in shooting any tiger which has been marked down. Our friend who is quietly digesting the buffalo which he ate last night must be lying not far from his kill. So we advance with some three hundred elephants in a line and gradually close in upon him, shoulder to shoulder, in a huge ring, from which he has small chance of escape. As the circle contains a fairly large piece of jungle a "shikari" goes in on his elephant to dah elephants-advance for the fray. Those who are accustomed to tiger shooting and think no more of bagging Master Stripes with a well-placed bullet than most do of knocking over a alize the anxious feeling one experiences when for the first time one is perched on top of an elephant, poking about in thick undergrowth and expecting to see a tiger bound out of a mighty roar, and dashes round and round the ring, vainly trying to force his way through, while all the elephants trumpet loudly, with their trunks in the air, and their mahouts shrick and yell, so that one requires all one's nerve to fire and hit him under such alarming circumstances. But it is really a case of now or never, and I take a shot at a tigress as she is galloping by. and am lucky enough to hit her in the back with my first shot, and again in the shoulder with my second one. whereupon she charges straight at our elephant, but only to receive her death-blow from a second rifle in the howdah. One can not help feeling sorry to see such a noble beast laid low, but so great are the rejoicings when she is brought triumphantly into camp, thrown across an elephant's back, that one's regrets are soon forgotten in the pride and delight of having shot one's first tiger.

After this first day's sport we continue to have good luck, especially that red-letter day when, quietly moving across country with a line of elephants, we manage to surround five tigers. On entering the ring we first only eatch sight of one tigress, which is cleverly hit in the shoulder by Mrs. Durand; then, to our astonishment, tigers seem to crop up in all directions-one pair of green eyes glare from beneath the grass at one point, and then yet another pair a few yards on, so that finally we realize there are four big cubs, besides the tigress, galloping among our elephants in the ring. Such a howling, growling, snarling, shouting, trumpeting, and firing off of rifles can never have been heard before. Wounded and furious the tigers take refuge in a small nullah, and there is some difficulty in finishing them off; but at last all five are ours, and piling them on to various elephants we return to camp in the fading light, the sun sinking peacefully in a glow of crimson and gold behind the trees, while the moon rises in the east we wend our way home. By the camp soft, golden winter coats and discuss again and again by the flickering light the excitement of the day's sport.

WHY LEAVES TURN.

A True and Scientific Explanation Given by an Eminent Botanist.

"Probably not one person in a thousand knows why leaves change their color in the fall," remarked an eminent botanist the other day. "The common and old-fashioned idea is, that all this red and golden glory we see is caused by frosts. A true and scientific explanation of the causes of the coloring of leaves would necessitate a long and intricate discussion. Stated briefly and in proper language, those causes are these: The green matter in the tissue of a leaf is composed of two colors, red and blue. When the sap ceases to flow in the fall, and the natural growth of the tree ceases, oxidation of the tissue takes place. Under certain conditions, the green of the leaf changes to red; under different conditions, it takes on a yellow or brown tint. This difference in color is due to the difference in combination of the original constituents of the green tissue, and to the varying conditions of climate, exposure and soil. A dry, cold climate produces more brilliant foliage than one that is damp and warm. This is the reason that our American autumns are so much more gorgeous than those of England. There are several things about leaves that even science can not explain. For instance, why one of two trees growing side by side, of the same age and having the same exposure, should take on a brilliant red in the fall and the other should turn yellow; or, why one branch of a tree should be highly-colored and the rest of the tree have only a yellow tint, are questions that are as impossible to answer as why one member of a family should be perfectly healthy and another sickly. Maples and oaks have the brightest colors."-Field and Forest.
