An Actor's Courage.

Joseph Haworth, the popular remantic actor, has quite a reputation for bravery and daring, and many instances of it might be re-The most recent illustration was in Inted. Columbus, O. Mr. Haworth was stopping at the Neil house, which is located on High street, opposite the state house. One afternoon he was walking down High street with a friend, and was about entering his hotel, when shouts of "Stop him!" and "Runaway!" attracted his attention. He turned and looked up the street, where, a block away, he saw a one horse turnout dashing along in his direction. There was a lady and little child in the carriage, and both were screaming and frantically crying for help. Mr. Haworth, without stopping to think of the danger attending an attempt to capture the runaway, bounded out into the street, and, as the frightened animal was plunging furiously ahead, he made a leap for the bridle and brought all of his strength to bear upon the horse's head. It was a perilous undertaking for the actor, but he pluckily hung on for half a block and finally brought the animal to a standstill at the curbatone amid the plaudits of the crowd, which had witnessed the exciting episode, The carriage was uninjured. The lady, whose escape from probable death was due to Haworth's bravery. recovered from her fright in a few moments, and was, of course, profuse in her expressions of gratitude for his daring performance.-Chicago Herald.

Mexican Soldiers' Tricks.

Mr. Thomas A. Janvier tells some things about the Mexican army in Harper's which will seem extremely odd to Americans, but especially so to those interested in military affairs. Many of the recruits are convicts who have been drafted into the military service, and consequently desertions are very numerous. "Sometimes," says Mr. Janvier, "a rather humorous ingenuity is shown in slipping out of military bondage. In Monterey, one rainy night in March, 1883, more than a score of men belonging to a regiment drawn up at a railroad station, in waiting for the arrival of the president, succeeded in getting away by the device of placing their caps on the butts of their muskets, the bayonent driven in the ground at their places in the ranks.

"By the uncertain torchlight the platoons seemed unbroken, and it was only when the order to march was given, and the regiment marched away and left the cap bearing muskets standing scattered over the ground, that the trick was discovered by the officers. Another peculiar thing is that no baggage train is needed by these soldiers, for they carry all that they need on their backs, even though the wives and the children of the private soldier sometimes accompany them. But while wagons are not necessary to carry the soldier's impedimenta, they are required to transport their pay, which is always in sil-

WHEN POLLY GOES BY.

The but poorly I'm lodged in a little side street, Which is seldom disturbed by the burry of feet, For the flood tide of life long ago ebbed away From its comely old houset, rain beaten and gray. And I sit with my pipe in the window and sigh At the buffets of fortune-till Polly goes by.

There's a flaunting of ribbons, a flurry of lace And a rose in the bonnet above a bright face, A giance from two eyes so deliciously blue The midsummer was scarcely rival their hue; And once in a while, if the wind's blowing high, The sound of soft laughter as Polly goes by

The Tools of Asiatic Workmen.

One more illustration of the stage of advancement which has been reached by the mechanical geniuses of Amasia I will borrow from a cutler's shop. Remember that it is the best work of men who are in the fall heat of the struggle for life that we are noting. These cutlers have to compete in the streets of their city with the work of the men of Shellield. And this is the device that they have been able to originate as the climax of ingenious machinery for the sharpening of mives. They have a grindstone mounted on an axle fixed upon the platform of the little stall where they do their work. A rope is passed three or four times around the axis of the grindstone, and out in the middle of the arrow street, in front of the cutler's shop, tands a man with one end of the rope in each and, gravely pulling away.

When he pulls the right hand the grind stone revolves toward him, when he pulls the left hand it revolves from him. By the grindstone squats the knife grinder cross erged, obliged to turn the knife over every noment as the stone changes its course of evolution. There is something pathetic in the spectacle of these men who have wreatled with the problem of changing a reciprocating motion to a rotary one; have wrestled doubt ess as valiantly as Edison with his mighty problems of electro-dynamics, and then have given up the problem as insoluble, like the oblem of the flying machine, and have set led down to such devices as the most favor able basis on which they can contest their market with the aggressive Europeans -Asian Cor. Concluded to Keep the Dime.

Ben Giroux, the good natured gardien de in porte at the Grand Opera house, has a bright young son who seems destined to prove 'a little faithful copy of his sire" in wit and enterprise as well as "in face and gesture. Last Sunday night, there being no perform ance at the Grand, Ben took his wife and heir to the New Windsor, his old field of is bor, to spend the evening. Mrs. Giroux and the boy took sents to enjoy the show, while Ben roamed about at will, visiting with old friends. At the first drop of the curtain Benwas interrupted by the little fellow coming to him for a dime "to put in the slot and get an opera glass." Bon gave him a penny and the boy went back happy, but, of course, the effects on Parisian stages. penny proved no open sesame, and back the boy came with the remark: "Say, pa, you are guying me; I want a white penny, this yellow one is no good." The boy had had a hard time working at the box after he had in America on business not unconnected with lost his penny and evidently was tired of the dollars and matrimony, as he was tooling the novelty. When he got back to his mother drag of his friend, C. Fish Tobaccoil, out on | she asked if his papa had given him the right Kings Highway, "I say, this turning to the kind of a dime, and he answered "Yep, whereupon the mother asked him why he did not put it in the slot and get the glass. "Don't want to now," he said; "don't want no operation g ass, I am going to buy bananas."-Chicage Herald

Ostriches Race for Figs.

Some time ago a gentleman visited a pen of tame ostriches in Africa. At his call two beautiful birds came up to him. Being desirous of testing their speed, he arranged with the keeper that they should run a race. So he caressed the birds and showed them a handful of figs, of which they are very fond. The ostriches were held while the visitor walked to a certain distance. At a signal they were set free and began to run for the figs.

They came bounding along at a terrific rate, taking twelve or fourteen feet at a stride. They ran neck and neck for more than half the distance, their wings working like arms and making a great sound. Presently one drew ahead, and, looking behind, as you may have noticed a boy in a foot race do, to see where his rival was, and finding him beaten, the winner slackened his pace and gently trotted up for the prize of figs .-New York Journal.

The Indians Are Increasing.

The novelists, reporters and others who write Indian speeches, beginning with the words, "I am the last of my race, the red man is vanishing before the white man a the leaves," etc., had better look up the facts. It now means that any statement to the effect that the number of Indian popula tion is slowly decreasing is not in accord with the truth. The Indian is not dying off. and vanishing from the earth any more than the Caucasian is. They have, for the most part, adopted semi-civilized habits and live quiet lives. They are increasing rather than bereasing.
