The way people are questioning their grocers about the adulteration of baking powders has stirred up that part of the mercantile community to taking more care in their selection of manufactured articles. The consumers are rapidly awakening to the fact that nearly all the cheap brands and prize goods, as well as some high priced brands advertised as been married thirty years had a misun-"Absolutely Pure," contain either Alum derstanding about two years ago, and or Ammonia, and some of them both of these adulterants.

A simple test of the purity of baking powder, is to mix in a tin cup two heaping teaspoonfuls of the Powder with three teaspoonfuls of cold water, place it over the fire, stirring constantly, allow it to boil thoroughly, or, until the gas escapes freely: then smell: if adulterated the odor of Ammonia will be plainly preceived. The presence of Ammonia in most cases indicate that alum is used, as nearly all the alum of commerce contains is true he's a despicable cur." "You Ammonia. WEDDING SUPERSTITIONS.

Curious Customs Which Have Been in Vogue Many Years.

As long as there are fair women and brave men there will continue to be weddings, and as weddings are the fashion there will still be plenty of persons on hand to suggest to a young bride just what she should do to avoid bad luck, and also what she should not do for the same reason.

People who are ordinarily sensible about most things let all their superstitious notions creep into their deas regarding the preparations for a wedding, and these whims are made the subject of discussion at as early a stage in the proceedings as when the young lady is considering what she prefers for an engagement ring.

She is told to avoid opals, as no one ever was known to have any happiness who owned one of them. In spite of this, however, dealers say that there is always a demand for rings set with this beautiful stone. Pearls, the surerstitious say, are even worse, but eventually the little circlet is purchased and the time for the wedding discussed. Then more complications arise as certain days are unfavorable and some months are to be shunned. May is said to be an especially unlucky month, why no one can tell, but many a rhyme could be quoted to show that this notion has prevailed for centuries. August is also looked upon as a disastrous time in which to wed, and those who marry in Lent will "live to repent," according to very old authority.

Winter seems to be the favorite season for wedding bells to chime, in our country at least. In Scotland the last day of the year is regarded with great favor, and should December 31 fall on Friday so much the better, as that is the favorite day of the week for a wedding. Sunday weddings are common in England, and in the early history of our country many couples were made one on that day, but recently such a thing is seldom heard

In Norway and Sweden Thursday marriages are forbidden by the Church, it being called pagans' day.

After much consideration the day is decided upon, and brave indeed is the girl who will consent to change it, for that is sure to bring ill-luck which all the rice and old shoes of the country could not drive away.

The time arrives and with it much advice in regard to the color which she shall wear and the manner of arraying herself. Probably no girl in her teens is ignorant of the rhyme which urges young brides to be careful to wear 'something old and something new, something borrowed and something blue," in order that she may live "happy ever after," as the storybook says.

Misfortune is sure to follow the bride who has a speck of green in her costume. She must never array herself in all her pretty robes until dressing for the ceremony. She must never read the marriage service quite through and she must not stand before the mirror one second after she is ready, no matter how pleasing the reflection of the Lappy face and graceful gown.-Journal of Ameri-

-A native of Mississippi, had a fight with an alligator in a swamp. He killed him after a long struggle, but in trying to get it home he was caught in a quagmire. He sank to his waist and would have gone further but he clasped his arms around the alligator's tail. Ten days later he was found dead, having made desperate efforts to bite through the 'gator's hide and get flesh enough to sustain life.

 A Nashville druggist prepared a rat paint made of a preparation of phosphorus. Catching a rat he painted him with the preparation and after dark. when the rodent was gleaming like a fireball, he turned him loose to mingle with fellow-rats. Dire consternation came upon them when he appeared, and they incontinently fled, the phosphorescent rat bringing up the rear. Some evidence on the subject of barrel-organs was given in a Liverpool court the other day. One of the witnesses was an Italian girl, who stated that during the summer the "takings" of an organ were from twenty totwentyeight shillings on Saturdays and ten to fifteen shillings on other days, while in winter from six to ten shillings were obtained on an ordinary day, and from ten to sixteen shillings on a Saturday.

-Thirty years ago the cant question in England was, "Who is your hatter?" just as here now it is, "Where did you get that hat?" It was succeeded by 'How are your poor feet?" and when the 'Dead Heart," the subject of Irving's present revival, was brought out originally, where one of the characters says, My heart is dead, dead, dead!" a voice in the gallery nearly broke up the drama with "liew are your poor feet?"

A Bucksport, Me., student got tired one day and laid his books in one of the open pipes of the water works while he went to play. When next he thought of the books he couldn't find them, as the pipe had been buried under ground. A few days later the water was turned on, but something was wrong. The water would only come slowly. Finally on working the valve of the hydrant ome paper appeared, then more paper in lumps, then some pieces of cloth binding-and the mystery, both of the bad behavior of the works and of the youth's missing books, was solved.

-An old farmer in the Granite State one Sunday morning started to wind up his great silver watch, and found that the key was filled with dirt. Being unable to dig the matter out with a pin the farmer drilled a hole in the key and with a single breath blew all the dust out. Then he sat down to think, and within a month had patented that hole. To-day in Lebanon, N. J., there is a large factory running by electric power wherein are manufactured daily thousands and thousands of watch keys of every possible size, shape and design. Each one of these keys contains the hole which has been patented by the farmer. The latter has already made a fortune.

-As to the word "gents," that is a good word inasmuch as it describes a class that no other word describes. There are persons who are not quite gentlemen and are not altogether boors; who dress as gentlemen dress, though they are not of gentle breeding, and yet who do not belong to the hearty, natural, genuine, and unpretentious sons of horny-handed toil. They have money and they are loud, presuming and offersive to gentle souls, and they claim to be gentlemen. In respect of some things they show indications of gentlemanliness, in respect of others they are vulgar. The term "gents," falling short of the term "gentlemen," is a very good term to apply to them.-Milwaukee

CATARRH, HAY FEVER, CATARRHAL DEAFNESS. A NEW HOME TREATMENT.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and custachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby these distressing diseases are rapidly and permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on application by A. H. Dixon & Son, 337 and 339 West King St., Toronto, Canada.—Scientific American. tific American.

Charles XII of Sweden.

Gen. Joseph Bartlett, ex-minister to Sweien, makes a somewhat peculiar but interesting contribution to history. Charles XII of Sweden met death at the hands of the enemy or of his own men has always been a subject of ardent discussion by military men and students of Swedish history," said the general a few days ago to a group of officers of the army. "When I was minister to Sweden," he continued, "the subject came up between the king of Sweden and some high military officials and was warmly discussed in my presence. The king was much interested in the debate, and, in order to satisfy himself, ordered the tomb to be opened and the skull examined. I was present at the examination, which took place at midnight in the old church where the remains repose near those of Gustavus Adolphus.

The bullet which ended the life of Charles XII passed through the skull in a direct line. On examining the skull I was struck by the fact that the hole in the forehead was larger than the one at the base. I noticed further that the bone of the skull where the ball passed in front was splintered and forced outward, while at the base the bone of the skull was forced inward. This was conclusive to my mind that the shot that had killed Charles came from behind, which was reasonably conclusive that it was fired by one of his own men, but whether with malicious intent or not no one can say. The king had very little to say on the subject at the time, but it was agreed that no other verdict than the one mentioned was correct, and I am satisfied that it settles the controversy. No publication, however, of the result of the investigation has ever been made to my knowledge, as we were pledged to secreey at the time by the king."—New York Tribune.
