If no gravy were left, moisten with butter; make into round or oval balls with the hands; roll each in egg and cracker erumbs, and brown in very hot lard. Cold veal can be substituted for mutton in any of these receipts with equally good results. - Country Gentleman.

-The first consideration in the management of the laundry is to have good utensils in proper order for work. The tubs should be sufficient in number, of good size, and always kept clean. The wash board should be free from nails that might tear the clothes. The wash bench should be firm and high enough to prevent fatigue in bending too low over the tubs .- The Home.

-Corned Beef Balls: Stew a slice of onion in a cupful of the liquor in which the beef was boiled, then strain the liquor into a saucepan, add a spoonful of butter which has been rolled in browned flour until it has formed into a smooth paste, and stir constantly until it boils. Now stir in two well-beaten eggs, and then two cupfuls of the corned beef which has been chopped until rather fine. Season to taste, and put it away in a cool place where it will become stiff. Then it is to be made into flat cakes, which must be dipped into well-heaten egg and then in pounded crackers or bread crumbs, and fried in boiling i...... The Housekeeper.

Where the Sam Hill are these cuff-buttons?"

"I think, Billiger, they aresuff-button-? If you want me to go to sturch with you this morning you'll have to turn up those blooming, idiotic suff-buttons!

"Have you looked in the soiled cuffs you took off last night, Billiger?" inquired Mrs. McSwat, calmly adjusting her frizzes.

Billiger had not. He hunted up the suffs and found the buttons.

"If you knew they were there why didn't you say so?" he demanded. in an shair and proceeded to put in the but- waltz. tons, telescope the cuffs on his shirtsleeves, and slide them back and forth till the focus seemed to be about right. "I shall be ready for church, Mrs. Me-Swat," he continued, majestically, "in about two minutes. How long do you intend to keep me waiting?"

"I have nothing to do, Billiger," answered Mrs. McSwat, giving a few finshing dabs to her front hair, "except to put on my bonnet and gloves.'

"Well, where's the bonnet!" vocifersted her husband, as he jumped up, jerked on his coat, smoothed his silk bat, secured bis cane, gloves and oversoat, and sat down again. "Trot out the miraculous bonnet, Lobelia. I haven't seen it yet. Where is it?"

"I brought it down a few minutes ago," replied Mrs. McSwat, who was coking about with evident anxiety, "and laid it down here, but I don't see it. I thought I put it on a chair."

"On-on a chair, Lobelia?" echoed Mr. McSwat, feebly, a dreadful suspicion crossing his mind.

"Yes. Can it be-why, Billiger, you mrely wouldn't-O, O, O!" she screamed.

'See what you have done!" For Billiger had risen to his feet and was looking in silence at the chair on which he had been sitting. There, on the seat, were the crushed remains of a once glorious bonnet. It was a flattened, shapeless mass, even nore hideous in its ruin than it had

A HAUNTED HOUSE.

This body of ours has been likened to a 'enement, It often has a hauntest apartment—the stomach. Sear d by the eidrich sprite, dyspepsia, direction flies and refuses to return. What an break the spell, what c n raise the ban laid upon the unhappy organs? We answer unhesitatingly, Hostetter's 85 mach Bitters, and we are warra ted in the response by the recorded testimony of myriads, covering a period of over a third of a century. A course of the Bitters, begun in any stage of the affliction and persistently followed, will terminate in cure positive, not partial. The bitters restores tone to the epige-stric nerve, renews and purifies the fulcas exading from the collular tissue that act upon the food digestively, expels bile from the stomach and the blood, and promotes a regular habit of bedy. Maiaria, kidney complaint, nervousness, rheumatism and ne raigin give way to this medicine.

OLD ISAACS OUTWITTED.

How Two Sharpers Victimized a Hebrey Pawn-Broker.

A gentleman called in at the shop of Mr. Abaham Levi Isaaes, with a violincase under his arm. He purchased a neck-tie, for which he paid thirteen leave his box while hedid a few errands in the neighborhood. Mr. Isaacs had no objection.

"It is a violin," said the gentleman, 'which I prize very highly. It was given the by an old Italian who died at my father's house. I beg you will be careful of it. sir."

Mr. Isaacs promised, and the owner of

Where are the | shelf, and as no one was near to prevent him, the new-comer slipped around and opened the case, and took out the instrument -- a very dark, hued and ancientlooking one.

"Hallo!" cried Isaacs, when he heard the sound of the violin. "what for you touch dat. ch?' The stranger explained that he was a professor-that he was a leader of an orchestra—and that he could never see a violin without trying it. And then he drew the bow across the strings, playing injured tone, as he sat down hard on a a few passages of a fine old German

> "My soulf" he cried, after he had run his fingers over the instrument a while. "that is the best violin I ever saw There is not a better in England-a perfeetly genuine old Cremona. I will give you twenty dollars for it."

Isanes said it was not his. "I'll give you fifty-a hundred!"

Mr. Isaacs was forced to explain how the violin came to be left in his shop. The stranger had taken out his pocketbook and drawn forth a roll of banknotes. He put them back, remarking:

"I must have that violin if money will buy it. When the owner returns, will you ask him to wait for me? If he can drake, Dock, Juniper Berries and other weil not wait, ask him to meet me here at six o'clock. If he can not do that, tell | manner as to derive the full medicinal value of him to call at the office of the treasurer of the Academy of Music and inquire for the director of the orchestra. Will you do it?"

Isaacs said he would. "But," suggested the stranger, "you need not tell the man what I have said about his violin, nor what I have offered because he may have no idea of what a treasure he possesses. You will be careful and circumspect."

The stranger went away, and Abraham Levi Isaacs reflected. In the course of an hour, the owner of the violin returned, and asked for his box. But the "old clo" man had been captivated by the golden bait. What would the gentleman sell his violin for?

At first, the gentleman would not listen to the proposition; but after a ical of talk, he confessed that he was not himself a professor, and could not well afford to keep such a valuable instrument. He would sell it for fifty iollars-not a penny less. Mr. Isaacs paid the money, and beready to take any thing from two hunfred to two hundred and fifty from the lirector of the orchestra, as he might be

But the director did not come. At the and of a week, Isaacs carried the violin to a professional friend, and asked him what was its real value, before calling on the professor. "Five dollars, without the case!" Abraham Levi Isaacs was strongly of opinion that the gentleman who left the violin in his care was a swindler, that the director was a partner in the business, and that together they had made aim their visitim. That night old clothes went up ten per cent. - N. Y. Ledger.
