SOUTH SEA CUSTOMS.

Wrecked Sailors Feasted by Royalty. Drinking Kava with the Natives.

Even at this late period in the Nineteenth century, when the people are supposed to know something of almost every habitable spot upon the globe, they continually meet with something new in the habits and customs of races living in some remote part of the world. Members of the crew of the ship John Bryce, which was wrecked in the South Pacific, give a graphic account of the drinking of "kava" by the natives of the island upon which they landed after being in an open boat seven days. It was the island of Manus, located about 18 degrees south latitude and 176 degrees west longitude. There is only one white resident there—an Englishman.

After the arrival of the shipwrecked party King Malatua, who reigns over the little island, gave them a banquet, which is thus described by John Wilke, one of the crew:

His majesty issued an order to his subjects to bring in the material for the dinner, which they did. It was served in a large bamboo house at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, banana leaves being spread on the floor for a table cover. The king sat at the head with his chiefs on his right. Capt. Murphy was to occupy the seat to his left, but, as he was ill, the king's daughter took the seat. A crowd of natives were ranged around the walls of the house, while women and girls were singing and dancing on the outside for the amusement of the guests. The bill of fare consisted of raw fish, fish blood sauce, cocoanuts, cocoanut milk, fowls, roasted pig and sweet potatoes.

After the dinner two young girls were sent out to dig up some kava roots, and when they returned with the required quantity they were ushered into the banqueting hall. They washed the roots and then sat down in front of a large basin partly filled with water. Each maiden was provided with a sort of ladle, which was fastened under her chin by means of thongs passed over the head. A root was then taken by each young lady and the process of mastication commenced.

As they chewed the saliva ran out of each corner of their mouth and into the ladle prepared to receive it under their chin. As soon as it became full it was taken off and emptied into the basin. When the root was sufficiently chewed it also was spat into the basin. When all the reots had been treated in this manner the girls proceeded to rub the stuff they had chewed between their hands and wrung and squeezed the juice out of it, throwing the refuse away.

The liquid in the basin was then stirred up, cocoanuts shell cups were produced, and the decoction was handed to each of the guests by the ladies who had done the chewing. We were warned by the Englishman in an undertone that to refuse would give offense, so each gallant tar partook thereof with expressions and feelings akin to that of the small boy who was forced to swallow a dose of salts. It tasted and looked just like soapsuds, and another dose in my case would certainly have acted as an emetic. The natives are very fond of it and drink it readily. It has a most peculiar effect upon the human system.

You will see a ring of natives drinking kava, and apparently nothing the matter with them, each man talking and acting in a perfectly rational manner; but let one of them attempt to rise and you will notice the difference. He is drunk from his waist to his feet, while his upper story has not been affected at all.

When we had finished our meal the native men and women sat down, the festival being continued until 11 o'clock. After eight days on the island we were taken to Apia, Somoa, and there we shipped for home.—San Francisco Chronicle.

"Judge" Wise, of Virginia.

John S. Wise is a noted dog man—not a "Russian dog faced man," but a lover of and authority upon dogs. Nobody owning high bred dogs is quite satisfied with his possessions until they have the approval of Wise. A favorable decision at a bench show is not more satisfactory to dog owners than such a decision from Mr. Wise, and his work on dogs is a recognized authority. He has been president of the American Bench association and conducted the greatest dog tests, trials and shows in the country.

One day in Broadway, New York, when he was strolling with a friend, Col. Gordon, a young man stepped up to him and greeted him as "Judge Wise." He talked glibly, and John smelt bunco and wondered whether there was any hayseed in his hair.

Finally he said: "See here, I think I have seen you before, but I am not a judge and I never occupied any judicial position."

"Oh, I don't mean judge of law," was the reply. "Of course I know you are no judge of that. I mean judge of dogs."—Washington Post.

Baby Wit and Wisdom.

Reading the smart sayings of the smart children in your paper, of which I am a regular reader, I thought I might contribute a few of the smart sayings of our "Buckeye" youngsters of which I have personal knowledge. One of my friends teaches in one of the infant rooms. She asked the definition of the word "tiger." They all yelled in chorus: "A wild beast." She then asked: "What is a tigress?" But one boy ventured to hold up his hand. His answer was: "He looks like a tiger, but he's his wife." A few Sundays ago the word "mother-in-law" was in the Sunday school lesson. The infant class teacher asked if any one knew what the word meant. Little Frank at once answered: "Yes. A cross old woman." One of our neighbors was 71 years old Christmas day. He had sixty gentlemen friends to dinner. One of the party was speaking of it to a party of friends in my presence, when Little Nell, aged 7, said: "Papa, he might have asked you; he was at our funeral," her little brother having recently been buried.—Buckeye Girl in Chicago Herald.

A MERCHANT'S DECISION AFTER TRIAL.

Sierra Chemical Co.

GENTLEMEN: When I started in to give your Great Sierra Kidney and Liver Cure a trial, I supposed it was like all other advertised preparations—put up to make money and of no use. Now since I have taken it my decision is that it is the best remedy in the world for kidney and liver disorders. It has done me so much good that I will forever praise it and gladly recommend it to all suffering with general disorders of the body.

Very truly yours,
P. J. ADAMS,
Firm of Reynold & Adams, San Francisco, California.

A HAUNTED HOUSE.

This body of ours has been likened to a tenement. It often has a haunted apartment—the stomach. Seared by the eldrich sprite, dyspepsia, digestion flies and refuses to return. What can break the spell, what can raise the ban laid upon the unhappy organs? We answer unhesitatingly, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and we are warranted in the response by the recorded testimony of myriads, covering a period of over a third of a century. A course of the Bitters, begun in any stage of the affliction and persistently followed, will terminate in cure positive, not partial. The bitters restores tone to the epigastric nerve, renews and purifies the juices exuding from the cellular tissue that act upon the food digestively, expels bile from the stomach and the blood, and promotes a regular habit of body. Malaria, kidney complaint, nervousness, rheumatism and ne ralgia give way to this medicine.

Listeners are not after the good they will hear of themselves, but the bad they will bear of others.

Why She Tarried.

At a leading summer hotel during the past season Mrs. D. was among the last guests to leave, taking her departure only when, with the 1st of September, the closing of the hotels became imminent.

"Why is this thusly?" asked a friend. "I thought you were going to Bar Harbor for August!"

"Yes," said Mrs. D., "we did talk about it, but in the first place we were perfectly comfortable where we were, and in the second I noticed that everybody who left was duly picked to pieces by those who remained, so, like the dove in the fable, I staid to protect my reputation."—Philadelphia News

A Boom in Lots.

"I'm in on the boom," he said. He had been hovering around her for several months. "I'm in on the boom; I've got a lot."

"So have I," she said. "I've got a lot, too."

"But I haven't any sand."

"No, I don't think you have," she said.

There was a pause. It struck him the tone was meaningful, so he sidled up a little closer, and, taking her hand in a kind of bashful way, whispered:

"Say—s'posen—s'posen—we put our lots together."

And "love's first snowdrop" simply covered both lots.—San Francisco Chronicle

THE BEST EXTERNAL REMEDY.

S. J. Tidwell, Haley's, Marion county, Ala., writes:

"ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS are a most invaluable household remedy. They do all that is claimed for them. I sell many hundreds every year, and every day I hear of their curing coughs and colds, diseases of the spine, liver, and ague cake; in fact, there is no disease that can be reached by an external application that they do not cure."

THE VIRTUE OF MEDICINE IS TESTED BY ITS EFFECTS.

MODESTO, Cal., May 24, 1890.

Dr. J. Eugene Jordan, Seattle, Wash.

DEAR SIR: I hope you will not consider me tedious if I tell a little experience, such as may not have come under your observation. About fifteen years ago a bright red spot, about the size of a pea, came on one side of the end of my nose. It was a source of great annoyance to me and great anxiety to my friends, who feared the spot might be a cancer. It seemed strange such a thing would come on my face, for my health has always been good and I never had so much as a pimple on my skin. I did not know what to do for the trouble. There was a throbbing pain all the while, and last fall, when the cold weather set in, the spot became flaming red and hard, and remained so. It became very sore to the touch and hot. The pain was a throbbing, severe pain. Then I became truly alarmed, for the thing was becoming worse, and some time in February I remembered that you recommended M water for the eyes when they were inflamed; so I applied this to my nose one evening and was sure that with this one application the inflammation was lessened. I kept up the treatment a week, and my nose seemed well. I continued taking the medicine for six weeks, and at the end of that time the purple spot was entirely gone, and there is no trace of the thing left. The redness has also entirely disappeared. I could not be thankful enough that I had heard of your medicines and knew what to use. Respectfully,

MRS. J. PURVIS.

MR. JOHN W. FURBUSH,
An Army Veteran, OF WAKEFIELD,

who has probably suffered more than any man or woman in America to-day. Taken sick while in the Army, he has endured untold agonies since. Describing his first symptoms he said: "My head ached and my appetite was poor. I felt a faintness at the pit of the stomach, and bad taste in my mouth, while my skin was sometimes hot and sometimes cold. I next felt pains in my back and around the lower portion of my body, and noticed a peculiar odor and color in the water I passed, which was scanty at one time and free at others. Sometimes it pained me to void it, and again it was almost impossible to do so at all. Finally I began to pass clear blood accompanied with the greatest strain and agony."

No less than 20 eminent physicians attended Mr. Furbush at various times, but not one of them could help him. He was near death's door. And yet he says: "I am alive and well to-day, wholly through the wonderful power of Hunt's Remedy which took me from the verge of the grave."

TO LIVE LONG.

How to Prolong Life After Middle Age. Views of an Eminent London Physician, Whose Specialty is Diseases of the Aged.

John Gardner, M. D., is a London Physician who makes a specialty of the treatment of diseases of elderly persons. In a recent book upon this subject, Dr. Gardner says:

"A healthy and vigorous state of every part and every organ is essential to the health and well being of the whole system. 'To grow old gracefully,' is not the common lot of all. With advancing years come increased infirmities they are by no means inevitable, and their presence is due to the failure to keep up to their work the various organs of the body. The study of the body by scientists furnishes unquestionable evidence that the duration of human life may be prolonged to a hundred years."

Why, then, do so few live to that age; and why after middle life—and often before—is there so much suffering from nervousness, rheumatism, feebleness, lack of appetite, sleeplessness, and debility? Because long life or overwork has weakened the nervous system. Rev. T. Williston, the famous author of "Christ's Millenial Reign," when eighty four years old, suffered with indigestion and rheumatic affections. His attention was called fortunately to Paine's Celery Compound. A free use of that great medicine for the nerves cured him, and made a great improvement in his general health.

This grand discovery is an unequaled medicine for the aged. It produces life and energy and is a marvelous preserver of the fire and vigor of youth. There is nothing like it for strengthening the nerves, and curing the diseases to which old folks are specially subject. It is truly called invaluable by those who have made a special study of diseases of elderly people.
