Mo phy Great Satan.

In the autumn of 1861, Morphy, then on his way to the Confederate army near Manassas, was invited by the Rev. R. R. Harrison, of Richmond, to spend the evening with a number of other distinguished guests at his residence. After supper, while they were assembled in the parlors, attention was called to a colored engraving entitled "Jen d'Echecs," which was hanging in the room. It represented Satan, in style and dress after the German idea of Mephistopheles, engaged in a game of chess with a young man. The board lay on a tomb, and the guardian angel of the youth looked down with deep sadness and interest upon the position of the pieces on the board. The young man's pieces represented the manly virtues, and many of them had already been captured. Satan's pieces represented the tempting vices. The position of the pieces as shown in the engraving was one that had often been studied with care by the Richmond players, and the young man's game was regarded as hopeless. The position was set up in Morphy's presence, and he asked if the position was correct. After careful comparision of the position on the board and in the engraving, he was answered in the affirmative. Morphy then remarked, in his quiet but always dignified manner, that he believed he could take the young man's position and win the game. All those who knew anything of chess expressed surprise, but Morphy vindicated his belief in a short time. He took the young man's game and played against each gentleman in succession and won. The devil had no chance against the genius of Paul Morphy.—New Orleans Picayune.

Suggestive Hypnotism.

A lady boarded car 212, of the Franklin avenue line, recently, and sat directly opposite the stove. A gentleman was with her. After riding a block she told her escort that the heat of the car was unbearable and at her suggestion they moved nearer to the door. A passenger soon got on and the conductor coming in to collect his fare she asked him to open a ventilator. He did so, politely. Soon the lady rapped on the door with her umbrella.

"Please turn the damper in the stove!" said she.

"Certainly, madam," said the conductor, and the damper was turned.

In a few minutes the lady began fanning herself vigorously with a hymn book, and remarked that "Conductors didn't seem to have any judgment about heating cars."

At this juncture the conductor reentered the car for another fare and the lady said with asperity:

"Conductor, I wish you would leave that door open. The heat from that stove is positively depressing."

"I am sorry to say, madam, but there has been no fire in that stove today," said the conductor, and the thermometer instantly fell twenty degrees.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Sending a Shock.

Among certain eastern nations the Englishman is supposed, from the success with which he uses certain simple remedies, to be endowed with magic powers, as a "medicine man." It is not only the people classed as uncivilized, however, who regard medicine as a black art, which can do anything.

A woman recently visited the office of a physician who has become celebrated for his successful use of electricity in various diseases and inquired:

"If anybody had headaches in the back of their neck, and was so nervous they could fly, do you think your batteries would help 'em?"

"I might recommend electricity," said the doctor; "but I must know more about your symptoms."

"Bless you, they aren't my symptoms!"

"Then come another day with the patient."

"But I can't bring her."

"Why not?"

"Because she lives out west. I know you can telegraph that far, and I thought maybe you could set your batteries to work on her."—Youth's Companion.

Old Wines in Savannah.

Some of the oldest families here have Madeira nearly a century old. One gentleman has several lots of the famous All Saints' Madeira, imported in 1791 and 1793, the year of the great fire in Savannah. Two pipes imported that year, one for the great-grandfather of the late William Gibbons and one for the father of Nat Heyward, a prominent South Carolina planter. The night of the fire one pipe was left under the bluff by mistake, and the other was burned upon the bay. The pipe under the bluff was divided between Gibbons and Heyward as the only fair way of settling their loss. The gentleman who now has several lots of the wine bought it from Gibbons' and Heyward's descendants eighty years after its division. Then there is the famous Hunter wine, imported about the same time. Some of it is still in the hands of friends of the family. The late Mr. De Renne, who inherited some of this wine, was often offered $100 a bottle for it. One gentleman has over twenty lots imported from the old Madeira house of Newton Gordon from 1802 to 1830. Savannah was a large wine importing port a century ago.—Savannah (Ga.) News.

Notes About a Rich Man.

John Wanamaker is playfully spoken of as John Moneymaker in Philadelphia, but his life is not all devoted to the accumulation of wealth. Here are some authentic notes about him. His country place at Jenkintown is the apple of one of his eyes. His flowers, his cattle, and the beautifying of the place absorb him as completely when out of town as business does at the store. He entertains liberally, and there is a hail fellow freedom and jollity about him that are contagious. He has a splendid collection of roses and orchids, and his rhododendrons are famous in the neighborhood.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

AND STILL THEY COME.

SAN FRANCISCO, January 23, 1890.

Sierra Chemical Co.

GENTLEMEN: I have been a sufferer from kidney complaints for several years, and have used all kinds of medicine without any apparent results or relief until my friend advised me and told me of the wonderful cures The Great Sierra Kidney and Liver Cure was accomplishing. I was induced to buy one bottle but without much faith, and to my surprise after using that bottle I noticed such a great improvement that I kept on until I have now used three bottles, and can safely say that I am entirely cured and never felt better in my life. I wish to recommend this remedy to all sufferers from kidney and liver disorders, for it will positively do the work.

Very truly yours, L. H. COHN,

There is only one thing more bitter in life than being jilted in love, and that is a dose of quinine.

INFERNAL INGENUITY

Could scarcely devise more excruciating tortures than those of which you see the evidences in the face of a rheumatic or neuralgic sufferer. The agonies are the consequence of not checking a rheumatic or neuralgic attack at the outset. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has been found by skillful medical practitioners to possess not only remedial, but defensive efficacy, where those diseases exist, or a tendency to them is exhibited. Surely this puissant but safe botanic medicine, bearing, too, such high specific sanction, is better than the poisons often employed, but most unsafe, not only in continuance, but in isolated doses. The blood is depurated thoroughly from the rheumatic virus, and the nerves, slightly impurged upon, saved from ultimate and direful throes by this benison, saving medicine, which likewise exhibits marked efficacy for malaria, kidney complaints, dyspepsia, constipation and liver complaint.

Wanted—A job of work done on a public street without drawing a crowd to watch by the hour to see how the laborers are getting along.

A VALUABLE REMEDY.

Hon. Edmund L. Pitts, the late President of the New York State Senate, writes: "STATE OF NEW YORK, SENATE CHAMBER, ALBANY, March 11, 1886.

I have used ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS in my family for the past five years, and can truthfully say they are a valuable remedy and effect great cures. I would not be without them. I have in several instances given some to friends suffering with weak and lame backs, and they have invariably afforded certain and speedy relief. They cannot be too highly commended."

THE TAILOR'S COMMENT.

He Has to Credit His Customers to Keep the Trade. Which Is Hard to Get.

"Fine custom tailoring is not what it used to be," said a Brooklyn man in the business to an Eagle reporter, "and the big houses are just driving us to the wall. I suppose it is the same in everything else, but, of course, you know our trade is the first to suffer from competition of that kind."

"How is that?"

"I am surprised that you ask me such a question," replied the tailor, slightly elevating his eyebrows, "when you should know, if you do not, that we must get a large profit on a custom made suit of clothes to make any money. Why? Because there has been an unwritten law from time immemorial which allows a man to pay his tailor's bill last of all. Now, a person can't get credit to any amount in one of the big establishments. If he orders a suit at such a place he must leave a deposit, and the balance is demanded when the clothes are delivered. On the other hand, a tailor who has a small shop must cater to his customers by allowing credit. Now, in these times of sharp competition, high rents and heavy expenses for skilled labor, you will see that it takes the profit upon a great many suits of clothes to pay running expenses and lay up something for dull times. When there was less competition we could get along, but now, beside the big establishments where they can get up a suit of clothes for almost nothing, there are innumerable shops where they sell fashionable looking clothes—imitations of the clothes we keep, of course—for just about half the money we can sell the real goods for. In former years, the fine custom tailors and the ready made stores monopolized the business. Neither interfered with the trade of the other, and consequently we had a certain hold on our customers, who, in order to get new clothes of us, would pay their bills rather than be forced into buying ready made garments. Now they leave our bills unpaid and go to one of the cheap custom stores, pay cash for inferior goods, and then come back and tell us how exorbitant our prices are. Why, it's enough to drive a man crazy sometimes. Yes, the better class of small tailoring shops are being driven out of business, and it's too bad, for the establishments that are driving them out are doing a much inferior kind of work. The great object with them is to make up and sell fashionable goods at a low figure. Now, I will not say that the material they use is all shoddy—far from it. It is surprising for what a small sum they can sell really good clothes. How do they do it? Well, in the first place, they rely to a great degree upon transient trade. Secondly, the credit system is tabooed and they get cash for their goods. Thirdly, they pay the lowest wages possible to their help. Fourthly, they do not pretend to put the finish on their goods that a first class tailor does. A man argues in this way when he patronizes one of these shops: He says to himself: 'I have been paying $16 for trousers, while here is a man who says he can get me up a pair equally good for $8. I know that he can't do it, but I also know that for fit and appearance his $8 trousers will for a considerable time be as good as my $16 pair, consequently I will buy the $8 ones and when they are worn out I can get another pair, paying for both pairs what I would ordinarily pay for one.' Now, you see, if his argument is a good one he would be very foolish if he did not take advantage of the cheaper man. After all," concluded the tailor, sighing, "if it weren't that we were expected to give such long credit I don't know that we would be any worse off than our neighbors. That is what is killing us."—Brooklyn Eagle.

PRESS INDORSEMENTS FOR DRS. DARRIN.

It has been rumored that the well known specialists in medicine, the Drs. Darrin, have given up practice here. This is a mistake; but one of them has left, he having gone to make further investigation of surgery in London and Paris hospitals. The balance of the corps have invested largely in property throughout the Northwest, and will remain here permanently.—Mercury, June 28.

What the "Welcome" Has to Say.

The success with which the Drs. Darrin have met since coming to Portland three years ago has been phenomenal. Judging from the record of remarkable cures effected by them and the immense patronage they enjoy, the gentlemen will have to make up their minds to become permanent locators in the city.—Welcome, June 28.

THE VIRTUE OF MEDICINE IS TESTED BY ITS EFFECTS.

MODESTO, Cal., May 24, 1890.

Dr. J. Eugene Jordan, Seattle, Wash.

DEAR SIR: I hope you will not consider me tedious if I tell a little experience, such as may not have come under your observation. About fifteen years ago a bright red spot, about the size of a pea, came on one side of the end of my nose. It was a source of great annoyance to me and great anxiety to my friends, who feared the spot might be a cancer. It seemed strange such a thing would come on my face, for my health has always been good and I never had so much as a pimple on my skin. I did not know what to do for the trouble. There was a throbbing pain all the while, and last fall, when the cold weather set in, the spot became flaming red and hard, and remained so. It became very sore to the touch and hot. The pain was a throbbing, severe pain. Then I became truly alarmed, for the thing was becoming worse, and some time in February I remembered that you recommended M water for the eyes when they were inflamed; so I applied this to my nose one evening and was sure that with this one application the inflammation was lessened. I kept up the treatment a week, and my nose seemed well. I continued taking the medicine for six weeks, and at the end of that time the purple spot was entirely gone, and there is no trace of the thing left. The redness has also entirely disappeared. I could not be thankful enough that I had heard of your medicines and knew what to use. Respectfully,

MRS. J. PURVIS.

Scrofula Humor
In the Eyes

"Our little girl, 19 months old, was troubled with scrofula sores. Her eyes were in a terrible condition, and her nose all covered with scab. Physicians said they could not cure her. We commenced giving her Hood's Sarsaparilla, and now, after using two bottles in the past three months, her face and eyes are clear of the sores, and her appetite has returned. We feel very thankful for finding so valuable a medicine as Hood's Sarsaparilla to save our child."—J. A. GREY, 433 Miner avenue, Stockton, Cal.

On the Face

"Last December I was afflicted with scrofulous sores on the left side of my face and around my right ear, and was obliged to leave work. Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended, and after taking less than two bottles all the sores disappeared."—JOSEPH V. A. FRATES, 226 Hollis street, Oakland, Cal.

A HOUSEKEEPER'S HEAVEN.

The pleasant prediction is made that drudgery will be abolished from the household and the occupation of the domestic servant will be gone.

Valuable Advice for the Present Day.

Mrs. Helen E. Sterrett, in a recent number of the Forum, contributes an article entitled "Housekeeping in the Future." In it she tells how in a few years electricity will supply light for the home, the family cooking and washing will be done outside, and there will be so little work in the household that the occupation of the domestic servant will be gone.

But Mrs. Sterrett's article is simply a prediction, and has no more than a passing interest for the ladies who live in 1890. Their social and household cares are straining their delicate, nervous system, and the result is terrible. Headaches, backaches, and womanly ills are growing alarmingly common. Many of them find that memory is failing; they are unable to recall the names of friends or tell whether they have performed some of their usual household duties.

Their nerves are in such a condition that very slight causes, or perhaps no cause at all, may irritate them. Life grows to be a burden. There is no need for despair, but there is great need of caution. Their nerves should be built up, life fortified, and brain restored with that remarkable preparation, Paine's Celery Compound. Instead of the depressed and languid feelings, after the Compound has been used, they will feel active, vigorous, and happy. To those who are weak and failing, and desire health and happiness instead of illness and misery, we earnestly urge that they act upon this advice.
