Written for THE SCOUT.
DISQUIETUDE.

Oh who can see through the mist of years
What all our hopes may be?
Will Time's soft hand brush away our fears
And harp us mirth for the hidden tears,
And for sorrow trade us grief?

Oh who can trace the delicate links
Of Life's slow moving chain?
His heart's world grow sick at the unknown
A brinks
That its way would lead him, and me-thinks
His eyes would turn back in pain!

And who can count, through the showers
And sun
The rocks and reefs in our way?
What storms will arise e'er Life be done?
Shall we win or lose in the heats we run?
Can anyone guess, I pray?

And is it worth while that we strain our eyes
Through the dim mists of today,
To catch faint glimpses of Paradise,
And hope for something beyond the skies?
For hope was born to decay!

Is it worth while that we sow and reap
Through the chilling hours of rain?
For it comes to naught, the slow years
creep,
And all of us pass to that unknown sleep
In peace, tumult or pain!

And is it worth while that we watch and wait
For our ships to come in from sea?
There are hills to climb, and in feeble gait
We will mark our footsteps, soon or late;
Move on while thy step is free!

There are clouds that hang from hill to hill,
Like spirits' breath on wrong;
Do they loom for our welfare good or ill?
Is there light on the horizon glittering still?
Do they speak for our sorrow or song?

Shall we spend our days while the ages
creep,
In remembering happier things?
For life, they say, is a little sleep,
Its pains are many, its sorrow deep,
And sharp are the stones and stings.

Is it worth while that we lift our hand
To break another's peace?
Let us stretch a rainbow down the land,
Let us trace sweet songs in Life's gold sand,
And bid all tumult cease!
—HEAT W. HUFFMAN.

Matters of Interest Reported by Our Regular Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 14, 1890.

EDITOR OREGON SCOUT:—

Mr. Blaine is the man to whom the republicans are turning in their hour of defeat, and men who a few months ago pushed his reciprocity ideas and accused the Secretary of State of having become visionary, are now saying that there is only one man who can bring the republican party together in fighting shape in 1892, and his name is Blaine. But a few of Speaker Reed's friends are trying to stem the tide by charging the blame for the democratic victory to Mr. Blaine's opposition to the McKinley tariff bill. It would be very interesting to know just what Mr. Blaine thinks of the whole business, but unfortunately he will not talk for publication. When asked his opinion of the McKinley bill he replied with a smile: "There was a trial down in Maine some years ago, and an old farmer was summoned to testify regarding the character of the defendant. "Do you know the defendant?" asked one of the counsel.

"Yes, sir."
"What is his character?"
"Well, sir, I have known the defendant forty years, and I have been studying him forty years, and my opinion of him now is the same as it was on the first day I met him."
The political magnates of both parties who are at present in Washington have been greatly disturbed by the report that the Farmers' Alliance would run a Presidential ticket in 1892, and that steps are being taken which would probably result in that ticket receiving the support of organized labor throughout the country. If it is possible to combine the votes of organized labor with those of the Farmers' Alliance, it is high time that the leaders of the old parties were getting disturbed. It is very safe to predict that the republican and democratic parties will be represented at the annual convention of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, which is to meet at Ocala, Florida, December 2, by some of their closest observers, as both parties are anxious to know what that organization proposes to do two years hence, and something may be picked up by mixing with the delegates of the thirty-five States that are to be represented in that convention.

Senator Spooner has arrived here, and a great many people believe that Mr. Harrison sent for him to tender him the vacant seat on the Supreme Court bench. When asked if there was any probability of his succeeding the late Justice Miller, Mr. Spooner evaded the question by replying that he had not given the matter a thought. I don't know how the nomination of Senator Spooner to this position would strike the country, outside of Washington, but it would certainly be well received here by everybody. Conservative democrats deprecate the undue haste in opening the cam-

THE FARMERS IN NEED OF RAIN.

Local Sportsmen—The Celebrated Water—Personal Mention.

Mrs. Josie Doney, also Mr. and Mrs. James Masterson, of Wallowa county, paid our burg a call this week.

Mr. Clarence Austin, formerly of the Cove, was married at Alder recently to a Miss Conley.

Thanksgiving services will be held at the Episcopal church Thursday at 11 a. m. A discourse will be read by Mrs. Lammie.

Testimony in the much written and talked about water case, French vs. Bloom, will be resumed this morning before Referee Slater.

The farmers are longing for a good soaking rain. At present the ground is entirely too dry to be stirred advantageously with the plow.

Bishop Morris and wife started for their home in Portland, Wednesday. The bishop will hold Thanksgiving services in Pendleton on his way.

Mr. George Steward started for a visit to his old home in Ohio last Thursday. He left his family in Cove and expects to return before spring.

Several of our local sports were out Monday in quest of Thanksgiving fowls. They made a good bag of mallards, geese and prairie chickens.

Mr. S. A. Bridges, of Ft. Atkinson, Wis., is in Cove on a visit to his son Guy Bridges and other relatives. He will probably remain until after the holidays.

The revival at the Morrison church is being carried on by the Rev. Mr. Trumbley. Much interest is being manifested and not a few are made to see the error of their way.

Students are entering Ascension school almost daily and it is likely that an additional teacher will have to be engaged soon. One of the advantages of the institution is its valuable library of books of reference and miscellaneous literature, which Bishop Morris secured at the beginning of the school, and the same still remains for the benefit of the pupils. Among these are:

- Appleton's New American Cyclopaedia, 16 vols.
- Johnson's New Universal Encyclopaedia, 25 vols.
- Ridpath's history of the World, 3 vols.
- Webster's Unabridged Dictionary.
- Paris Universal Exposition, 5 vols.
- Works of Josephus, 4 vols.
- The Living Age, 40 bound vols.
- Scribner's Monthly, 17 bound vols.
- Miss Young's Monthly Packet, 53 vols.
- Bayard Taylor's Works, 15 vols.
- Chamber's Miscellany, 10 vols.
- Dr. Richard Newton's Works, 18 vols.
- McCauley's History of England, 4 vols.
- Gibbon's Roman History, 4 vols.
- Addison's Spectator, 4 vols.
- McCauley's Essays, 3 vols.
- Phillip's English Literature, 2 vols.
- Hannah Moore's Works, 2 vols.
- Valuable Congressional Records, 20 vols.

The last mentioned being the gift of Hon. James H. Slater, of La Grande. Besides the foregoing there are several hundred volumes of well selected fiction, poetry, history, general literature, devotional and theological works. We think there are few schools in this new country that can provide their pupils with a larger or better selected library.

A NEIGHBORING exchange wants to know what makes one town grow into a city while others with good locations remain villages. It is because in the one case there are men of push and energy who are not afraid to spend their time and money to boom their town. They erect substantial buildings, organize stock companies and establish factories and secure railroads, work for public improvements and use every means in their power to induce people to locate in their city; they send newspapers and circulars to every acquaintance whom they think can be induced to visit their place; then the attractions are shown to him, and he is treated with so much kindness that he falls in love with the city at once. A town only succeeds when it begins to work for itself.

Attention is called to Mrs. L. B. Rinehart's new advertisement in this issue. Her stock of millinery is being received and is more varied than any before. Dressmaking and trimming done promptly and perfect work guaranteed. Ladies call and see the new goods. 11-20-13

Visiting cards, wedding cards and ball programmes, neatly executed at the Scout job office.
