Death of Bradlaugh.

EDITOR OREGON SCOUT :--

In the death of Charles Bradlaugh, which occurred on the 30th of January last., England lost her leading liberal. For eleven years he has been in parliament, and his atheism has given that august body much disquietude. He had never swerved from the line of duty, but Protestant England saw in his elevating doctrine the downfall of many a pet idea. They in power saw his new era of free thought gaining at astonishing rates. It was directed at all the pernicious principles that hold men in servitude. It was to farther, cut the fetters from many a wrist and place the tenant on equal grounds with his lord. It aimed at oppression. It was to drive from the land all bondage and make the peasant one of society. In 1868 Mr. Bradlaugh was defeated in the election, and in 1873 he came to America on a lecturing tour. He lectured nearly exclusively on the English question, and as he was so fair and just in his principles and in his loyalty to England so zealous, when he returned home the English people looked at the Infidel in a newer view. They found much to admire in his manly defense of Britain, and his logical theories seemed prophesies that promised blessings to the oppressed. The tumult of religion was stirred. Protestantism boiled high. The election of 1880 came on, and Bradlaugh was chosen from Northampton as member of parliament, but there were strong objections to his taking his seat, on grounds that he, being an atheist, could not take the required oath. He was, however, seated on affirmation, and the first outspoken Infidel held a seat the supreme tribunal of Great Britam! How liberals shouted in enthusiasm till Albion rang with the music of united voices from shore to shore ! A victory over the tyranny that had ground the common people for ages. The first great stride that liberalism had madeeven in the nineteenth century. An honorable, open, fair trial of its principles had at last convinced the people that it was no monster bent on the destruction of the good and glorious things of civilization. It had some of human propensity in its make-up. The demon was not there that shuddering Christianity expected to behold. There was in Bradlaugh's atheism much that would add to the purity of nal gain. a Christian's life There were princi-

But in this later day the great man must be the charitable man. To some the death of an Infidel appears to be an awful ordeal. No hope, they say, no refuge, nor haven in sight. No glorious ressurection of the soul, no rapturous meeting beyond the shadow of the tomb, no talents to deliver up to the maker, no songs to Wallace; dismissed. chant, no harp to twang, no angel fingers to clasp and kiss.

To those who are Christians, the Infidel's death has horrid aspects. The darkness and terror of chaos spreads before them, the awful abyss without depth, without width. No God to lift him up through the tumult of death to everlasting peace! No Savior to term, stand as council for him in the supreme court of heaven. The grave, no

But to the true Infidel it presents no such scenes. The last parting with loved ones is a sad rite, but when the remembrances of all past goodness and by-gone kindness comes up in review, it is a happy moment. The consciousness that in all the past you have aimed at the right, and aimed at the justice of all things, is enough to quiet all ruffles that stir life's last moments. The faultless love you have borne your referee. family and the generous spirit you have exhibited to your fellow man is satisfaction to the soul. When no dark clouds of ills and aching you have caused to others hovers over your death bed-when the conscience is free, and all life's deeds bear well on your mind, it is no pain to die-even though you have no hope beyond. It is chauge-immutable change! Fate designs it so. Who can question whether its object is not the bettering of us all?

A QUAKER'S DOZEN.

Richard Stege, the well known propriator of the Quaker Dairy, No. 30 Ellis St., San Francisco, last week sent the following letter to the Edwin W. Joy Co.

"My family have been taking Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla now for months with splendid results. Our experience has been that after taking it regularly for a short time and getting the system started right. an occasional dose thereafter keeps the systen in perfect condition. A peculiarity of your vegetable compound inexplicable to me is, that it does not lose its effect, but seems to accomplish the same results continually. As a liver and howel regulator and corrective it is perfection. We would not be without it in our house. In fact I have just bought a dozen bottles to get the reduced price."

A. M. Rowe, of 523 Jones street, S. F., also writes that it has been his habit for years to awake in the mornings with a headache and an exhausted feeling; but since the first bottle he has had no return of his old time debilitating headaches.

Drop in and be sociable. Fine billiard

In politics he saw corruption, and found in the aristocracy of England much that was oppressive to the common people. He saw in the religion of today much that should have died out in ages past. Its weak foundation he saw quivering before the mighty rush of the ninetcenth century. Some of its main stays he found wanting in the true principles of manhood-in the character that should set an example, he saw many faults. It was merit with him, not popularity. It was true worth and not gilt.

And now, just as he was gaining a prominence that was enviable, he lays down the flag and offers up his account. Life has ended when its sun was at its highest noon! The strife and the struggle is done. The tireless brain is at rest at last, and the warm heart is the pulseless clod of clay. The virtues and the faults are left alone as the sole testators to his worth. The day is fast approaching when parliament will contain many more just such noble, big sould men. The dawn of the twontieth century is just streaking with a grand lustre in the east, and noble old Victor Hugo says the twentieth century will be happy! Man in his advance is becoming more liberal. The heart is taking to its store of tenderness one more attribute-charity, costs.
