

THE ALLIANCE AND ITS PURPOSES.

Extracts from the Speech of Col. Livingston, Delivered in the House of Representatives, Ga., Sept. 18th.

Now, let us come down to a discussion of this case like intelligent men, not like foolish men and children, continued Colonel Livingston. Let us take and analyze these questions and say this won't do, but that will; and when we get all the bad out and the good in we will take the good and lump it together and get a platform that everybody can stand on—lawyer, farmer, everybody—and we will whip this fight. [Great applause.] Harmony for whom? Harmony for all classes of people. That is what I mean. Black and white? Yes. We do not want any destruction. We do not want any torches or pistols or bowie knives. We want peace. We want abundance. We want prosperity in the towns and in the fields; that is what the alliance is fighting for. You stop fighting and see how quick we will get there. [Applause.] We have got to settle that.

Before I discuss this question you must agree with me. You say yes, I want harmony. There is but one other thing I can say before we discuss it. Upon what basis? I am willing for you to name it. I take it for granted that we will agree about it. I will name it—"Equal rights for all, and special privileges to none." Will that do? That is democracy. That is our motto, too. Do you want to harmonize on that? If so, we will shake hands with you just as certain as God rules in this world. We will do it cheerfully—every merchant, every lawyer, every railroad man, and every citizen of Georgia—"Equal rights to all, special privileges to none." Can we harmonize on that? If not, stand up. I want to see one low down mean man. I want to see one man too mean to harmonize on that platform. [Applause.] Barnum is dead, but we will get up another show to put him in. Where is the man so mean who is not willing to harmonize upon that basis, "Equal rights to all, special privileges to none." In other words, live and let live. There are men too mean to do it, but they are not in this house. They are not here, but once in a while you can come across them in the world and they are hard cases, and if they get to fooling with you and with me—go to talking democracy—I am in favor of opening my fingers wide and letting them slip through. We do not want them in the democratic party, or the alliance either. A man that is an alliance man, purely for himself, for selfish purposes, we unload him quick. If we have to tote him, we tote him like a man holding a bag of sand with a hole in it, wishing to God it would run faster and faster every minute to get rid of the burden.

Cannot cities, towns, merchants, farmers and lawyers unite? Can they not unite on this? Do you not want to harmonize on that broad basis, that God-given basis, that democratic basis, that alliance basis—"equal rights to all and special privileges to none?" Why do we want to harmonize on that basis? For what purpose? To correct the evils from which we all suffer. Every man in Georgia suffers from these evils more or less. You may not so much as the family that lives way over at the foot of the mountain, that never saw a postoffice or a town. You cannot suffer so much, but you suffer your part of it. Will you not come with me and harmonize on this basis; harmonize for this purpose to correct the evils of government that afflict us, and that bear us down and prevent universal prosperity as well as individual prosperity?

My effort has been to call the attention of the people to these evils to keep them from being side-tracked. It is the hardest work I ever tried to do since I was born in the world, and some of the newspapers give me a great deal of trouble in that line. My whole purpose has been to call the attention of the people to these evils and get the people to stand committed to a correction of these evils, not by one party or by another. No living man ever heard me say so. I have never gone out in the streets nor highways nor hedges and said the republican party or the democratic party or the third party. That is none of my business. My business is to educate the people to the evils, and when they go to the polls, in their respective parties, it is presumed they will exercise the franchise properly. [Applause.]

Oh, yes, you will say; but the trouble is there are so many side-tracks. There is the railroad side-track; there is the third party side-track and I hear a little bickering and strife about the exchange. That is a sidetrack. A newspaper over here, called The Southern Alliance Farmer, has undertaken to make that a sidetrack, and everything that the human mind and heart could conceive of they have brought into this contest of ours and undertaken to divert and sidetrack us and switch us into a stagnant pond and let us die a natural death by stagnation. [Laughter.] Thank God, they haven't done it yet, for you cannot do it on the outside. You join us and learn our organization and learn our methods, and you will know how to succeed a little better than in some localities, for we have got men drilled at the top of the hill ready to receive the goods in and help to pull the load up.

WHAT CAUSES THIRD PARTIES.

Now, listen. The opposition and abuse that the alliance people have met has had more to do with the third party theory and its excitement than all the other causes combined. Is there anybody here tonight really in favor of a third party? Let me tell you what to do. Stop the abuse of the leaders of the alliance. Stop snubbing their sub-treasury and calling it nonsense, and snubbing the free coinage plank and calling it a craze. You can help build a third party mighty fast on that line. Some of you have been doing it, and you have been blowing a bigger democratic horn than anybody else while you are at it, too. [Applause.] Some men in Georgia have done more to build up a third party than all the alliance combined from one side of this land to the other. [Applause.] And they are men who never met an alliance proposition or an alliance man and gave him a word of sympathy; but has been bitter denunciation from first to last and all the time. That is what is doing it, and yet they say, "I think I can smell a little of Mrs. Lease and Jerry Simpson's clothes on him." [Laughter.] I think you have been riding in a palace car with Mr. Simpson and Mr. Weaver—that makes him undemocratic. [Renewed laughter.]

THE BANKING SYSTEM.

Let us discuss this banking system a little bit. The national banking system of this country has displaced all other banks. I wish the newspaper men would get this proposition down clear. I think it will teach them something. I can remember the time, and so can all democrats and alliance men in this house tonight, when if a man wanted money in Georgia he got it in Georgia, and it was Georgia money. The old Georgia railroad bank, and all those other good and noble institutions we used to draw money out of, had a local issue, so the local currency staid at home and was used for home purposes. This national banking system has displaced all that currency. We have got no Georgia currency, we have got no home currency, and consequently the local enterprises must either go, or they are dependent upon the currency to be furnished by foreigners; and they are not always in love with us, especially those who hold the pucker-strings to the treasury—they are not in love with us. That is one evil of the national banking system.

Again, under this system only national banks can issue currency, and they are limiting it to government bonds. My dear friends, did you ever think of that? I want to repeat it, that under this present national banking system of ours only national banks can issue currency, and they are limited to government bonds, and if the south has the bonds, or is able to buy them, we can do a good business at the banking system; but if she cannot command them when they are at a low price, we cannot do much at the banking system. We have not done much since the war, and we cannot. Thus the government not only loans its credit to national banks, but it deprives them from issuing currency in pursuance of the laws of supply and demand to meet the necessities of commerce by limiting them to bonds. In other words, I mean this: If the bonds that are accessible to men who hold the money, to men who have the money and are disposed to bank on them, if the bonds are sufficient and accessible, then banking can be commensurate with the business of the country; otherwise not. The whole business of the country must be measured by the amount of available bonds upon which you can bank. There never was a more serious mistake made by a government since the world began than this simple fact that I have stated to you. The idea of putting the destiny of this great people upon the precarious fact that the bonds may be had or may not, is simply an outrage. That is all there is about it. Now, while this unnatural condition existed, the government turned on another screw by collecting a large surplus by unjust taxation levied upon the necessities of the poor, and used this very surplus to buy its bonds at a high premium. Think of it! When bonds are scarce and high, therefore making banking capital scarce and high! Still the government is not satisfied with that, but they make a turn on this awful screw, cutting like a two-edged sword both ways, by taxing the necessities of the poor until they accumulate a large surplus, and then buy up these bonds at high premiums. [Applause.]

THE EXAMINER.

Ever since the establishment of the first paper on the bay of San Francisco, which we believe was the "Alta," removed from Monterey in 1829; the inhabitants of the Coast generally have been interested in the news from San Francisco. The "Alta," like many other pioneers of '49, has succumbed to the inevitable and gone over to the great majority, and like other pioneers, has been succeeded by younger generations. The "Examiner" has taken perhaps the most prominent place in the newspaper field of late years, and its Weekly edition is very generally taken by those who want an interesting and reliable paper published at "The Bay." Everyone is familiar with the Premium Offers made by Mr. Hearst, the "Examiner's" enterprising publisher, and it is only necessary to say that this year the aggregate value of the premiums—of which there are 5,000—is $150,000, which are distributed among all the subscribers to the paper. In addition to these premiums, which range in value from 50 cents to $7,000, every subscriber receives one of the four great premium pictures, which will be mailed to him in a tube direct from the "Examiner" office as soon as the subscription is received:

"The Retreat from Moscow," by Meissonier. "The Roman Chariot Race," by A. Wagner.

Each of these pictures is 21x28 inches, and they are elegantly reproduced in fine style, showing every tint and color of the great originals, either one of which could not be purchased for $100,000.

"Women and Children First," by C. Napier Hemy "Christ Leaving the Pratorium," by Gustave Doré

Each of these pictures is reproduced in photographic size 21x28, and is eminently fitted for framing, and will adorn the walls of the most refined home.

The subscription price of the "Weekly Examiner" is $1.50, and subscriptions may be sent either direct to W. K. Hearst, Publisher, San Francisco, through the Local Agent of the "Examiner" or the Postmaster.

The Examiner and Scout will both be sent to any address on receipt of $2.75 cash in advance. Each subscriber will also have his choice of the above pictures and a chance in the Examiner's grand drawing. Call at The Scout office and subscribe.

THE CRY OF MILLIONS!

OH, MY BACK! STOP IT NOW! SOON IT WILL BE TOO LATE. I have been troubled many years with disease of the kidneys and have tried various different remedies and have sought aid from different physicians without relief. About three years ago I was attacked by a very violent attack that almost prostrated me. I was so much afflicted that I was unable to get up alone, or to put on my clothes, when kind Providence sent me the OREGON SCOUT. I immediately commenced using the tea, and in a few days I had an almost complete cure, and to the astonishment of all the guests at the hotel, in a few days I was happy to state that I was a free man. I will recommend the tea to all patients as I have been.
