Scenes and Incidents in the Far-Off Land.

The Ruined City of Panama.

An Interesting Page of History, in the part of the world, the Capital of Panama.

The following interesting letter written for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch by Mr. James H. Moore, reporter of the American legation in Panama, will be read with great interest by all who are interested in the history of the place:

There is one fact which all travelers must notice in the district of Panama, and that is the number of species of fruit which grow in the country. It is a very different place from the United States in this respect. The climate is very similar, but the soil is much richer.

The writer says that he has seen a number of trees in the region which produce all kinds of fruits, including bananas, plantains, and avocados.

Another interesting fact is the great number of birds which are found in the region. The writer has seen many different species, including parrots, herons, and egrets.

The writer also describes the great variety of flowers which grow in the region, including orchids, hibiscus, and roses.

The writer concludes his letter by saying that the region of Panama is one of the most interesting in the world, and that he hopes to return there soon to explore it further.

The writer's letter is a valuable addition to the knowledge of the region, and will be read with great interest by all who are interested in the history of the place.
