

The Oregon Scout.

THURSDAY, DEC. 31, 1891

THE VALE OF GRANDE RONDE.

[Written for THE SCOUT.]

Of heart the Andes, and heart of the Alps,
All ye loved Vale, that in this world abide—
There's a heart in the west that will rival your best—
For health, wealth and beauty, the Vale of Grande Ronde.

I stand on a height overlooking the Vale—
A plateau beside me who told me this tale—
He said "Come and see the other cause Delving back the strata for o'er mountain and plain."

"They poised on the Vale in its emerald sheen,
The forest and brightened the Tribe e'er had seen—
The long shining grass o'er meadow and lea Rolled in the soft breeze like a wave on the sea."

"The antelope, elk, sheep, bison and deer,
Mink, otter and beaver by thousands were here,
The wild-fowl by millions swarmed over each dale—
And they cried—'Low-en-loo'-the shining grass Vale."

Years after the Voyagers from Ottawa came,
They set its bright river debouch on the plain—Bridging a bend to the lower, the shrub and the tree—
Then make a grand sweep on its march to the sea.

Its pure mountain streams shone bright on the seine,
Fringed by long ribbons of dark olive green—
And they cried—"Behold regard!"—tis the fairest valley land.
Each wild Trapper's heart with joy gave a bound—
And they named the green jewel the Vale of Grande Ronde.

Thus spoke the bold mountains that tower in the east:
Dark spirits of earth from the highest to least Come spend your wild rage on our summits of snow,
To the heart of our highlands you never must go.

Come Storm King and rage with your hail, rain and snow,
From Tacoma's broad base to far Idaho—Ye red forked lightnings come give us your shocks,
Play o'er our pale faces, gleam down our gray locks.

Ye deep rolling thunders pile mountains of snow
From steep, dizzy heights to our glens far below—Ye old graveling Gnomes in the caverns of earth
Your trembling, earth-shaking dynamics bring forth.

When urgently pressed we may move at your quest—
And bow each proud crest to your forces below—
To the heart of our highlands you never shall go.

Ye dark rolling winds that are bred on the plains—
Ye shatter weak man and his puny domains—
Come try our bold sides all beaten and lame, We'll turn you back to the land whence you came.

You can range at the east and roam to the fro,
To the heart of our highlands you never must go.

Come on ground disease from dark river and fen,
Ye rabbits of beasts and ye favers of men.
Come all ye dark clouds of old Pharaoh's pests,
Mere he and fromite come on with the rest.

Pass o'er if you will, there's nothing to dread,
Eye you reach our fair vale your foreaces dead.
The ozone that distills from her ever green hills,
Bacteria and vermin, all, instantly kill—
You can range over the plain and the vales far below—
To the heart of our highlands you never shall go.

But O! for the genius, the spirit and power
To born the fair Vale in her patient home—
With the sun that shines upon her blue hills
And a silver line cloud each bright globule till Every drop seems a sphere of pure silver or gold.
The emblem of wealth her Blue mountains hold.

The mists and mists her granites enfold,
Look around every leaf, blade, hilltop and flower
Is a rainbow of light in that magic hour—
The sky still unclouded over the scene,
But where's his dark prime and his shadowy wing?

I heard a harsh voice as he cleaved through the air,
Saw a halo of light—no Heaven was there.

A dull, crusty lout came shambling by,
Hunting hideousness, his eyes and ly.
He said, "I'll those planning, vicious relations are gone."
I never smote a hand on a horn."

Yet the vale for a time did illumine that dull which
Till he glowed on my sight like a spirit of light.
But that bright point of beauty never could last
And called away as the day light passed.

Pharaoh—come from you ten, dark river or mire,
Are you weary in spirit, mind, body or heart?
Has the day its day and its sultrying night?
Unstring every nerve and band—her delight?

Lie down—take your rest—the vale guards her gracious—
The fays of her dells and the nymphs of her streams—

Will you now give your slumbers and guide to bright dreams.

Did you come for a day?—much longer you'll stay,
While the light laughing moments go dancing away—

Go seek the layed vale in this green world so fair
Where the bright waters meet to the Vale of Grande Ronde.

Search the farthest range and the isles of the sea
For the fairest and highest, wherever it be,
I'll rival its splendors, wherever its found,
In this blue mountain beauty—the Vale of Grande Ronde.

—E. C. BRAINARD.

CONTENTMENT.

[Written for THE SCOUT.]

There is no wave on air! Life's boundless ocean
That dashes her-swepting my boat tonight.
The sea is still, where once there was commotion,
Where there were clouds, the sky is proudly bright.

The winds that sweep life's plain with desolation
With golden wings are paraded thru the mist.
Remote comes not, nor art, nor banishment,
Taking the purest realm by Love to last.

The lovesick blots have fled to live broken
And myriad stings shed lustre on the plain
The wailed gloom by thunderous Joy are shorn.

And solaced Hope has shed her sorrowful chain,
Look up, O life, and with clearer vision!
There is a path which leads to boundless height
It's life, it's art, with a flying procession,
Its streamers flashing in truer, fairer light.

Build them, O Hope! the golden path's ascension
Of deeds and thoughts from life's exhaustless

Build them of things which proud men scorn to see—

For his last truth with soul, is still divine.

Build them, O Fair! a grand, eternal mansion—Light it with fires which outwings Love forevermore.

Build it mid wide for in the soul's expansion,
We count our gains by numberless humankind.

—BERTHA WILSON HUFFMAN.

UNION BILLIARD HALL.

This place of amusement was opened to the public a few months ago in the restaurant building opposite the Centennial hotel, by Messrs. Kelsay & Squires, but has since changed to Squires & Yowell, Mr. Kelsay having sold his interest to Gay Yowell.
Messrs. Squires & Yowell carry a fine stock of confectionery, cigars and all kinds of mineral water drinks, nothing of an intoxicating nature being sold.
They have a club room in the rear filled with billiard, pool and card tables for the accommodation of customers, which is quite a place of resort.

We Carry a Fine Stock of WAGONS, HACKS, BUGGIES, and ROAD CARTS,

A WONDERFUL PYRAMID.

The Best is the Cheapest.

Quality, not Quantity, Tells.

J. I. CASE'S FULL LINE of PLOWS.

SULKY, WALKING,
GANG.

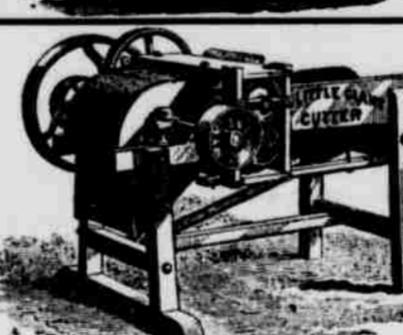

Hoosier Drill Co's Celebrated

Press Drills, Hoe Drills, Seeders.

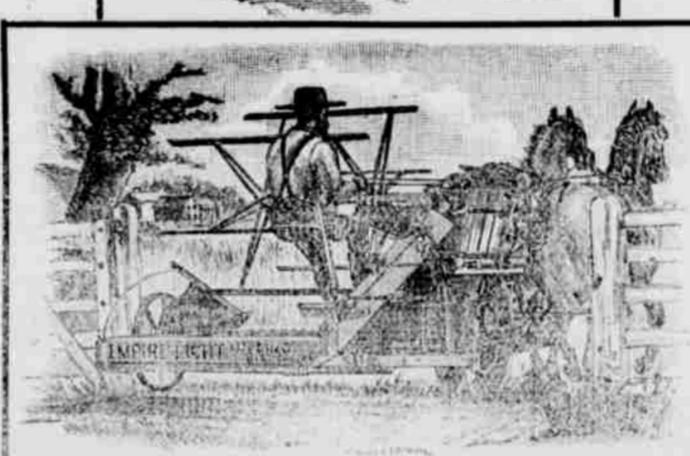

ROSS

FEED
CUTTERS,

BEST IN THE WORLD.

EMPIRE CUTTING TOOLS.

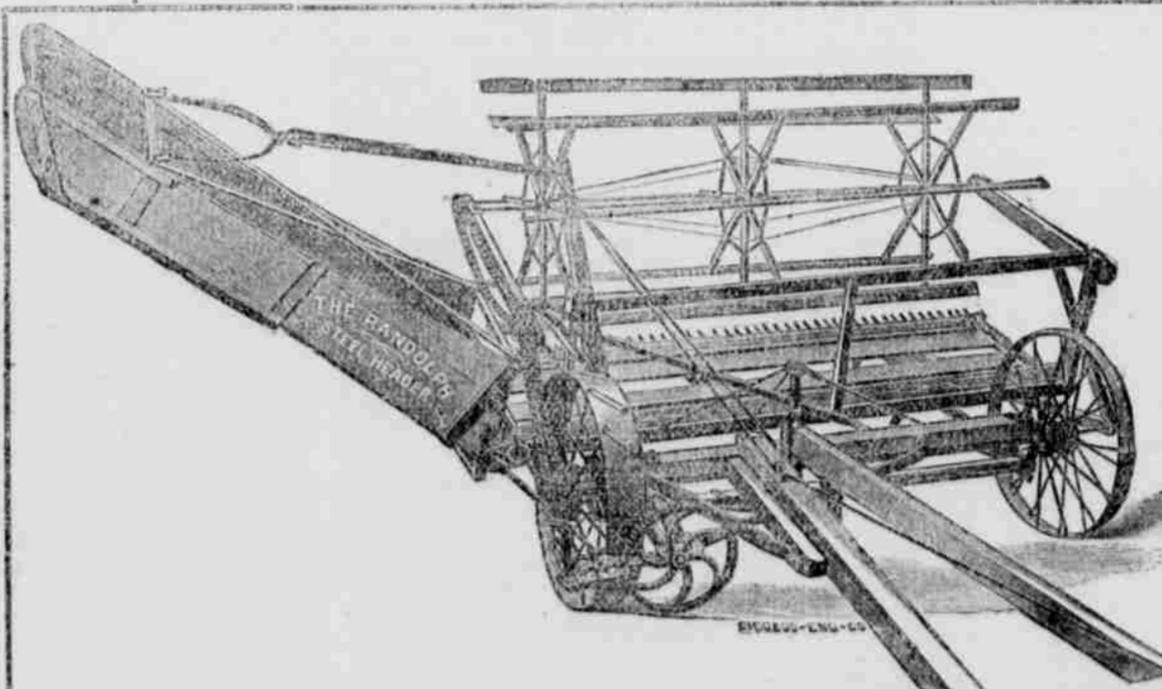

Harwesters, Binders Mowers.

P. K. DEDERICK
HAY PRESSES

STAND WITHOUT A RIVAL.

RNDOLPH
STEEL FRAME

Light & Easy
RUNNING HEADERS.

J. T.
L. &
Co.
Manufacturing
Machine Co.

Iron-sided Agitator Separator.

THIS is the Pyramid which has been the Foundation of the Agricultural Industry of Union County for many years, and Represents the Implements with which the Farmers have Prepared the Soil, Sown the Seed and Harvested the Harvest which has made this County as Synonym of a Liberal Seed and Abundant Harvest.

STAVER & WALKER,

La Grande, Oregon.

Engines, Boilers, Saw Mill and Planing Machinery, of Every Description