THE POLK COUNTY ITEMIZER.

DALLAS, OREGON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 20, 1883.

Too Much Petted.

It would seem to be impossible to say any new thing about the much agitated temperance question, and to claim originality in its discussion would be a pretentious boast. Yet there is a phase of the agitation, that if touched upon occasionally, is still not conspicuously alluded to. The main efforts of temperance reformers, since temperance reformers have had an existence, has been to reclaim the drunkard and to repress the drink-seller. It has occurred to us that this is an exceedingly one-sided movement. We think it not altogether unworthy of experiment to see what the effect will be to try reclaiming the seller and repressing the drunkard. If it is wrong to sell whiskey, it is wrong to drink it. If one is murder, the other is suicide. It is impossible to draw any moral distinction between the two classes. And yet this is just what temperance workers have always attempted to do. It seems to have always been assumed that the drunkard was more sinned against than sinning, and hence, while the seller of liquor is held up, and justly too, as an enemy of society and good morals, the "poor drunkard" is the object of the tenderest solicitude. Society has, to a certain extent, tabooed the dispenser of liquid refreshments from its highest circles. Yet gentle ladies, who would scorn the company of a saloon keeper, will entertain with their sweetest smiles the gentlemen who support him by their patronage. Temperance organizations have black-balls by which they frequently exclude sober people from their halls, but the drunkard is always a welcome candidate, and the more he drinks, the surer is he to be admitted. In this way, the vilest and most abandoned men find themselves suddenly introduced into the society of pure women, to whom they become the objects of the gentlest attentions. This fondling of drunkards by temperance societies defeats its purpose, in that it tends to make the inebriated sots regard themselves as more unfortunate than reprehensible. It is our belief that many men, by this course of treatment, are induced to pose as martyrs to their appetites, whom the wholesome scorn of society would effectually reform. Under the influence of this sentimental tenderness, learned doctors have made drunkenness a disease and ennobled it with the scientific name, dipsomania. It may be a disease and an hereditary one, as claimed, but we have an illustration that its ravages can be prevented without applying the remedies of the materia medica. It is a little strange, if it be a disease, that it attacks, almost exclusively, the male portion of humanity. If it be hereditary, we are prone to inquire why it is not inherited by the daughters equally with the sons. Is its law of heredity, like the English law of descent, confined only to the male line? In this fact of women's sobriety, is found the kernel of the whiskey problem. Women don't get drunk because society does not tolerate a drinking woman. Whenever society shall adopt a fifteenth amendment that shall abolish all distinctions, in the matter of drinking, on account of sex, and make a drunken man as repulsive as a drunken woman, we may expect a revolution in drinking statistics. That public opinion has not already reached that stage is due, in part, to the one-sided movement we have spoken of. Drunkards are both pitied and petted beyond their deserving. The true rule will be adopted when not only temperance societies, but all organizations composed of respectable people, shall erect over their doors: "No drunkard can enter here." We know what the "workers in the cause' will say to this. It will be sternly asked if we would refuse to lend a helping hand to a drowning comrade? We answer, yes, if by such a refusal we can prevent other comrades from foolishly jumping overboard. Besides, our observation of the work of reclaiming drunkards teaches us that the exceptions are not numerous to the rule that the longer a reformed drunkard remains sober the nearer he is to getting drunk.

All temperance legislation yet proposed or enacted proceeds upon some erroneous and partial view, that makes the saloon-keeper the cause of all our woes. Hence it is attempted to hedge him in by restrictions and high license, or to legislate him out of existence. It is safe to say that such attempts will prove futile until public opinion has reached that point when drinking and selling liquor shall equally be regarded as criminal, and worthy of punishment. And yet temperance people are continually extenuating drunkenness and thereby fighting against the very object they seek to accomplish.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The California Legislature is in session.

Garland is re-elected Senator from Arkansas, and Frye, from Maine.

A hotel in St. Louis was burned this week, with a loss of three lives. It came near being a repetition of the Milwaukee horror.

Fires are epidemic. A circus burned Thursday, the 11th inst., in Berditscheff, Russia, causing the death of one hundred and fifty persons.

The President has nominated Edward Somerville as Indian Agent at the Umatilla Agency. Mr. Somerville, we believe, was formerly a resident of this county.

Isham G. Harris has been elected to the United States Senate by the Tennessee Legislature, and John Long has been elected to the same office from Massachusetts.

A man has been arrested in Milwaukee charged with setting the hotel on fire that caused such loss of life. Lynching is freely talked of, but the officers are prepared to defend him.

A movement is on foot to bring out Grant in 1884 for President. There will probably be another batch of medals, but Gen. Grant will be no nearer the Presidency than in 1880.

Gov. Ben Butler has cut off the papers paid for by the State for the use of the executive, on the ground that he buys what papers he wants to read. Unkind persons will insinuate that since Ben became a Democrat he has forgotten how to read.

A crank, signing himself Charles Guiteau the second, has sent a letter to Mayor Palmer, of Boston, stating that he intends to kill "old Governor Butler in five months and twenty-eight days" from the date of his letter. It is not improbable that if old Ben gets after him, the second Guiteau will have even a shorter and more troubled reign than the first of that name.

Portland is much exercised about the need of a reform school in that city for bad boys. There certainly ought to be some place where young criminals might be imprisoned, without throwing them in the company of abandoned scoundrels, from whom they learn more wickedness. Yet, reform schools will not do all the work. What the age needs is a patent back-action spanker, warranted always in order, with a capacity of one hundred to two hundred boys an hour. That would "make Rome howl."

The Supreme Court of this State has decided, in the celebrated Greenwood will case, that the act of the Legislature of 1878, providing for Supreme and Circuit Court Judges in distinct classes, and their appointment by the Governor, is constitutional. The reason of the decision is that, when the act took effect, new offices were created and were from that time vacant, and come under the provision of the Constitution authorizing the Governor to fill vacancies. Such appointment, therefore, is not deemed obnoxious to that clause of the Constitution which requires such offices to be filled by popular election.

A controversy exists as to whether or not Mr Nathan Cole offered Mr. Thos. A. Sutherland the chief-editorship of the News. Mr. Sutherland and Mr. Blake, the latter a reporter of the News, says he did make the offer. Mr. Cole denies the soft impeachment. We cannot see why Mr. Cole should lay so much stress on the matter, as it would have been creditable to his judgment to have secured Mr. Sutherland's services if he could.

STATE AND TERRITORIAL.

Lady printers have been admitted to membership in the Typographical Union in Portland.

The Telegram has found a brother and sister, 10 and 12 years old, who have come all the way from Kansas alone. Their father's name was Williamson, and they say they have relatives in Polk County. They are plucky little people.

A case is now being tried in the U. S. District Court in Portland to determine whether a Chinese actor is a laborer within the meaning of the restriction act. If he labors only half as hard as most American actors, the question would not be doubtful.

At 10 o'clock Sunday night Peter Seul, a German, working in the gangway of the South Prairie mine, three miles this side of Wilkeson, was instantly killed by the falling of a piece of coal weighing about a half a ton. He was about thirty-four years of age.

Owenby was recently tried at Dayton, W. T. for the murder of E. H. Cummins, committed last July. The jury failed to agree, and before they had been discharged, Owenby confessed the murder and implicated three others. Warrants were issued for their arrest.

The Times-Mountaineer chronicles one of those accidents that are becoming more and more common. On the 4th inst., Otis Mitchell and Charlie Eades were examining a pistol, when it was accidentally fired, the ball entering young Mitchell's side and killing him instantly.

The Portland Board of Trade will put their money where it will do the most good. It will raise a fund to be called the "Portland Board of Trade Fund," for the flood sufferers in Germany. A Portland paper rejoices that this act of generosity (or shrewdness, which?) will draw a large immigration from Germany.

The Portland News alleges that numbers of its papers are systematically stolen from the doorways of subscribers and charges its rivals with being the real authors of the thefts. That any paper, much less those of the standing of the Oregonian or Telegram, would engage in such littleness, is too absurd for belief.

The Portland papers give accounts of Mrs. Duniway's lecture on "Constitutional Liberty," delivered at Portland on Tuesday evening. One paper uses the term "female" suffrage, which shows an inaccurate use of the English language. It is just as easy, and much more definite as well as more polite, to call a woman a woman.

At Weeksville, Montana, the terminus of the N. P. R. R., people are having a fearful time. Murder and robberies are every-day occurrences. The disregard of human life is shown by the fact that death is a subject of jest. A Coroner's jury brought in a verdict concerning the death of a sot: "We, the jury appointed to sit on the body of Andy Welsh, now lying before us, find that he came to his death from a change of whiskey."

A son of Claus Spreckles, the great sugar monopolist, is in Portland and, in an interview with an Oregonian reporter, stated that his father would probably, within three years, establish a sugar refinery in Portland. This looks very much like a sugar-pill to quiet Portland's former opposition to Spreckles' Hawaiian monopoly, which an abrogation of the existing treaty between the United States and the Sandwich Islands would somewhat interfere with.

Coincidences are wonderful things. The Portland Standard gives an account of the trial and conviction of an Indian named Tom Gilbert, which we suppose must have taken place in Multnomah County, as the item appears in the local columns of that paper without a word to indicate that it occurred elsewhere. The most remarkable part of the coincidence with the Polk County trial, is the fact that the Standard's account of the matter is, word for word, the same as our own account of the conviction that occurred here last week. We judge that the item is original with the Standard, for it boasts that it always gives credit.
