EZRA POPPLETON.

ALL I ASK

Is that you do yourself justice by buying goods where you can get them the cheapest.

I know it is the practice among a great many merchants to sell a few leading articles at cost, but they must make it up on something else. I intend to strictly adhere to very LOW PRICES in everything I offer for sale, and in

DRESS & FANCY GOODS, CLOTHING

Furnishing Goods, Etc., Etc.

There is no doubt or question but I shall sell them very much lower than the same goods have ever been offered in this market.

Please to call and price the goods and you will see that I am in earnest.

TWO SONGS OF LIFE.

I. Pink, at noon, from his stem, a rose— Sweet will it be when the day doth close— Take from the sands a golden grain— A thousand times will it shine again.

II. Take from foam-white waves a shell: Write therein a song of life: Of man's bravery in the strife: Of woman's trust—entrust me it well!

A LOVE STORY.

"Are there no underwriters for human hopes? For the most precious interests is there no insurance? I have been tempted all day today by fate and fortune."

Two years had dragged their slow length along since that letter came, and I had never heard from Alan.

"Engage him in conversation, Alan," regarding the hall, Mrs. Granger, the weather, stocks, etc.

"I will not soil thy purple with my dust," I had whispered in my heart. "Nor breathe the words of poison on the Venice glass."

"I have sold my soul for houses and lands," she said, "and I am a poor wretch. Lead me, Zeus and Destiny, whither-soever I am appointed to go; I will follow without wavering; even though I turn toward and shrink, I shall have followed the path of duty."

"I have sold my soul for houses and lands," she said, "and I am a poor wretch. Lead me, Zeus and Destiny, whither-soever I am appointed to go; I will follow without wavering; even though I turn toward and shrink, I shall have followed the path of duty."

PARIS.

A Letter from the French Capital Relates With Matters of Interest to our Readers.

Paris, April 5, 1883.

The leaves and the birds are re-appearing, and so are the strangers, many of them from California and the Northwest. Although mild and genial the Paris winters are noticeable by the bare trees, and interrupted growth of verdure in the Champs Elysees, or along the Boulevards.

Paris must cut down its prices before it can hope to again see the thousands of persons who once lived here because they could accomplish much with little money.

But, cheap or dear, it is ever the same fascinating old Paris—the most irresistibly charming place in the world in which to reside, because of the immense accumulation of topics of interest, of objects of art, and above all of varieties of human society to be found within its walls.

"My darling, my bright darling!" I had broken my clasp and sped away like a chamois to the hall. I did not heed that the roses fell from my throat, that a portion of my face drenched a marble, or that my hair, unloosed from its fastenings, hung about my shoulders.

CAUSE AND TREATMENT OF FAINTING.

Fainting, in most of its forms, is a purely natural and physiological condition, and unless the doctor's orders are obeyed, it will start the heart at double quick time and send the blood surging through the peripheral arteries, breaking down and washing away any protective plugs of clot which have probably begun to close the wounded vessels.

CATS ON SHIPBOARD.

Although pussy is the unrelenting enemy of rats and they stand in wholesome awe of her presence, she is not always victorious in her encounter with them.
