A citizen of Jackson, Mich., the other day wrote a message on the back of a Columbian postage stamp and mailed it. The postmaster is greatly perplexed, as, although a message card be forwarded on a 1-cent postal card he does not think it lawful for a letter to be sent through the mails written on the back of a stamp.

A certain of this kind may also be made of denim, and with the same decorative effect. If blue denim is used, turn the light side out and then make a border of the darker, etching straight lines upon each side of the border, and in the center put circles and crescents, outlining them in different colors. Finish across the top of the piece where it turns over in either case with a fringe to correspond in color with the decorations.

Birds of Passage. Between this and the other side of the broad Atlantic, in the shape of tourists, commercial travelers and mariners, agents "on the road," steamboat captains, ship's surgeons and all sorts and conditions of travelers, emigrants and new settlers appreciate and testify to the preventive and remedial properties of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in sea sickness, nausea, malaise, indigestion, and all other ailments of the stomach, liver and bowels. Against the prejudicial influences of climate, crudely cooked and unaccustomed diet and impure water, it is almost certain to produce diarrhoea and so regarded by the traveling public for over a third of a century. No form of malarial fever, from the calentura of the Pacific and the broken home fever of the mountains, is so completely vanquished by the curative action of this benign preserver and restorer of health, a veritable boon to persons in feeble health or liable to incur disease.

Jonathan Kenison of Bolan, Ohio Co., Iowa, who has been troubled with rheumatism in his back, arms and shoulders read an item in his paper about how a prominent German citizen of Ft. Madison had been cured. He procured the medicine, and to use his own words: "It cured me right up." He also says: "A neighbor and his wife were both sick in bed with rheumatism. Their boy was over to my house and said they were so bad that he had to do the cooking. I told him of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and how it had cured me; he got a bottle and it cured them up in a week. As to Land Ownership. Professor Alfred Russell Wallace shows to advantage the wisdom of his heart if not the greatness of his head in his paper in the Arena entitled "The Social Quagmire and the Way Out."

The social quagmire Professor Wallace means the wide extremes of wealth and poverty between which civilized peoples now founder. The rule in all countries is "increase of wealth with increase of want." Fifty years ago there was practically no real pauperism in the United States. Since 1840 our wealth has increased tenfold, our population not quite fourfold. This ought to bring greater ease, comfort and leisure to all the people. It has not done so. While our population as a whole has increased has increased ninefold.

In 1840 we had practically neither millionaires nor paupers. Now we have over 4,000 millionaires and hundreds of thousands of paupers. The wealth that should have gone to add to the comfort of the whole people is being gathered in the hands of the few, enabling them to live in a luxury that not even Solomon knew anything about.

These are the facts in our case, and there is no gauding them. The evil is on the increase; that is most admit. Unless something is done to check it thoughtful persons believe it will end in the rising of an overwhelming army of paupers and discontents who will some day crush out in a desperate struggle the millionaires and overthrow this republic. Undoubtedly many of the rich themselves would be glad to see American wealth more equalized.

Professor Wallace, following the wake of Henry George, believes it is land monopoly that has caused the discrepancy. He would have the land revert to the government and be let out to those persons only who will occupy and till it. He says it is largely the great bonanza farms of the west that have come into competition with the small farmer and destroyed him. This point is, however, not quite so certain as the discrepancy of Wallace. As one remedy the professor would have laws made either abolishing the hereditary right in the land inheritance, or if not that, at least prohibiting any heirs other than direct ones from inheriting land. Lands included in the prohibition would then gradually revert to the government, which could lease them out to small rent proportioned to their value actual tillers and occupiers.

Whatever we may think of Professor Wallace's remedies, it is clearly against public policy for our country to be divided into two classes—millionaires and paupers.

Esquimo Divorce Methods. They are in advance even of Dakota ideas. The marriage ceremony itself is very simple among the Esquimo folk. All that is necessary is for the young couple to make up their minds and then walk away together. The bride goes to the house of the groom. It is not the custom for him to hang around his father-in-law's mansion and be supported. As Esquimo ideas go, the husband is fairly good to his wife, regarding her with more affection than the most ignorant classes found in the slums of civilized cities are.

It is in the matter of divorce, however, that the Esquimo idea is unique. If a Greenland husband is at outs with his wife and tired of seeing her around, he simply says to her: "Get out. I don't want you in my hut any more." She gets out accordingly, taking her best belongings with her, and goes back to her own relatives. If, on the other hand, she is tired of him, she says only: "I am going to leave you. I never want to see you again." Then she gets up and goes, and that is all there is of it. This method has the advantage of simplicity at any rate, also that of saving lawyers' fees.

The attempt has been made by Rev. Dr. Sheldon Jackson, agent of education in Alaska, to acclimatize the reindeer in that territory, making this animal to the Alaskans what it now is to the Laplanders, furnishing them food, clothing and means of transportation. The attempt has been partially successful. Dr. Jackson reports that the population of Alaska is increasing, and that the natives have begun to provide for the future—that is to say, their future in this world, which the agent regards as the first step toward civilization. A new industry, reindeer raising, is added to the live stock industry of Alaska. The natives can by means of this useful animal now travel from place to place in winter.

HOW AND WHEN TO PLANT.

When to plant—spring or fall—is a hard question to answer, because no one knows what the season may be. But other things are done in the spring or in the fall, and a long in his manual on how to plant a place, says, let it be done early—that is, in spring as soon as possible after the soil will work up loose; in the fall immediately after the first hard frosts.

To plant for success look most to the roots. Given a good proportion of roots, the top can be made whatever you choose.
