How Wellington, He of Waterloo, Was Once Whipped.

Many a military hero would dread to have told the story of how he was taught to win his battles. Especially would he dislike the reminder if the lesson had come in the form WITH BARGAINS AND WEAR FOR THE LADIES OR FOR THE CHILDREN. Here, too, he experienced the most serious defeat of his memorable career, for, falling into a quarrel with a farmer's son over a game of marbles, he became engaged in a hand to hand fight. The future duke was doing well and was about to hoist the flag of victory when the farmer boy's big sister came running out with a wet towel.

The advent of the Prussians at Waterloo was scarcely more fortunate for the duke and his friends than the arrival of this stalwart girl was for his boyisha enemy, nor, according to all accounts, was the defeat of the French more crushing than the utter discomfiture of young tion the following statement: Wellesley upon this occasion.— Youth's Companion.

Why Spooner Doesn't Smoke.

Senator Spooner of Wisconsin dorf-Astoria the other afternoon literature in book form. I have when a waiter came up and after many murmurs of pardon asked him if he would have a cigar, relates the New York Tribune. "Who is going to treat me to a cigar?" asked this amount of work and literature the Wisconsin legislator, with considerable surprise. "Zee freend, ici," said the waiter, pointing to a man dressed in the unconventional broad rimmed hat and duster of the

"Oh, my friend George," answered Mr. Spooner, keeping his friend's last name to himself. "Never mind, garcon, about the cigar." turning to George he added: "Sorry, but I've stopped smoking since I saw you last. Have not been smoking at Rio de Janeiro when a certain Amerfor two years."

Is more common than we may think, if we define gluttony as eating beyond the body's need of sustenance and beyond the stomach's capacity for digestion and assimilation of food. That is a fair definition, and it fastens the name glutton on many a person who would resent the term as an insult. The fact of this gluttony is marked by its consequences. The overloaded stomach becomes diseased. The popular term for the condieased. The popular term for the condi-tion is "weak" stomach. The "weak" stomach fails in furnishing adequate nu-trition for the body, and soon the "weak-ness" spreads from the stomach to other

His Business Was Bicycles. A London bicycle agent, who advertises a machine by saying that it had been ridden a thousand miles a week for 12 weeks without breaking down, was speaking from the point of view of the bicycle. An intending purchaser, however, showed more interest in the condition of the rider at the end of the 12 weeks. "Oh-the rider!" was the calm re-"He ruined his health for ply. "He ruined his health for life." The agent was there, indisputably, to advertise the machine and not the rider. His indifference to the latter recalls the opposite attitude of the child who connected the frequent absences of her father with his recent acquisition of a new bieyele. "God wants us to be kind to animals and flowers and people, she said, meditatively. Then, after a pause, "But I'm not sure about bicycles!"

And He Finished Last. One candidate for a seat in the Australian commonwealth parliament is ued on the eve of the elechave traveled in the conduct of this contest more than 10,000 miles, a large portion on foot. I have published and circulated, chiefly by my "Athletics, are you?"
"Athletics? Gracious, man, I earn a published 139,000 copies of speeches delivered in the constituency and 125,000 copies of four page circulars. It is utterly impossible that can fail to have its effect." Alas, it was only too possible! The candidate who tramped, printed and published on this colossal scale found himself at the bottom of the poll when the count was finished.

Her Opinion of Asparagus. It seems that asparagus is not grown in the tropics-at least it was not grown lean gentleman, who had lived several years in the Brazilian capital, went with his wife and 8-year-old daughter visit friends living near Buenos Ayres, a part of the continent where the climate is better adapted to the fruits and vegetables of the temperate

At the first dinner after their arrival the visitors were treated to some fresh asparagus. The little 8-year-old daughter was likewise served with the asparagus, but she evidently did not think much of it as an article of food. Her mother tried for some time to coax her to eat it. Finally the little girl, taken between the rudeness of whispering at the table and the rude ness of not eating her food, leaned over and, with a choking voice and quiver ing lip, whispered to her mother: "Mam ma, it is not nice. It's raw at one end and rotten at the other."

An English Explanation. This is the way a prominent English paper explains it: The president of the United States, who receives a salary of £10,000 a year, must pay for all the food consumed at the White House, and the expenses of getting up an elaborate state dinner are not small. Cigars and wines the president buys, and they must be of the best. He has to maintain his own equipage. The govern-ment, however, allows him a valet; also a clerk, who opens all his letters. All other personal servants must be engaged by the master and mistress of the White House.

A Korean Prino The gate was wide open, arourtyard was full of prisoners, a of the two or three listless attendants called for us, why the prisoners did not run away. "Oh," he replied, "they would be caught and beaten again and kept longer. Now they will get out

But as I looked at them I saw they did not run because they could not. The life was beaten out of them. The keepers brought the heavy red cord with a brass book at the end and trussed up a man with it to show how the beating was done and then brought us the stiff rods with which victims were pounded over the shins and thighs until the beaten spots were simply masses of festering rottenness.

After eating of various unsavory foods there comes the great treat. This is a bowl of a frothy, soapy mixture, obtained by crushing in a not overclean manner the sapoliti, or soap berries, and squeezing out the juice. This is as much like scapsuds as it is possible to conceive. The natives sip it from spoons of black wood, neatly carved, of which they think a great deal.

The Chinaman's Dress. Those who understand the subject have to admit that when it comes to the question of rational dress the Chinaman has very much the best of it. American clothes are not made for the performance of much stooping or do-mestic gymnastics, but the Chinaman, in his loose, easy fitting clothes, is as free to stoop, jump, run or turn hand-springs as a small boy in bathing. In a Chinese suit of clothes you can lie down and sleep with the same amount of comfort that you can stand up and

During the nineteenth century 235 new comets were discovered as against new comets were discovered as against 62 in the eighteenth century. The nineteenth century also beheld a greater number of large and brilliant comets than did its predecessor. The linest of these were the comets of 1811, 1843, 1858, 1881 and 1882. In the year 1800 only one periodical comet was known. Halley's. Now many are known of which at least 17 have been seen at more than one return to peribelion.
