Hard Boiled Eggs For Poults. I notice in some of the poultry papers a sharp criticism on feeding hard boiled eggs to turkey poults. Now, I feed a certain per cent of hard boiled eggs with most excellent results. Years ago, before I adopted my present way of feeding, I lost fully half that hatched. Since adopting my present plan I raise 95 per cent, barring accidents. Last year I had fifty or more killed on the railroad or by dogs. This year I have been fortunate enough to prevent any being killed and have a large drove I have lost some, I hardly know how There were no sick ones. It was after they were turned on the range, and they just came up missing. As I turned them out to run before the hay and passenger agent, S. P. Starting at Portland, one traverses the whole length of the Willamette Valley, the gem of the northwest Mt. Hood, Mt. Jefferson, and the Three Sisters and other snow capped peaks are kept in sight for hours. The beautiful valleys of the Umpqua and Rogue rivers, with their orchards of prunes, peaches and apples and other fruits are a delight in themselves. The crossing of the great moun tain barrier between Oregon and California reveals the grandest mountain scenery in the United States. The wonderful turnings, twistings and doublings of the railroad bring into view a grand array of towering mountains and profound gorges into which we gaze from dizzy heights, forest clad mountain slopes stretching up to the ing mountain streams dashing fiercely down deep canyons, now and the stopping for a short rest in some quiet pool. FOULTRY HOUSES.

They Should Be Comfortable if Fowls Are Expected to Do Well.

We are glad that we are getting so many inquiries about poultry houses. It shows that our readers are thinking about the comfort of their birds, and it is well that they should do so, for the hen that is not comfortable is not prof-itable. It is a curious fact that a good many people feed their poultry liberally the year around with feed that costs or would bring money, and do this without any feeling as to the cost, who will not go to any expense to provide the flock with a comfortable house for the cold weather. These people often set up the plea that they don't think it good policy to "pamper" or "coddle" fowls, alleging that such a course is productive of disease. Some of them even offer as an excuse that nature has provided fowls with a warm suit of feathers to protect them from stress of weather. They say that birds of all kinds live in the open air and that this proves that such exposure is best for

Did you ever stop to think just how hard bearted nature is and how little protection she gives to her children? If every bird that is hatched in our fields were to grow to maturity, we would soon be "eaten out of house and home" by the birds. We have watched birds' nests times without number, and very few of the little fledgelings ever live to take even the first journey into the world Predatory enemies, a severe storm or some other accident befalls them, and they disappear.

Besides this the natural home of our domestic fowls was in a climate where everlasting spring abides almost—in northern India—and here the rank luxuriance of vegetation, the swarming insect life, the plentifulness of seeds and fruits made it possible for fowls to live in plenty and comfort the year through. Now we keep them in a climate that is rigorous half the year and expect them to go on laying eggs winter and summer, and some people are ready to con-demn the flock that does not come up to their expectations, even when obliged to sleep in a tree when the tem-perature is below zero. We haven't much faith in the bumanity of a man who will build for himself a comfortable twelling place and let his fowls take such weather as may come with out protection of any kind.

A comfortable house is not merely a humane provision for the comfort of the fowls. It is a means of saving than any other cheap food derived feed, for the flock that is kept warm through the winter will not ent as are composed of lime, it is essential much as the one that is not sheltered. | that food rich in lime be provided. Peeding In Molting Time. During moiting fowls need stimulat-ing food and old process linseed meal, meat meal and fresh ground bone are valuable and can hardly be fed to excess. Meat helps the molt greatly, and a little piece each day works wonders. It is well to remember that molting can be hastened by keeping the too is in a warm place and correspondingly retarded by keeping them in a good place. Thus a fowl which is desired for exhibition at a fall fair which comes at about the time the bird would moit may be kept in condition by confinement in a very light cellar

If you are wise in your day and generation, you will not attempt to force the bens for egg production at this senson of the year. Instead it is a good idea to give them rather short rations for a week or so and then supply in the mash all the linseed meal they will stand without detriment to health. This will assist in getting the hens over the most promptly, and you will then have them in the best possible condition for the late fall and early winter egg campaign.—Treat M. Wright in Poultry Monthly.

Taking cold is the first step towards Catalin, for it checks perspiration, and the poisonous acids and vapors which should pass off through the skin, are thrown back upon the mucous membrane or inner skin, producing inflammation and excessive flow of mucus, much of which is absorbed into the blood, and through the circulation reaches every part of the system, involving the Stomach, Kidneys and other reaches every part of the system, involving the Stomach, Kidneys and other parts of the body. and bewilderment of the uninitiated.

That Richter's suicide was caused by political reasons no one doubted, and rumors were many, insinuating that either Sverdrup or Bjornson, the leaders of the party opposed to Richter, had had a hand in the affair. In fact, it was generally talked of that Sverdrup, by acquiring possession of very compromising papers, had foreed Richter to self destruction. Sverdrup went to his death with that accusation still unproved, and it is the efforts of his children to clear their fa-

The great author stronuously denies the charges, although admitting his hatred, personally and politically, of Richter, and has brought suit against the children of Sverdrup.
