The convention seemed entirely at sea as to what they wanted to do about the commissionership. O. D. Rider, Lee Rowell, J. H. Hawley and I. A. Allen were nominated, but all but Rider declined. A motion to elect by acclamation was lost, as was one to refer the matter to the central committee. Rider was finally made the nominee by acclamation.

Dr. Ketchum and Woods were nominated for coroner, but withdrawn and the matter left to the central committee.

Frank Butler was made the nominee for su. veyor. Brother Butler tried hard to shove the nomination onto John Van Orsdell, but when it was proven to him that the young man was a democrat, not yet of age and a resident of Lincoln county, he gracefully gave up the contest.

By this time the delegates had all—except about 20—skipped out to congratulate and smoke with the candidates, and it became a difficult matter ### to get the balance of the nominees.

All things in connection with the occasion, including houses and table decorations and personal adornments, as well as the boys and girls were green. They had just gumption enough to have a royal good time, and went home at midnight for manners sake rather than because they wanted to. There was something unique in connection with the affair that made it spicy from beginning to end. Putting their heads, hands and collars together together the young ladies proposed a supper close up to the top notch. L. Starr and R. E. Williams.

AUNT SALLIE NICHOLS DEAD.

In 1844 Cornelius Gilliam and family crossed the plains from Missouri, he being in charge of a train of immigrants, many of whom settled in this country. His family settled first here and then went to Padec. The children were Smith, who has for many years lived in the Walla Walla country, Marcus, who died on Padec many years ago, America Grant, who lived and died at this place, Louisa, who married Wm. Gage and died on Padec, Rebecca, wife of Alex. Gage, who died at Walla Walla, Sarah Nichols, the subject of this sketch, Lizzie Collins, who is still a resident of Dallas, and Retta, first wife of Samuel Coad, who passed away over a quarter of a century ago. The writer first knew Mrs. Nichols in the Klickitat country some twenty years ago, she then being a bustling sewing machine agent, which business she had followed here before that. She was quite successful and accumulated a large band of horses which ran on her range near the mouth of the John Day river. Some twelve years ago she traded them for a farm near Kalama and had since lived near there. Last Friday her only sister, Mrs. Lizzie Collins, and Mrs. Blanche Fenton were called there by a telegram. She died Sunday, aged 66 years, and as she requested was buried next day at a neighboring cemetery wrapped in a flag that she loved. Mrs. Nichols was a woman of strong character and unbounded ambition and many admired the pluck with which she overcame obstacles. One daughter, Mrs. Minnie Holbert, died at Prineville where her father, Frank Nichols, now lives. Mollie is keeping a lodging house in Kalama and Katie was with her mother.
