

We have no high expenses running this immense mercantile house and our great cash buying and small expense is all figured down so you are the gainer as well as we are and makes it possible to turn our stock over so many times a year at a little profit, which is a bigger gain to us than one who is waiting until they get the big profit. Consider this and then decide where the right place would be to do your fall purchasing and where you will save the most money. Study our prices, compare goods and you will find each and every article just as advertised. Yours truly,

Morrison-Gardner Wedding.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of George H. Howe and wife, of Sheridan, October 7th, when Miss Lettie Gardner, sister of Mrs. Howe, was united in marriage to Thos. C. Morrison, of Linn county. Promptly at 6:30 Miss Bertha, sister of the bride, softly played the wedding march and the couple, preceded by Rev. Arthur Cane, marched into the parlor, and amid beautiful roses gathered from Mrs. Howe's own garden, and Oregon grape foliage, he solemnly pronounced the words which made them man and wife. After congratulations all were invited into the dining room where a sumptuous dinner was served. The bride wore a dress of light tan trimmed in white silk, and carried a beautiful bouquet of white La France roses. The groom wore an evening suit of black. A number of useful presents were presented to the happy couple. Miss Gardner is the handsomely and talented daughter of N. Among Chapman's Prunes.

A mile out on the Salt Creek road R. L. Chapman has a fine prune orchard of 40 acres, where a crew of men, women and children have converted 6,000 bushels of green fruit into about 120,000 pounds of the dried article. The prunes are larger and better and dry faster than last year. In one tunnel he has changed cars to slats, which gives room for two more trays and causes the heat to give better service. Before another season he will enlarge the plant and convert all the cars into the slat system. He says that almost any child can pick 20 boxes a day and older persons from 30 to 50, making all the way from 80 cents to $2. It requires over a cord of wood to dry a ton of fruit. He expects to consume about 75 cords. His orchard is in a high state of cultivation. The trees loaded with large, ripe fruit or the many boxes of it standing along the rows ready to be hauled to the dryer are beautiful sights. The present prices are not very encouraging, but our prunes will bring as good prices as any produced in America.
