[Salem Statesman.]

Dr. Darrin will conclude his sojourn in Salem at Willamette Hotel Nov. 1, and will visit Woodburn, at Hotel Woodburn, Nov. 2 to Dec. 1, where he can be consulted free.

For those who cannot possibly place themselves under other treatment, he has formulated a method of "Home Treatment," whereby the suffering may be favored with his latest modes of cure, including batteries and belts, when necessary, which in many cases give instantaneous relief and soon effect a perfect restoration to health—which includes building up and reorganizing the whole constitution. Consultation in all cases is confidential and free. Those unable to make one visit to the doctor can write for question blank and circular and get his opinion on such cases. Home treatment will be sent to any address at the rate of $5 a week, or in that proportion of time, as the case may require.

Would-be patients should preserve this notice where it will be available when wishing treatment of Dr. Darrin. The mouse ran up the clock. So runs the old nursery rhyme, but a mouse would find slippery climbing on the highly polished clocks of the present. Scrambling for Money.
Last Saturday was a big day in Dallas. Hundreds of men, women and children came in from all directions to witness or participate in the grab for Uncle Bill Brown's 2,000 nickels. At two o'clock all the streets facing the court house were crowded with humanity. The west side of the court house yard was divided into four parts, and each the boys and the girls separated into two groups according to size. Mr. Brown appeared with a sackful of coins which he distributed among twenty men, five to each group. At a given signal they scattered like so much grain and the youngsters went vigorously after it. Some got only two or three, and others 15 to 20. The most lucky ones and their parents and friends seemed to be the ones who got the most. Mr. Brown called for all children who failed to get a nickel to come to him for one and soon gave out about 40 of them. Sunday's Oregonian contained a picture of him and a description of the contest.
