Wounds of the Heart.
In wounds of the heart itself the escape of blood is never in large quantity, and the lethal consequences are due to the fact that the escape of blood from within its cavity or cavities into the surrounding sac of the pericardium mechanically interrupts the alternate contraction and expansion by which its pumping action is maintained. Accordingly the results of the wound of the heart are usually identical with those of gradual suffocation.—American Medicine.

One Thing Unbroken.
Standing over the shattered remains of their last Dresden china statuette, the exasperated mistress said to the awkward servant:
"Is there anything you haven't broken since you have been with me?"
"Yes, mum," replied the servant. "I have yet to break me record for destructiveness."—Baltimore American.

His Revenge.
He—And so your answer is final. You will not be mine?
She—Never! But pray don't go and blow your brains out.
He—It would be an idle attempt. People say if I had any brains I never should have proposed to you.

Testing It.
"Say, old man, let's go out and have a big time tonight."
"What are you celebrating?"
"I've just thought out a new excuse to mention to my wife."—Harper's Bazar.

A Clear Case.
She—I've noticed Dr. Singleton calling at the house of that young widow almost every day. She must be pretty ill.
He—Not ill; only pretty.

It is better to write one word upon the rock than a thousand on the water and the sand.—Gladstone.

Too Much System.
Don't make of yourself a purely domestic machine. Order, system and cleanliness are of course imperative in the well regulated home, but don't be so dreadfully systematic that you keep the other members of your household in terror of violating some fixed rule. Keep in touch with the world, in harmony with your husband and children, and if you have any ornamental accomplishments cultivate them, and you will get from life the best it has to offer.

Dainty Luncheon Cloths.
Luncheon cloths may be used in various ways for small table covers, as centers over cloths or on polished tables for luncheons, such as fruit, salad, Dutch, chafin dish or full course luncheon. Some of these cloths made of the oriental embroidery are very effective. When a white and gold effect is wished as in the home chestnut or buckeye design, the gold thread is used.

The Kitchen Walls.
No one in these days thinks of papering or whitewashing a kitchen. The walls should be oil painted in a flat finish—that is, without varnish—and if it is properly done they may be washed freely without injury to the surface. There are also several patent wall coverings resembling light oil cloth that are put on like paper.

Blackheads.
It is said that a lotion composed of two ounces each of rosewater, alcohol and glycerin, with one teaspoonful of borax, is a certain cure for blackheads. After bathing the face with cold water and rubbing in with the hand.

In a woman a long, narrow foot is ways shows high breeding, and a small foot does not always appear desirable as the exceedingly small ones mean weak and submissive character.

"Can you inform me if there are any colleges for women in Germany?" some one asked the secretary of Berlin University. "No, thank God!" was the reply.

There are more than fifty women "drummers" in the United States and the employ of commercial houses.

For Over Sixty Years.
An old and well tried remedy. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over sixty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures swollen colic and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Is pleasant to the taste. Sold by druggists in every part of the world. 25 cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup and take no other kind.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MRS. CLARE W. GETTER.

she is Treasurer of a Railroad and Capt. of the Official.

Mrs. Clare W. Getter, treasurer of the Kishwaukee Valley railroad at Beloit, Pa., has filled the office successfully for eight years and has proved that a woman can be a capable and efficient officer of such a corporation.

She enjoys the unique distinction of being one of two women in the world who hold official positions and take active part in the management of railway systems.

Mrs. Getter is the wife of Dr. J. P. Getter, one of the original projectors of the road and its general manager since its completion in June, 1883. She was one of the original stockholders, and, taking an active interest in its success and wishing to assist her husband.

band, who had a large practice in addition to his duties as a railroad manager, she early became acquainted with the details of the financial management and was elected treasurer.

All bills are sent direct to her. She pays the salaries of officers and men, keeps the company's bank account and assists in making out the interstate commerce reports. Her official signature is "Clare W. Getter." As a consequence a great deal of mail matter comes to her addressed Mr. Clare W. Getter.

BUDS AND FLOWERS OF HOME LIFE.

Faine's Celery Compound Makes and Keeps the Children Well and Strong.

Mothers Make It the Home Medicine For the Little Ones.

The children, God bless them, are the buds and flowers of our homes. Without their prattle and hearty laughter, our homes would be desolate. They should ever be carefully tended in childhood and youth, if we expect them to ripen into perfect men and women.

In the home and at school, the children have their times of ill health and suffering. We often note the pallid and listless cheeks, heavy eyes, nervous movements, and twitchings of limbs and muscles. They complain of headache, drowsiness, weakness, dyspepsia, and indigestion. All such symptoms and ailments mean that the seeds of disease will have a fast and firm hold, unless proper measures are taken to restore a perfect condition of health.

Thousands of wise and prudent parents have made their children happy, healthy, and vigorous by giving them nature's medicine, Faine's Celery Compound. In many severe and complicated cases, Faine's Celery Compound has restored health when the little ones were given up by physicians.

If your dear ones are not hearty, strong, and rugged as they should be, try the health giving virtues of Faine's Celery Compound. It makes and keeps the children well.

nection with railroad management came to her one day when in the absence of all the other officers of the road a hasty request for a special train to carry a large party from Reedsville to Gibbons Park was referred to her. She quietly took her hands from a pan of dough which she was kneading in her kitchen, gave the necessary orders, looked after the details of change in passing points so that there would be no error that might result in accident and resumed her baking.—Philadelphia Press.

Serving the Table.
A few simple rules may be laid down for serving the table. As a general rule, the maid removes the large service plates used under the soup plates at the time she brings the filled plates. Sometimes when the service plates are unusually handsome they are allowed to remain on the table until the dessert is served, so that the guests may always have plates before them.

The maid passes the larger dishes and plates by hand, the smaller dishes holding olives, bonbons and sugar being passed on a tray. She serves all of the dishes from the left. Tea, coffee and beverages are served from the right. The guest may never take the plate from the waitress, but must permit her to place it on the table before him, says the Philadelphia North American.

Finger bowls should be used only with fruit courses. When the dish is a bit out of the ordinary it is quite the thing for the hostess to excuse herself to be first served, when she begins to eat, thus demonstrating to the guests the proper way to eat it. When the hostess is not served first it is the rule to begin with the lady next to her on the right and begin with a different guest with each course, so that no one shall be always last.

The French always serve the host or hostess first, a custom calculated to put the guests at ease. For luncheon it is best to serve hot rolls tucked into napkins rather than bread on plates. A popular innovation is the thin sandwich of bread and butter.

The Allowance Question.
Some women are violently opposed in theory to the allowance plan. "I don't want to be paid $20 or $30 a month by my husband, as if I were an employee," they say. "Marriage is a partnership. I am one of the partners. It is true that my husband is the working partner and that it is convenient for us both that he should act as the cashier of the firm, but I should no more think of stipulating for the payment of so much spending money a month than I should of stipulating for two cups of coffee at breakfast every morning. If I wanted $20 I should know that I could have it. It was there to have. If, on the other hand, I had no use for money at the time it would not worry me in the least to get it. In a word, I have too much confidence in my husband and too much pride in my wifehood to clamor for a fixed allowance. I didn't marry my husband to make money out of him, anyway."—New York Tribune.

Placing Him Right.
As a northern express driver up at a station in the early morning for a few minutes' wait, a pleasant looking gentleman stepped out on the platform, and, halting before him, enthusiastically observed to the guard:

"Isn't this invigorating?"
"No, sir; it is Normanton," said the conscientious employee.

The pleasant looking gentleman retired.—London Telegraph.

Absence.
"We are here today," said the solemn looking man with a thin neck and a collar three sizes too large for him, "and gone tomorrow."

"That's right," agreed the dyspeptic looking man with the ivory black cigar, "and when we get back six months later some of our best friends want to know where we've been for the last two weeks."—Puck.

A Stupid Waiter.
Petitishly she stamped her foot. They were standing on the corner. He had offended her in some way. Again she stamped her foot.

"Well," he said slowly, "there is a letter box, but you must know you can't drop your foot in it. You are simply wasting postage."—Judge.

GEMS IN VERSE

The Desire.
Give me no mansions ivory white
Nor palaces of pearl and gold;
Give me a child for all delight
Just four years old.

Give me no wings of rosy shine
Nor snowy raiment, fold on fold;
Give me a little boy all mine
Just four years old.

Give me no gold and starry crown
Nor jeweled hair and beauteous curls;
Give me a nestling head of brown
Just four years old.

Give me a cheek that's like the peach,
Two arms to clasp me from the cold,
And all my heaven's within my reach
Just four years old.

Dear God, you give me from your skies
A little Paradise to hold,
As Mary once her Paradise,
Just four years old.

Refoldings.
The snowflake that softly all night is Whispering trepid and pathway;
The raindrop that suddenly rushing with darkness and death to the hamlet;

The ray stealing in through the lattice to Waken the day loving baby;
The pitiless horror of light in the sun smitten reach of the desert;

The seed with its pregnant surprise of welcome young leaf and blossom;
The apparition of the storm's tempest and treacherous thicket of forest;

The happy west wind as it startles some noon laden flower from its dreaming;
The hurricane crashing its way through the homes and the life of the valley;

The play of the petals of flame when the children laugh out on the hearthstone;
The town or the prairie consumed in a terrible, hissing combustion;

The glide of a wave on the sands with its myriad sparkle in breaking;
The roar and the fury of ocean, a limitless maelstrom of ruin;

The leaping of heart unto heart with bliss that can never be spoken;
The passion that maddens and shows how God may be thrust from his creatures—

For this do I tremble and start when the rose on the vine taps my shoulder;
For this when the storm beats me down my soul grows bold and bolder.

My Farm.
If ever I get rolling rich from working the land,
I'm going to take my leisure in a way to gladden you.

No palaces, no palace grand, no wining hours will charm.
I'll simply pull up city stakes and move upon a farm.

So long I've tottered within the gates where chimneys puff and smoke, I'll give my fortune for a breath of real country air.

A humble cot in pretty vale, a place to sleep and eat!
Ah, life will be most blissful in my coming country seat!

I want no factories around, no whistles fellow when he's Although I must insist upon a railway running near

To take me to the city any hour, night or day.
Consuming only ten or fifteen minutes on the way.

I'll rise each morning prompt at eight, be weather rain or shine,
And go to my morning farm to feed the loving kine.

I'll go to see my growing crops, my meadows waving far, Surveying my belongings from my private trolley car.

My days I'll give to reading what the papers have to say About the soil's rotation and the garden things that pay.

The little birds will sing to me, the gentle flowers will bloom,
And I'll have a grand piano in the family sitting room.

Oh, who would not a farmer be and spend his passing years
In following the calling of the sturdy pioneers.

Away with idle pamperings and luxuries that harm!
If ever I get rich enough, I'm going to buy a farm.

—Newark News.

At the Summit.

He started when the days were fair
And all the slopes were green and glad,
When all the world was free from care
And peace spread over every scene.

To reach a goal that Hope had set Far, far ahead upon a height,
And, braving all the fogs he met,
Kept on the way with all his might.

He found a thousand cares that he was forced to bear along the way,
But Love smiled at him joyfully
And journeyed with him day by day.

New hopes succeeded those that died,
And little triumphs made him glad,
And men who fell behind him glided
To have such blessings as he had.

At last, one day he reached the goal,
So high, so distant at the start,
But joy came not to fill his soul;
Nay, there was sorrow in his heart.

The place was high that he had won,
And still a splendid place and fair,
But after all his work was done,
He turned to find his rival there.

Her New Vocabulary.
She possessed a vocabulary of words
That was stored and crammed with learning,
And her thoughts, forever burning,
She could suitably express.

All her sentences were rounded,
And her words imposing sounded;
I was really quite astounded
As I listened, I confessed.

It was rather an affliction,
All this verbal restriction,
But her elegance of diction
And her most correct intonation.

They were quite beyond all praise,
But I saw her very lately,
And she did not talk orally;
All that language suave and stately
She no longer kept on tap.

She was saying, "Hossams daddums"
Where de bad old pin got hiddums
In his muzzar's p'etious kiddums?
To the baby in her lap.

MIGHTY TREES OF SIERRA.
Greatest in Size of All Creations of the Living World.

During all the ages nature has favored the growth of forests on the Pacific mountains, providing the peculiar conditions which make them far different from, greater in size, more luxuriant, than any other in the world. Of all the creations of the living world none is so great in size, so majestic in presence, as the mighty trees of the Sierra and the Cascades. For here the air is always fertile with moisture, clouds blown in from the Pacific ocean rest among the mountain summits, even crowding the tops of the trees themselves, and here the clouds shed their rain. The soil is deep and spongy with centuries of decomposing vegetable matter, furnishing an unequalled nurturing place for vegetation, and there are no extremes of heat in summer or depths of cold in winter, says the Century Magazine.

Every condition has been favorable to unexampled exuberance of growth not only of the largest trees, but of all manner of undergrowth, vine, shrub and brake. A huge tree falls, decays and is yellowed with thick moss. Immediately scores of young fir and cedars spring up along the top of it—the first chance of a bare spot in the wood.

Old burned stumps, gathering soil in their hollow interiors, are nurseries for colonies of young fir, some of the individuals finally overshadowing the others, growing larger, and, as the mother stump drops away, sending its roots downward into the earth through the disintegrating textures until it in time becomes a great tree.

Women's Strength in Tears.
The weakest woman in the world is armed with one weapon against which man's pride and strength are powerless. Her tears will win when everything else has failed. A woman's tears move her own tender sex as well as the sterner masculine brutes. Old and young yield to their potential spell, and when the woman happens to follow where her bright eyes grow misty with these messengers from a wounded heart. It is folly to attempt to stand out against a woman's tears.
They have caused revolutions. They have made and unmade many a great cause. They can be met in only one way—unconditional surrender.—EX-

Parents' Responsibility.
It is the right of every child to be well born, and to the parents it must look for health and happiness.

How inconceivably great is the responsibility, and how important that no taint of disease is left in the blood to be transmitted to the helpless child, entailing the most pitiable suffering, and marking its little body with offensive sores and eruptions, catarrh of the nose and throat, weak eyes, glandular swellings, brittle bones, white swelling and deformity.

How can parents look upon such little sufferers and not reproach themselves for bringing so much misery into the world? If you have any disease lurking in your system, how can you expect well developed, healthy children? Cleanse your own blood and build up your health, and you have not only enlarged your capacity for the enjoyment of the pleasures of life but have discharged a duty all parents owe to posterity, and made mankind healthier and happier.

There is no remedy that so surely reaches deep-seated, stubborn blood troubles as S. S. S. It searches out even hereditary poisons, and removes every taint from the blood, and builds up the general health. If weaklings are growing up around you, right the wrong by putting them on a course of S. S. S. at once. It is a purely vegetable medicine, harmless in its effects, and can be taken by both old and young without fear of any bad results.

Write us about your case, and let our physicians advise and help you. This will cost you nothing, and we will also send our book on blood and skin diseases.

Legislation Against Weeds.

A bill has been introduced into the Canadian parliament which is intended to prohibit the sale of any commercial seeds that may contain seeds of such weeds as wild mustard, penny-cress, oxeye daisy, perennial sow thistle, ragweed, bindweed and several others.

Bright's Disease.
The largest sum ever paid for a pre-scription, changed hands in San Francisco August 30th, 1901. The trans-act involved coin and stock $112,500 and was paid by a party of business men for a specific for Bright's disease and diabetes, hitherto incurable diseases. They commenced the serious investigation of the specific November 15th, 1900. They interviewed scores of the cured and tried it out on its merits by putting over three dozen cases on the treatment and watching them. They also got physicians to name chronic, incurable cases, and administered it with the physicians for judges. Up to August 20th, eighty seven per cent of the test cases were either well or progressing favorably. There being but thirteen per cent of failures, the parties were satisfied and closed the transaction. The proceeds of the investigation committee and the clinical reports of the test cases were published and will be mailed free on application. Address John J. H. G. CAMPBELL, Manager.

So little has been written in the poultry journals regarding pheasants that few persons realize the pleasure and profit derived from them.

In a year's collection of over twenty journals I have found but two brief articles. Yet they are the most interesting, beautiful and profitable birds one can raise, requiring far less care and room than chickens.

The golden pheasant is my favorite, and I have one pen of beauties as playful as kittens and quite as tame.
