CUTICURA

Soap, Ointment and Pills the World's Greatest Skin Cures.

PRICE THE SET $1

Complete Treatment for Every Humour, from Pimples to Scrofula.

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of the scalp, as in scalled head; the facial disfigurement, as in pimples and ringworm; the awful suffering of infants and the anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter, and salt rheum, all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills are such stands proven beyond all doubt. No statement is made regarding them that is not justified by the strongest evidence. The purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty of speedy and permanent cure, the absolute safety and great economy, have made them the standard skin cures and humour remedies of the civilized world.

The grandest testimonial that can be offered the Cuticura remedies is their world-wide sale, due to the personal recommendations of those who have used them. From a small beginning in the simplest form, against prejudice and opposition, against monied hosts, countless rivals, and trade indifference, Cuticura remedies have become the greatest curatives of their time, and, in fact, of all time, for nowhere in the history of medicine is to be found another approaching them in popularity and sale. In every clime and with every people they have met with the same reception. The confines of the earth are the only limits to their growth. They have conquered the world.

Sold throughout the world. Cuticura Resolvent, 50c. (in form of Chocolate Coated Pills, 25c. per vial of 60), Ointment, 50c., Soap, 25c. Depots: London, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix; Boston, 137 Columbus Ave. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Proprietors.

A GHOST STORY

"Before the war," he began, "I had a friend living in the neighborhood. Parson A., he was called, though he was never a member of any church. The one thing that I never could reconcile to his views was his absolute belief that there had been cases, and were even then, when the dead came back upon earth and manifested their presence to those whom they loved. Well, the parson—I speak of him in this way reverently and respectfully—some years before the war moved away from here into the northwestern part of the state. He was fairly well to do, owned a number of "blacks," treated them like the Virginia gentleman he was and had their warm affection. He owned some fine horses and prided himself upon them, his nice wagons and his excellent gravel roads. My friend began to decline in health after he went away. I visited him often and attended to considerable business for him, and at the different times I was with him I noticed anent his failing health.

"He knew it was failing and that rapidly, and one evening he said to me suddenly, without any reference to his condition, 'Joe, if I die before you and I can—mind you, if I can—I will come back from the shadowy bourne and reveal to you my presence on earth.' Ten days after that he was laid away in a little graveyard in the village near where he lived. That was in the month of March, two years before the war.

"In the following September I had business in that part of the state and stopped at the house of my old friend to pass the night, having advised the family of my intention to do so. I arrived about 8 o'clock in the evening, and not for one second during my journey—and I was two days making it, going on horseback—could I get out of my mind my old friend's declaration that if he could he would after death make known to me his presence on earth. It did not exactly make me uncomfortable, but I remembered it, that was all. When I arrived I was met by old Parker, one of the servants, who was glad to see me and took charge of my horse. He seemed uneasy and said he wanted to talk to me. So after I had greeted the family and taken supper I went out and found the old fellow waiting near the stable.

"The first thing he said was, 'Marse Joe, does you believe in shadders?'

"'What do you mean by shadows, Parker?' said I.

"'Ghos'es,' he plumped out, and the word gave me a cold thrill, for it brought back all the thoughts of what the parson had said and that had encompassed me on my journey.

"I ridiculed Parker, even though he had made me feel uncomfortable. I told him not to be a fool and that he was old enough to know there never was a ghost. But Parker was not to be convinced. He had never seen one himself, but nearly every other darky on the place had imagined that he had seen the spirit of the parson at midnight wandering among his wagons about the barn. After my interview with Parker I returned to the house. There was company there taking up the spare rooms, and I, not being a stranger, was to rest for the night on a lounge in the sitting room. It was nearly midnight when I was bidden good night and laid myself down. I had hardly become composed when I heard the faint tinkle of a clock chime 12. It seemed the saddest striking of a clock I ever listened to. I kept perfectly quiet and was getting sleepy when I heard a strange sound. It was like the turning of a wheel on the even gravel paths that the parson always had kept in such good order. It stopped and turned again and then began revolving very rapidly. I jumped up, and the noise stopped instantly.

"I had eaten a hearty supper and thought I must have fallen asleep and had the nightmare, so I lay down again. I had just quieted my nerves when that wheel turned around again. I could hear the wagon coming along like lightning on the gravel road, and I thought it must have been just in front of the house, so rapidly did it seem to run. I at once jumped to the window. Before I could open the shutter the sound ceased, and the place was again as quiet as a tomb. In a cold perspiration I pushed open the window shutter. I expected to see my dead friend driving one of his wagons over, though I felt he would not harm me. I needed no light, for the luster of the September harvest moon rivaled in its brightness the noonday sun. I went out to the barn. There were the wagons standing on the gravel walk as I had seen them early in the evening, and the scene was one grand picture of peace and quietness, an apotheosis of calmness. I didn't know but what I was losing my senses, but I went back to rest, if I could, and, to my horror, again, just as I became quiet, came that sound of wheels crunching on the gravel. This was more than mortal could bear, and I got up and lit the lamp. I sat it on the table and listened, but there was no noise then, and I became thoroughly frightened. I raised the lamp and looked around.

"On the wall back of my lounge hung one of those squirrel cages, with a tin house and cylinder outlet, and in that cage was a timid but very lively squirrel, who came out every time the place was quiet and took gymnastic exercise in the cylinder. You have probably all seen such a performance and can understand how like to the turning of wheels upon a gravel path it could be conjured into seeming. Every time I rose and made a noise the squirrel retreated into the house. But, oh, how relieved I was when I solved the mystery!"—Washington Star.

DREAD OF HUMANITY

I am compelled by a sense of gratitude to tell you the great good your remedy has done me in a case of Contagious Blood Poison. Among other symptoms I was severely afflicted with Rheumatism, and got almost past going. The disease got a firm hold upon my system; my blood was thoroughly poisoned with the virus. I lost in weight, was run down, had sore throat, eruptions, splotches and other evidences of the disease. I was truly in a bad shape when I began the use of S. S. S., but the persistent use of it brought me out of my trouble safe and sound, and I have the courage to publicly testify to the virtues of your great blood remedy, S. S. S., and to recommend it to all blood-poison sufferers, sincerely believing if it is taken according to directions, and given a fair trial, it will thoroughly eliminate every particle of the virus. Bleeding Gums.

Serious hemorrhage often follows the extraction of teeth. To stop the bleeding make a saturated solution of tannin in alcohol and place a plug of absorbent cotton wet in this solution in the cavity. Place between the teeth or jaws a piece of cork or roll of cotton, thick enough to bring pressure on the wound when the teeth are closed.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

The largest sum ever paid for a prescription changed hands in San Francisco, August 30, 1901. The transfer involved in coin and stock $112,500, and was paid by a party of business men for a specific for Bright's disease and diabetes, hitherto incurable diseases.

They commenced the serious investigation of the specific November 15, 1900. They interviewed scores of the cured and tried it out on its merits by putting over three dozen cases on the treatment and watching them. They also got physicians to name chronic, incurable cases, and administered it with the physicians for judges. Up to August 25th 87 per cent of the test cases were either well or progressing favorably.

There being but thirteen per cent of failures, the parties were satisfied and closed the transaction. The proceedings of the investigating committee and the clinical reports of the test cases were published and will be mailed free on application. Address John J. Fulton company, 409 Washington street, San Francisco, California.

Economy In Dishwashing.

I save work and gain time for other things in the use and care of my dishes, says a correspondent of Woman's Home Companion. First, in mixing I use as few dishes as possible, making the same dish, spoon, etc., do duty for a morning's baking. Stewpans and doughy dishes are washed as soon as used or left in the sink filled with water. Bread or cake tins, if not sticky, are rubbed with a bit of paper or set away as they are for use again. After each meal I bring to the table a large tray and two perfectly clean cloths—one dry, the other damp, but not wet. All dishes that are not strictly dirty, sticky, greasy or crumby or the like, are rubbed with the dry cloth; other dishes are improved after treatment by both cloths. The remainder are packed on the tray and carried to the sink. The glassware is washed in soapy water, rinsed in clean, hot water and inverted on a clean towel to dry and looks better than if wiped. The earthenware dishes are treated in the same way, and when the last are done the first washed are ready to put away with little or no wiping.

Isolating Infectious Diseases.

In isolating an infectious case all articles of no particular value which have been employed in the sickroom are burned. Articles which cannot be burned are kept in a closet inside the danger line until they can be disinfected. Articles which are washable are dipped immediately into water, charged with disinfectant, of which there are many patent preparations as well as the old fashioned remedy of carbolic acid in solution. Over the door is tacked a sheet, like a curtain, and this should be sprinkled regularly with a simple disinfectant. All dishes, utensils, etc., used in the sickroom should be kept separate and washed apart from the articles employed for the rest of the family. Articles of food left by the patient should be burned or sprinkled with carbolic solution and buried underground.

Apple Pudding.

A delicious pudding is made by lining bottom and sides of a pudding mold with rounds of bread which have had one side dipped in melted butter. Arrange the pieces with the buttered sides next the dish. Fill the cavity with chopped apples, raisins and almonds, seasoned with sugar and spice. Cover the top with buttered breadcrumbs, and bake until the apples are tender and the top is brown. Turn from the mold and serve with hard sauce.

Window Cleaning Chair.

An inventor has designed a window cleaning chair which affords a really comfortable seat on the sill instead of the precarious hold now afforded. This invention comprises a seat and back not unlike those of an ordinary chair, the back being extended downward to engage the outside wall of the house beneath the window. The front edge of the seat is provided with a pair of hooks, which curve downward against the wall and afford a firm hold for the chair. It is certain that a feeling of greater security will be the accompaniment of this chair, and it may also induce a more frequent cleaning of the windows.
