

PINKIE PRIM

"Whose little girl are you?" he asked. She answered, "Mrs. Prim's, And Papa's, and the Public's, And likewise Uncle Tim's."

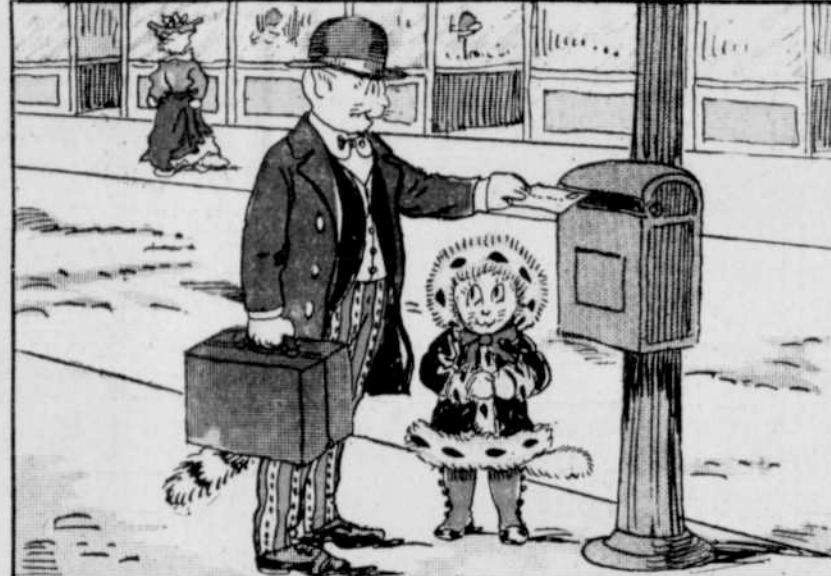

"O-ho," said he. "Why, you're the girl Made Drummer write back home!" "You'll have to guess again!" she said. "You are mistaken, some"

"T.P.A.'s. don't need to be told. It's part of them, they say, To write home ONCE A WEEK, AT LEAST, - And some do evry day."

"Where do you live," she asked, "when home?" He answered that he "batched." "Might have known it," said Pinkie Prim. "You must be 'unattached'."

"Somewhere there's someone, surely, sir, Would like to hear from you. Mother, - sister, - old maiden aunt: I tell you what you do, -"

"Just drop a line!" - The salesman did, Lianlady's heart made glad. "Bless their hearts," she smiling said; "Them trav'ling men aint BAD."
