Cornell, Rolling, Va., Aug. 27, 1906. Sold by Conrad Staffin.

The Remizer would suggest that when the crosswalks are replaced by crossing Mill and Court on the west side of Main be newly laid and of cement. The amount of travel over these walks rightly calls for more solid walks than elsewhere. The rest can be relaid with the old walks until such time as they wear out.

The jury at Salem last Wednesday in the case of John Walling against Captain "Jack" Peterson, of "outland" for the recovery of $100 for the sale of 20,000 hop roots, found in favor of Walling for the full amount asked. When Peterson was on the stand he displayed reluctance in answering the questions put to him, and the court threatened him with a jail sentence for contempt, which had an electrical effect, Peterson answering all questions without hesitation afterwards.

"One who was not afraid, and who spoke the truth." This is the summary that F. Hopkinson Smith makes of the character of Captain Thomas A. Scott, Master Diver, whose life he sketches in the August Everybody's. Captain Scott was a plain American, one of the common people, with a heart full of the milk of human kindness, a hand ever ready to help and protect the weak. He was a real hero—the record of his life as a wrecker and diver proves this. It is full of instances of his nobility and sacrifice of self, and not only inspires and uplifts, but forces one to be an optimist.

Several times lately strangers have wandered into this sanctum sanctorum, and so engrossed did they seem to be with their own needs, blurt out: "Say Doc, I am not feeling at all well. I need a little reviver. Will you write me a prescription?" Now this is occurring a little moutonous. Of course we should feel highly honored that our great thought dispenser and moral and political educator is located between two renowned medical, but we don't want it to get out among our patrons that this is any sort of a wet goods establishment.

After a prolonged period of illness and as a result of a complication of diseases Mrs. J. Fenton, wife of Dr. J. D. Fenton, died Tuesday at 7 o'clock at her home 812 Overton street. For a long time Mrs. Fenton had suffered from a gastric ailment which is said to have hastened her end.

John Bird is opening up in the old Dick Madison saloon soft drink parlors. He will handle the famous Maltona, advertised elsewhere in this paper. It is a near beer and those who have tried it pronounce it a very tasty drink. He will also connect all kinds of soft drink machines. He will be open for business Saturday.

Sam Ray is getting advertised all over Oregon just now because he said last week that he was paralyzed by leaning up against a wire fence. Many newspapers seem to think he was paralyzed first and all wonder how it could happen in a dry county. For our brother editors' benefit, we will say that Mr. Ray is a pronounced temperance man, so their insinuations amount to naught.

M. W. Walker and brother, William, passed through Lebanon this morning on their way to Caswell, where they expect to stay for a week. Moss is now in the hotel business at Falls City, in Polk county, and if one should judge from the way Moss looks and from his reputation as a cook while he was in Lebanon, we should say that they certainly run a mighty fine hotel. Moss certainly looks as if he was well fed. He tips the scales at 215 pounds.—Lebanon Express.
