Quite a crowd attended the Woodman Smoker Tuesday night. Four door prizes offered by V. P. Fiske, were awarded to Henry Clifford. Sam Ray, C. L. Hubbard and V. E. Johnson. A half dozen boxing matches furnished much amusement for the onlookers, and Gus Bowman kept the combatants feeling trim with some nice music on his accordion. Light refreshments and cigars were served, and the latter part of the evening spent in playing different games of cards.

The Seventh Day Adventist church which has been of late remodeled, painted, papered etc., is completed with the exception of a little painting. The church presents an attractive appearance, the model being somewhat unique. This pattern is becoming quite general. They report an expenditure of $421.80 in cash and donated labor. Of this amount $189.15 was given by citizens who were not members of the church. The building committee request us to express through our columns their gratitude to the business men of Dallas who contributed so liberally and made this project possible. G. W. Pettit, who is located in our city with his family, has the work of the church in charge. Wednesday evening at 7, Saturday afternoons at 2, public services are conducted. Visitors are always welcome to these meetings.

OUR NEW BOOKLETS.

First Lot of 10,000 Now off the Press and Here.

Yesterday President U. S. Laughary of the Dallas Development league, received the first consignment of one of the new booklets which will be issued by this city during the next year for advertising purposes. The one now ready is what is known as the Conductor's Guide, and is more for ditribution on trains than anything else, It is neatly gotten up in every particular, is 6x9 inches in size, and nicely printed on good book paper. The cover design is striking, artistic, and bound to attract attention. There are 12 pages nicely filled with beautiful views in and around Dallas. About 500 have been sent to our basket ball team at Billings for distribution and as they proceed east other consignments will await them at different places. You may begin to look for letters of inquiry in the near future. Dallas is spoken of as follows:

Dallas is the thriving and substantial county seat of Polk county, Oregon. It is 60 miles southwest of Portland, with which city it is connected by an ample train service. It has a population of 3,000 and is growing steadily. There are two banks, two newspapers, a free public library, excellent public schools, a high school and an Evangelical College. There are eight churches of different denominations. The leading streets are macadamized and curbed with stone. It also has a good sewerage system.

Dallas is a junction point and the natural distributing center for a rich nearby territory which surrounds it. In addition to this, a line is partly constructed to Salem, the state capital, fifteen miles to the eastward.

One's first impression upon reaching Dallas is of surprise that so considerable a city should be built in such sparsely settled territory. A careful investigation of the surrounding territority, however, disclosing as it does almost unbelievable richness, fill one with surprise that the city is so small and the country so scantily populated.

The lumber industry was for many years considered paramount, and it still exceeds in magnitude any other. For years the land from which the timber had been stripped was either farmed in desultory fashion or allowed to lie neglected. Finally thrifty agriculturists began to come into certain sections. They at once saw the value of the soil and knew that it would raise fruit trees as well as the giant fir. The quality and quanity of their fruit brought them success, and in the localities in which the productiveness of the soil has been demonstrated, land has risen in value far beyond other localities which have equally good soil and market facilities.

Dallas and that part of Polk county tributary to it has been somewhat slow to realize its advantages. The citizens of Dallas, however, appreciate that there is a great emmigration movement in the direction of the Northwest, and that new blood and new capital are necsary to the development of this locality. New enterprises are springing up. Factories are starting and finding a ready reception for their products. Today there are in active operation here two sawmills, one foundry, one tannery, one axe-handle factory, one flouring mill, one ice plant, one planing mill, eight prune dryers, eight hop dryers, three wagon shops, one creamery, one soda works and an electric light plant, which supplies not only Dallas, but other towns with light. There are other good openings. Fuel is cheap and oak timber is plentiful—there should be a furniture factory. The certain increase of the fruit industry here and elsewhere will make a box factory profitable as well as factories for the production of the many other articles made of hard or soft wood. In this section is produced a quality of mohair not excelled by any in the world. It has taken premiums in many exhibitions. There are local breeders of Angora goats who stop at no price to better their herds. There is much wool of fine quality. All these things are within a stone's throw of great furnaces kept burning night and day at the mills to get rid of sawdust, shavings and scraps of wood. Slabs are worth little more than the cost of hauling. There is ample water power. The time is not far distant when any locality having raw material, cheap fuel and shipping facilities must become a manufacturing center. The rapid growth of all parts of the Northwest is causing a rapidly increasing nearby market.

The permanency of Dallas as a manufacturing and business city is assured. There is now standing tributary to Dallas two billion feet of timber of the best quality. With the completion of a railroad now building two and a half billion feet more will be accessible to the mills and factories of this city This timber consists of red and yellow fir, commonly called Oregon Pine, which is much in demand for interior finishing, and a small percentage of larch, white pine, hemlock and cedar. This district has been found to produce the best spars and masts for ships and from the oak grubs ship-knees are made.

Every industry is in its infancy and yet Dallas ships out more cars of freight than any any other point in the state of Oregon with the exception of Portland. The number of men employed in preparing and handling these hundreds of cars of freight which go out monthly, may be imagined. One sawmill employs nearly a hundred men, to say nothing of the large number employed in the forests.

The climate of Dallas is unexcelled. Mild winters and delightful summers are the invariable rule, The water is wholesome and delightful. There is no malaria nor other sickness for which the climate is responsible. There is no stagnant water to breed disease germs. There are no blizzards in the winter and no hot nights in the summer. There is a good moral tone to the community and everywhere a feeling of satisfaction among its residents. So much for Dallas.

Now let us look closely at some of the things that underlie Dallas and form the basis of its hopes for growth and prosperity. On every hand, as one drives about the surrounding country, he sees rich, producing land. Some of it rolling, much of it is level, all of it is well watered, well drained and tillable. Certain success awaits the intelligent, industrious farmer, stock orchardist, gardener or dairyman.

There are low, rich lands adapted to hop culture. Oregon is known throughout the world for the excellence of her hops. London, England, and all the great brewing centers send buyers here. There are fields near Dallas, that have yielded liberally year after year after one planting. There are here great areas suited to the growing of vetch, kale and alfalfa, which are recognized as the best feed for milk cows, and a thriving industry in dairy products is being built up. Then there are higher lands with a "looser" soil, adapted to fruit and nut culture, and containing all the chemicals necessary to the raising of fruits of quality.

The hills are covered with good pasturage, and an increasing number of live stock may be seen fattening with small expense to the owner. The stock is free from disease.

An important industry near Dallas is the raising of Angora goats. These goats, in addition to furnishing the mohair which has been mentioned and which brings a handsome profit to the breeder, also perform a valuable service on stump land. They browse upon the green shoots which spring up around the stumps, thus causing them to die and rot quickly. Several Dallas gentlemen have fine herds, and so famous have the Dallas Angoras become that the principal breeders have more orders than they can fill for fine goats. It is not uncommon to sell goats before they are born, when the stock is of extra quality.

There is still land to be had for about the value of the timber, and a handsome profit may be made by clearing the land and employing the goats to kill the stumps.

Large fields of wheat and other grains may be seen, but the brightest future seems to await the orchardist. Prunes have achieved success unknown to most districts. Many astonishing but true stories are told of the profits from small orchards. Not only is the quality unsurpassed, but the yield is unfailing. A fact that can be claimed for few localities.

Wherever apples are known, Oregon apples are known. They are shipped to England and different parts of this country. No finer flavored nor higher colored apples can be grown in Oregon or elsewhere than are grown in this Dallas district, although the land here can be bought for a fraction of what it sells for in other better advertised sections. The buyer in England cares nothing what you pay for land. The apple is the test with him. Apple land near Dallas will sell for as much money as any in the United States in a few years.

Another industry in which Oregon is forging to the front is nut culture. The industry is growing, and the size and quality of the nuts more than meets with the expectations of the experimenter. Almonds and filberts do well also and are recommended to the settler.

There seem to be no product of the soil that fail here if they can be grown outside of a tropical climate.

A plain drunk was an occupant of the cooler last night.

No definite arrangement has been made regarding the closing of the stores tomorrow, but it is hardly probable that many of them will remain open after 9.

The closest game of the season was when our college boys played at Newberg Friday night, they going down to defeat by the Quakers with a score of 24 to 25.

BEAUTIFUL ART CALENDARS.

Following our annual custom of distributing some token of remembrance to our friends and patrons, we have this year secured the most beautiful art calendar that has ever been given in Dallas. It is the prettiest thing that we could get for you and we have no apology to make for it as a work of art. Cascade Falls, Yosemite Valley, by Thomas Moran, is a masterpiece by the foremost of American scenic painters.

The only favor we ask for it, is that you will give it the most prominent place possible. We haven't the slightest doubt but that you will do this, if it appeals to your good taste and judgment as it does ours. This picture will ever command a high place among landscapes by reason of its absolute truth, its brilliant coloring, and its keen conception of beauty.

We do not wish to have you gain the impression that this springs entirely from the goodness of our heart, for in this age of commercialism there is usually a motive behind a gift of this nature, and we are no exception to the rule. Our motive is this: To get in closer touch with you in order to whisper in your ear the mutual benefit of a trade alliance between yourself and Uglow Clothing House, and incidently to "Toot Our Own Horn," so to speak.

No doubt you have learned by observation that the steady growth of our business continues. This, we believe, is the result of the fair and square treatment we give. We are bending every effort that conversation will permit to merit new patronage, and we should be pleased if those who have not dealt with us will give us a trial.

OUR DEATH ROLL.

Well Known Citizens Pass to Their Final Record.

On Saturday last at a Salem hospital, Miss Lucy VanTassel passed away after an illness of only short duration, of throat trouble. Miss VanTassel had been a resident of Dallas some five years, having come here with her mother, Mrs. Frank Fuchs, who passed away sometime ago with the same disease. She was born in Chicago in 1890. The funeral was held from the Methodist church Sunday afternoon, and she was laid to rest beside her mother in the Odd Fellows cemetery. Miss VanTassel was a a young lady possessed of many accomplishments and a temperment of sunshine, and she leaves many friends to mourn her loss besides her stepfather, Mr. Frank Fuchs, and her young stepbrothers.

Mrs. Ruth Hubbard, wife of James Hubbard, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Guy, passed away at her home near Dallas Monday night, of blood poison, superinduced by a fall. Mrs Hubbard was a happy bride of only a few months, and her sudden taking off is mourned by many friends and relatives. She was aged 24, and had been a resident of Dallas all her life.

You are hereby notified that the city council of the city of Dallas, Oregon, has estimated the cost of constructing sewers with branches or laterals extending from such sewers to the property line of each lot or parcel of ground, adjacent to and abbutting upon the streets or parts of streets where such sewers are to be laid, as in Ordinance No. 112, of said city, provided to be made, to be as follows: For Washington Street Sewer District, $5,500.00; for Oak Street Sewer District, $5,000.00; for Clay Street Sewer District, $5,000.00; or $15,500.00 in the aggregate.

You are further notified that said council will sit in the council chamber in said city on the 4th day of January, 1909, at 7:30 o'clock in the evening for the purpose of apportioning the cost of such improvement, and assessing upon each lot or part of lot or parcel of ground liable therefor, its proportionate share of such cost. That all owners and other persons in interest may attend at said time and place and show cause if any they have, why such apportionment and assessment of cost should not be made.

Done by order of the city council of the city council of the city of Dallas, Oregon, made on the 21st day of December, 1908.

Witness my hand and the official seal of the city of Dallas, this 22nd day of December, 1908.
