A SUDDEN DEATH.

George Cramer Falls Dead While Washing His Hands.

Tuesday noon our community was shocked to learn of the sudden death of Geo. P. Cramer, who has for the last two years been associated with Fred Wagner in the blacksmith shop. Mr. Cramer had not been feeling well for some time, but continued at work as he felt capable of doing so. Tuesday he felt even better than usual, and it was remarked upon by his associates in the shop. Going to wash his hands at the sink on the back porch before lunch, he suddenly fell over against the kitchen door, and although Mrs. Cramer and Starbuck as soon as possible, he was dead before medical aid reached him. The remains were taken to Frances, Washington, Wednesday, for burial. Fred Wagner accompanying them, and Mrs. Cramer going with Mrs. Cramer as far as Portland.
Mr. Cramer was a native of New York state, and was 51 years of age last November. He had lived in Brownsville, Albany and near Portland since coming to this state, and was known as an expert iron worker and first class horse shoer. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife, who has been a great sufferer from rheumatism for the last 15 years, and one married daughter, Mrs. O. A. Custer, whose body was taken. Mrs. Cramer has only been a resident of Dallas since last March. Mr. Cramer carried life insurance of $2000 each in the Woodmen of the World, Maccabees and Bankers' Life. He was a member of the Catholic church and nothing but good can be said of his conduct through life by his fellow men.
Mrs. Cramer will return here to settle up her business affairs, and then go to Frances, where she also owns property.

IT IS WHISPERED ABOUT

That if the Oregonian would publish all that Walter Tooze sends in Dallas would not be behind in the advertisement race.
That our ammunition dealers are not kicking because Bill White, John Grant and Chief Odum are trying to improve their marksmanship, and that jackrabbits are beginning to be leary of them.
That Dean Collins thinks the Oregonian's poetry corner not the most prominent place in that sheet.
That Milt Miller was not in Polk county this week entirely to visit the normal and represent Governor West.
That Ned Shaw considers times awful dull while there are no local ball games.
That Tom Notson really does not rob as many hen roosts as Frank Morrison says he does.
That the second ward now has things their way in the city council.

That Walter Fuller's scheme for a city crematory should be patented—provided he can find a big enough hole to dump the garbage into.
That the editor is not stuck on the josh of his having to get a son by proxy.
That Company H will soon be after you for the biggest stunt ever staged in Dallas—and will want the stage, too.
That Williams street may get that desired private sidewalk, and it may not.

That if it takes our street scraper six months to get to the metropolis of Oregon from New York, it will take at least a month to get here from Portland.
That Boots Kersey has a steady job as hop yard manager.
That there are now more candidates for clerk and sheriff next election than can possibly be accommodated.

That the carnival would have had another attraction if Lee Fenton had not put a kibosh on it.
That a certain old bachelor of Dallas, whom even his closest friends do not suspect, has at last been roped and hog tied.
That Chief Odum and Nightwatch Grant are thinking strongly of donning uniforms—if they can get the clothes bought by popular subscription.

That Ralph Williams does not spend half the week in Portland entirely to look after state politics and his business interests.
That Charley Gregory has not added much to the dignity of his office by his new headgear.
That Otho Williams is the best informed man in town.

That Jake has been formally elected town booster.
That Judge Holman is now trying to make out that he is our grandfather.
That Andy Muir has not missed a meeting of the commercial club.
That Judge Coad is worried when he sees a bunch of Dallasites come into his court room, and will hereafter sit tight on the lid of the money pot.

That Ike Yoakum, John Foster and a lot more of the boys are kicking because they were in such a hurry to contract their hops.
That John Miller tried to get us out of bed Tuesday night, but could not make it.
That Sam Ray is the most active man of his age in town.

That Dallas will have a free mail delivery before many months elapse.
That Ernestus Dalton and Charley Hayes think they have the finest furniture show room in the valley—and they have.
That LaCreole club has no time for a ladies' night—want all the tables they have for their own use.

WANT MORE ADVERTISING.

Everybody Asked to Help Make Tempting Exhibit.

The following night letter was recently received by Secretary Tooze, and at the request of the Dallas Commercial club we give it space in order that all may help in showing the many colonists now coming into the state what Polk county can offer in the way of products:

Do you want to get full benefits from the colonist rates which commence September 15th? Then send immediately to the undersigned literature regarding your section. Thousands of strangers visit the Free Exhibit of Oregon's Resources and Bureau of Information of the Portland Chamber of Commerce, and the business men of Portland are anxious to have your literature distributed here at no cost to you. If you have fruits or other products which you are proud of, ship them to us and we will process them, furnish the jars, label them, giving the name of the grower and where raised, and place them on exhibit free of charge. In order to derive full benefits to your community haste is necessary. Remember Portland is working for all Oregon, and its business men are spending thousands of dollars a year on the Portland Chamber of Commerce Exhibit and in other ways to prove it.

Address literature and exhibits to the
PORTLAND CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
E. C. Giltner, Secretary,
69 Fifth Street,
Portland, Oregon.

Had Arm Broken

Dr. B. H. McCallon was called to Rickreall Friday to attend Fred Thielsen, who had suffered a bad fracture of the left arm at the flouring mill there, while pulling on a belt to start the machinery. Although what is known as a committed break, Mr. Thielsen will not receive permanent injury, and is rapidly recovering.

Rushing the Work.

The hauling of crushed rock to put on the Dunlop hill, just newly graded and filled, was commenced this morning. The recent rain storms caught it before it was macadamized, and teams had to go around by Enns' to get to town. Both the Lyons and the city crushers will now be operated and the rock put on from both ends to get the hill in fair shape as soon as possible.

Get Ready for the Winter

We are now prepared to show the largest and most complete line of Men's and Boys' Clothing, Hats and Shoes in the history of our business. Owing to the increase in our trade we have doubled the capacity of our floor space.
