While I realize that nearly every commercial fruit grower understands thoroughly what precautions are necessary for the prevention of pests and diseases who either through lack of time or knowledge fail to remove from their or some of the worst or knowledge fail to remove from their orchards some of the worst sources of disease with which we have to contend. A fence row overgrown with wild rose briars, seedling apple trees, and rasp-berry bushes offers the best conceivable brdeding place for anthracnose and San Jose scale. Both raspberry and blackberries are subject to anthracnose and if grown in or about an orchard should be thoroughly sprayed with lime, sulphur. With wild rose bushes, it is also a case of the worst with the content of the state of the state
