The trip taken last week by Portland newspaper men through the Willamette valley will open their eyes to a good many things, and probably establish a custom that should be followed up during different seasons of the year, giving their papers a much better chance to boost the valley, and to know from personal contact with the people what they are talking about. It will also give some of them a better geographical sense of the state, so that in what they do write they will not be continually confusing Dallas and The Dalles, two widely different sections in every respect. Cut short as this trip had to be, it will give the Portland writers material for essays for months to come in respect to the many different resources of our valley, and prove to them at first hand that the country newspapers have not been drawing the long bow about the many advantages that we have. If these writers do their duty, the trip will be of inestimable value to each section of the country that they come in contact with, and be a better advertisement for Polk county than thousands of booklets or special additions, on which so much money is needlessly and thoughtlessly thrown away by so many communities.

Dallas should wake up to the fact that we have got to have a canner, if we expect to keep up with the progress march of this valley and compete with other towns in the matter of dividing up our large tracts of land into small holdings that will be profitable to the investor. Other towns have realized the fact that they can not sell their land in small tracts for the raising of small fruits unless a market is provided. Corvallis, for instance, is wide awake on that proposition, and the result is that her real estate men are doing a thriving business, while ours are starving to death. Not long ago that town had 40 car loads of beans for export, all raised in the vicinity, but were up against it for labor to get the stuff stripped and ready for the cannery. The woman's club of the town, seeing the necessity, came to the rescue, and the most prominent society ladies of the town got in and helped strip beans so that those who had raised the crop would not fail in getting the result of their labor on the market at the proper time and in good shape. Dallas could be raising and shipping such things just as well as Corvallis, had we a cannery, but no one can be expected to plant anything of the kind and expend a season's labor for a very doubtful market. It is the grower of these small things that makes a country prosperous and thickly inhabited, and the sooner we realize the fact, the better for us all. Delayed action in providing a cannery is doing more than any other one thing to keep back the growth of this community. Let us get together and see that we have one before another season rolls around.

The lecture of Prof. Barton's on White Slavery here last week was well attended. He pointed the way to abolish the evil to a great extent, and by means of pictures made plain what is being done to wrong and ruin our young and unsophisticated girls. We use the word, unsophisticated not in the distinction as between city and country life, but as in the girl herself. There is no more unsophisticated being in the world than the young girl along certain lines, and the most unsophisticated ones of them all are those, whether in the city or country, who think they know it all—and these latter are the easiest prey for the male brute, who is constantly on the lookout for that class. The Itemizer has always held that the great remedy for this evil lies more with the parents than with anyone else. If the father and mother perform their duty toward their girls, the white slavers would soon find their occupation gone, for it is the carelessness of parents that gives the opening wedge for the later disastrous results. Recruits for the underworld will always be found in large numbers, but a proper home atmosphere will keep the great majority of girls pure and unsullied.

In making a study of grazing lands on the national forests, 125 entirely new species of plants have been discovered by the government's experts, and will be named and classified by the botanists of the department of agriculture. Their discovery came about through the collection of some 9,000 different plant specimens, with notes as to their habits of growth and forage value. This work is part of a comprehensive plan to determine the grazing value of every acre of national forest land, in which the capacity of the soil to grow certain forage crops is to be determined and an effort made to decide for which class of stock—sheep, cattle or goats, the range is best suited. The men who have made the studies have combined the qualities of practical stockmen and trained botanists. They divided the area into such small subdivisions that maps have been prepared which show exactly the kind of feed which grow on each acre, and the time of year it is ready for grazing. The maps also show the stock's water supply and indicate the kind of stock best suited to the area. The investigation also showed the examiners many areas covered with flourishing plants which apparently should furnish excellent grazing, but which were not of a character relished by stock. These areas, therefore, had little or no stock-carrying capacity. As a result of the study, the forest service announces that it will be in a position to perfect its system of grazing management to bring about still better conditions for both stock and range.

On the matter of the Cooper Hollow road was brought up by Mr. Muir and provoked general discussion. Only a matter of $400 lies in the way getting the road, and it was agreed by all talking on the subject that Dallas was continually losing trade to Monmouth because the road was not opened. On motion of Patterson the committee on roads and highways was ordered to take the matter up with the county court, and arouse those along the line of the proposed road to assist in getting it through.

J. R. Craven reported for the railroad committee that nothing had been done so far in the matter of getting better transportation for Dallas. Muir advocated a visit to Portland by a number of our business men and confer with the S. P. officials to this end. The committee reported that after consultation with Mr. Fields they were informed that there would be no change in train schedule, but that we might get a new depot some day.

IR. R. Commissioners' Meeting.

The railroad commissioners held a meeting in the county court room yesterday to inquire into the merits of a case where Leonard Livermore claimed that he was being deprived of a couple of railroad crossings. It seems that when the old narrow gauge was built Mr. Livermore gave them a right of way through his 600 acres of land near Smithfield. A crossing was maintained for years at each end of the place and one in the center. When the law was passed compelling railroads to fence their rights of way, two of the crossings were closed, leaving only the middle one. This did not suit Mr. Livermore, and he protested to the commission. Oscar Hayter represented Mr. Livermore and the S. P. had an attorney. Five witnesses were examined for the former and two for the latter. A decision by the board is expected to be announced in a few days.

Farewell Party.

At their hall last evening Almira Rebekah lodge tendered two of their most popular members, Mrs. J. L. Castle, who goes to make her home in Portland, and Miss May Shelton to Roseburg, a farewell party. These ladies have both held high offices in this well known order and to show the appreciation of their work and the esteem in which they are held, about 40 members came to tell them goodbye. For their pleasure Miss Edna Morrison and Miss Pearl Owings sang and Miss Ada Longnecker played a piano solo. Mrs. Castle and Miss Shelton will be greatly missed in social circles of this city. Refreshments were served.
