Hollister a Live Wire.
Marshall Sun, April 30th, 1914.
Frederick Hollister, of North Bend, is closing one of the most brilliant campaigns ever put up in this district by a democrat for the congressional nomination. Hollister was never known to do things by halves, and in this like all of his undertakings, he has applied that indomitable energy that has won for him such distinguished success in the legal line and in the business world. He has conducted a clean campaign and if echoes from the press and street talk can be taken as indicating a popular favorite, Hollister will land the nomination in a walk. This section has long been neglected, even when considering congressional candidates, and Mr. Hollister is the first man that ever entered the race from Coos. It is not strange that this locality, irrespective of party predilections, takes an interest and a pardonable pride in Mr. Hollister's candidacy. Few people are better known in Coos than Fred Hollister, and where ever he has traveled in the outside counties embraced in this district he has met with enthusiastic encouragement. That Hollister has made a success of his own affairs and is one of Coos County's foremost and most prominent business men, should give the demo-rats full assurance that they are voting for a man of sufficient calibre to handle the affairs of this district in congress. Fred Hollister is a full fledged, progressive; one of the kind that never gives up; he has a superabundance of grit, sticktoativeness in fact, his general make-up is energy, personified. Anyone that knows Fred knows that he has these essentials which most fittingly fit him for the position for which he aspires.
