LECTURE COURSE ASSURED

Five Numbers Will be Presented by Christian Endeavor Unions of City.

Final arrangements for putting on a winter lecture course have at last been completed, having been held up from time to time for various reasons.

The Endeavor Union of Dallas, a union of Christian Endeavor societies of the various churches have arranged their plans for the course and the work of taking subscriptions for season tickets is in the hands of the committees.

The course will consist of five entertainments given at the Armory at 10 o'clock during the winter and is made up of two musical numbers, two entertainments of note and a lecture by Dr. James McLaren on "The Flags of the World."

The first number will be the Stratford male quartette, a most excellent group of vocalists and instrumentalists.

The second will be Ross Crane, entertainer, who has been before the public for upwards of nine years and is pronounced an artist in his line.

The third will be Dr. McLaren, who will give a most interesting lecture, "The Flags of the World" will be of peculiar interest at this time when the thrones of Europe are tottering and the world faces at almost certain that some of the flags of the world will be only a memory in the future. Dr. McLaren comes in January and his message will be of interest at that time.

McLaren will be followed by "Bellhars," entertainer, who has been before the public for eleven years, having given over twenty-five hundred entertainments in the United States and Canada. Bellhars is a character actor and a most successful and reader of national reputation.

Last but not least, the Ionian Serenaders, ladies quartette coming this year from eastern successes, giving their folk songs and readings together with instrumental and vocal selections both singly and in quartette and duet.

Admission is free, but a contribution will be solicited for the benefit of an entertainment, so that those who guarantee the entertainment have the choice of seats.

Sing-a-long sessions on the night of entertainment, 50 cents.

The proceeds above expenses will be divided among the societies who solicit subscriptions to the course proportionate to the number of season tickets disposed of by the society.

A display window has been arranged for on Main street to show the featured advertised. This will appear during the next few days.

There will be some keen friendly rivalry between the various endeavor societies as to selling season tickets, so get ready to support your endeavor people. They will do good with the money and you will help secure a splendid set of entertainments that could not be secured in any other way.

Notice to Parents

The Dallas city schools will open next Monday morning.

I desire to announce that my stock of text books is now complete, and that our stock of school supplies is bigger and better than ever before.

I hold to the theory that the little workman can not do good work without good tools, and for this reason I have raked the markets of the United States for the very best pencils, tablets, pens, erasers and other supplies that money can buy.

Parents and guardians are earnestly invited to visit the store and let us prove to them that it will be real economy to purchase their school supplies here for the coming year.

Contrary to the oft-repeated assertion, the cost of school books is not high, especially when compared with the price of fiction and other books. A complete set of text books for the full eight years' course would cost $10.87. Dividing this amount by eight, shows the actual average cost to be $1.36 a year—probably not a greater amount than many persons spend in a year for peanuts.

As I am positively required to pay cash for school books, and as I make absolutely no profit on their sale, I will take it as a great favor if my customers will not ask for credit, as these books must be sold for cash.

Also, please do not bring in for exchange any old books used year before last, as the time for exchanging these books for the books now in use expired January 1st of this year.

Osteopathy.

The chronic case first started in acute form; it is the advanced stage of the acute in which, no doubt, complications have become a factor; therefore, it is but reasonable to expect osteopathy to cure simple acute disorders promptly and speedily when it is daily curing stubborn chronic cases. Typhoid fever, pneumonia, in grippe, appendicitis, dysentery, headaches, neuralgia, insomnia, bronchitis, etc., yield more readily to the scientific application of natural laws or natural cures than most people are prepared to believe as a matter of current report until they see a demonstration. Resort to an osteopathic physician in the time of trouble and get the benefit of a personal experience. That convinces better than anything.—Osteopathic Health.
