with its

Home Office at Salem, Or., (in the State Insurance Building) and Branch Offices in Portland, Astoria and Albany, also for sale a large lot of Grain, Stock and Fruit Farms, also City and Suburban Property.

THE OREGON LAND CO.

Was specially organized for the purpose of buying and subdividing large tracts of land, and has, during the past two years, bought and subdivided over 3200 acres of land into five to twenty acre tracts. The success of this undertaking is shown in the fact that out of 280 tracts of land placed in the market, 225 have been sold.

We claim that ten acres of choice land in fruit will yield a larger income than 100 acres in wheat in the Mississippi valley.

We also make valuable improvements in the way of roads, fences, etc. We can sell a small tract of land for the same price per acre as you would have to pay for a large farm.

Send for pamphlet, maps and price sheet.

NEWS FROM COBOSH.

I have had news for you this time. We have had a proclamer coming here and giving our most respected muckrakers, and tried to make out that a Phari-see would enter Peter's Gate. If that is the case what will J and I do?

When we had a wild eyed organizer of the Citizens' Alliance start a branch here. Then came a tyro, who did the same trick for a Farmer's Alliance, and in the little town of Defiance, next door to us they have a big grange. All of these fellows say, "Put the rascals (meaning us) out."

But we will show them a trick or two. We have not been in the political business for twenty years without learning that when you can't stuff the boxes any longer, then you want to talk "B-r-a-m" with a big R, and then work the J. J. just the same.

When a farmer, politician or common laborer thinks he can get away with a lawyer or any of the "profess," he is off.

Now, don't you think we republicans and democrats ought to run an anti-hayseed party and divide the offices? Why, they even talk of sending our city treasurer, who embezzled (this call it stealing) $100,000, to the pen. And one of the same men who talk that way, were on a jury who turned loose a common vulgar thief, who stole a loaf of bread to keep her child from starving. Her husband worked on the railroad, and was discharged without his pay.

What an exonerate! But John D. will fix them, but I must close, for here comes the sheriff.

BREEDING FOR A PURPOSE

Eastern Oregon is over run with a class of mongrel-bred horses that he is not much sale for, except at very low prices. I believe this is owing principally to a lack of knowledge in horsemen of the principles of breeding and the laws of hereditary transmission.

Breeding to mongrel stock is like getting a dog does not know what he is going to get. Mongrel-bred animals seldom have any prominent points, i. e. they have not power to transmit their own peculiarities to their offspring with any certainty. The progeny will take after the parent that has the longest line of inheritance from a family of fixed characteristics. If we breed a scrub mare to a pure bred percheron stallion, the offspring will invariably take after the stallion. This is because the stallion, comes from a family of fixed characteristics. The percheron have been an established breed for hundreds of years, so when we breed a mongrel mare to a full blood percheron horse, he has a complete monopoly of the whole business.

There are other prominent breeds of draft horses, such as the Clydesdale, the Sh. F. folk and Shire horses. Let every one breed for a purpose; if he wants to raise trotting horses, breed in trotting horses, and stick to it, but don't mix breeds.

I know a man who has a half-breed Clyde mare that he claims to have paid $350 for in the Willamette. This mare bred to an imported Cleveland Bay stallion, with the expectation of getting a large animal with the style and action of the Cleveland Bay. The colt thus bred will be three years old in the spring, and when grown, will probably be worth from $75 to $100. It has the size of the Cleveland Bay, and the form and slow action of the Clydesdale. Had the mare been bred to a pure-bred Clydesdale stallion, the colt would bring from $500 to $800, if it should be a stallion.

Men who are ignorant of the laws of hereditary transmission, say that they look at the animal and not the pedigree. It is all well enough to look at the horse,

CAMP LIFE.

HERE'S THE SLICKER.

The one thing you'd always find in every cowboy's outfit when he goes in the spring roundup is a "Fish Brand" Pumped Slicker. They make the only perfect saddle coat, and come either black or yellow. They protect the whole front of the rider's body, being made to fit round the outside of the saddle. When used with a rubber coat, the extra seams easily cover up each other, making a regular overcoat with a double storm-proof front. When riding, the saddle is dry as a bone, from pomel to cantle, and the rider is entirely protected in every part of his body. These "Slickers" being of extra width, make fine blankets for camp. If worn, I mention here, one, every garment stamped with "Fish Brand" Trade Mark. Don't accept any inferior coat when you can have the "Fish Brand Slicker" delivered without extra cost. Particulars and illustrated catalogue free.

Men who are ignorant of the laws of hereditary transmission, say that they look at the animal and not the pedigree. It is all well enough to look at the horse, but the pedigree should be examined as well. It makes no difference how fine a horse he might be, if he does not come from a family of fixed characteristics, he will not transmit his good qualities to his offspring with any certainty.

I would like to see a law enacted making it a criminal offense to let stallions run on the range at any season of the year. If one man is trying to improve his horses, it is an imposition for his neighbor to turn a scrub stallion on the range. I do not particularly object to a neighbor raising scrub horses, but I do object to them competing me to raise them. There is a law to prevent them from running at large in certain months in the year, but if I understand it right, there is not much chance to recover damages in a wild country like this.

G. A. R. BOYS.

An Iowa Reunion Which May Interest Our Readers.

J. F. Willis, Commander of Rawling Post, No. 31, Dept. of Oregon, late of Co. G, 10th Iowa, hands us the following, clipped from the Indianapolis, (Ind.) Weekly Herald:

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 10, 1891. On the evening of December 24, four of the comrades of Co. G, 10th Iowa, banded at the home of A. A. Willis, near Lacona, and demanded rations and lodging for the night. They were accommodated, for Willis had also served in the same company with them, knew that his home would suffer unless he quietly yielded to their demands. This he did and dispatched a messenger to Lacona to inform R. T. Ellison of the visitors, and invite him to spend the evening with the boys, making six of Company G, 10th Iowa, holding a reunion. The names of the four visitors were: Elias Hicks, W. A. Parker, John Barker, of Sandyville, and E. J. Hicks, of Republic county, Kan., a brother of Elias who was visiting in old Warren among relatives and friends. It will soon be thirty years since these same boys, with many others enlisted at Indianapolis, under Capt. Henderson, left home and friends to do battle for their country. Then they were full of life and vigor, buoyant with hope of an early and complete victory which would soon return them home again. I need not be told how their hopes were realized. Some of them followed Sherman in his march to the sea. Now they are all broken down with premature age. Two of them - Elias, and the youngest, forty-seven. This was the first time we had met the boys since the close of the war. Two of them, Parker and E. J. Hicks, are suffering with extreme weak eyes, almost blind. Two of them were captured and sent to V. A. Willis and Elias Hicks at Belle Isle, where Willis came near dying and was saved only through the brotherly care of Hicks, who, while Willis was sick with a fever, at a time when the James river was frozen so as to carry footmen safely over, and with no wood or fuel of any kind nor shelter to protect them from the chilly blast of winter, while Willis was lying there exposed to the bleak wind, Hicks with his hands piled the sand up against him, and then with the kindest attention he was enabled to pull through. Hicks was afterwards transferred to Andersonville, where he was kept over seven months, and suffered all the horrors of that rebel hell. Hicks related the following bit of experience while at Andersonville which we think worthy of space in your paper. He had, when admitted into Andersonville, about one-half of an old army blanket with which he tried to make a tent or place in which to sleep, by bundling some small sticks after the fashion of wagon boxes, sticking each end in the ground, or in the sand, rather, then using the half blanket for a covering and using pine branches to make out the little roof, and he says he was surprised at the shelter from rain and sun which this afforded him. Now comes the funny part. In his rations of corn meal, he frequently found whole grains of corn, and more through curiosity than any other motive, he planted several of these grains of corn along the outer edge of his hut, or tent, as he called it, in the sand. The dripping from the pine branches when it would rain, gave sufficient moisture to sprout the corn, and soon it was growing nicely. He said he had several lights and skirmishes to protect his crop, and now night when asleep he was awakened by that peculiar sound made when tramping a roasting ear from the stock, and scrambling from his nest he found himself confronted by an Irishman who had thought to appropriate some of this corn to satisfy his intense hunger, but at the sight of Hicks he ascertained, muttering some Irish gibberish about the infamy of man to the race. That stalk of corn did, but from the whole crop thus planted and cultivated, Hicks says he enjoyed two good meals of roasting ears, baked in an old oyster can, numbering about twenty tubs in all. At Mr. Willis' that night, the boys were all happy. They told all the army stories they had ever known or heard. They sang all the army songs they knew or could find, and not being satisfied with army songs, they used the "Gospel Hymns" and other church music (for he remembered they were all church members except one, and we believe he is likely to be at no distant day) until midnight or later. The next day they all took dinner at the home of R. T. Ellison, in Lacona, after which they returned to their homes. This ended a very pleasant reunion of seven of Company G, for see called on Capt. J. M. Cochran in the post office at Lacona, making seven of the Company together. We will not all meet again in all probability at least in this world. Boys, let us try to be ready for the last roll call above - let us meet in heaven. ONE OF THEM.
