finding out whether they can be so fed without fatal results. We fed them until April and lost no hogs in conse-quence. The seed was thoroughly steamed, both with and without turmps, after which it was generally mixed with some bran before being fed. The hogs soon learned to eat it and seemed to become very fond of it, doing much better than before we began feeding seed, or after we quit. While we have never tried feeding ronsted cotton seed, it is very deabtful if it is an improvement on steaming. However, we expect to try the roasting process and will report results later on.—J. E. SPRING CHICKENS.

How to Produce the Deat times to the

In the middle states it is a good of it for the housewife to set severy ows a desire to sit of (er to more) March, and continue to do so until she has provided a liberal supply of chicks for family use, besides allowing herself the privilege of selecting a sufficient number of handsome pullets to take the place of superannuated old hens in the By adopting this plan she will have most of her chicks come off in April and

May, the most suitable time for them, and the work of taking care of them will be soon done and over with. If she keeps one of the three most popular general purpose breeds-Plymouth Rocks, Wyanlottes or Houdans—the young cockerels of the early hatch will be large enough to begin using them for the table by the first of June while the pr begin to lay in the fall, or if they tain a strain of Leghorn, during mid summer Every poultry keeper knows that the earlier he can get his pullets to mature and begin laying, the greater profit will there be in his work. In fact, unless one does gets the pullets to laying well by September, I do not see how it is postion. Fig. I shows the rack after it is sible to keep a year round engagement put together as it stands on the wagon for eggs, for after the moulting season to hold the hogs, sheep or calves, and sets in adult hens lay very few eggs. Fig. 3 shows precisely the same thing and often none at all for several months. Taking these facts into consideration, all keepers of fowls, whether on a large theory," that confronts the people of time country. High taxes, mortgages, debts and hard work are pretty good evidences and hard work are pretty good evidences long, as may be desired) 2 by 6 inches. ing straight along with no stopping long enough to get sick. A healthy, robust chick will throw off a disease which a feeble, half starved little one will suc cumb to without a struggle. Keep good, wholesome, rich food within reach of them until two weeks old, then feed thrice daily until six weeks of age, after which a liberal meal morning and night is sufficient, compelling them to go off between whiles and forage.

Scarcely any two people believe in feeding fowls alike, but the following is the most successful method I have tried: For the first two weeks give stale bread, one-half each of flour bread and corumeal, egg bread preferred. Soften this in hot, sweet milk and season with bits of meat chopped time or dripping, adding a flavoring of red pepper in cool or rainy weather. For the next four weeks prepare half their daily ration as at first, while the other half may consist of whole sound wheat and cracked corn boiled till soft. After this it is bester that one-half their food shall consist of small dry grain, and the remainder of either or both kinds of the soft cooked foods. Remember to give all their food rather stiff, and let none remain to sour or ferment. Some feet dry grain after two weeks, or, indeed earlier than that, but there is always danger that a greedy little chick may eat more than he can manage, and then it will swell in his crop and kill him. Scalding the grain over night is to some extent a prevention. Keep some sort of grit near the coop al-ways; powdered eggshells will do for the little ones. Supply green food until they are old enough to gather it for themselves, and if possible give sweet milk once a day in cool weather and twice in warm, allowing it to remain only long enough for them to drink, as much liquid is unwholesome for very young chicks.

Parasites are the most troublesome all the little chick's foes, and so insidious are they in their approach that we must be very watchful to circumvent them. Cleanliness is the best precaution, and when first putting out a brood dust the hen and chicks with insect poweach storphete is a der. If this cannot be had, rub their strong iron staple bolted through the thingles, breast and head with a bit of thingles, breast and head with a bit of lard. Anointing the chicks in the same way when one or two weeks old is also shown in Fig. 1. These staples are about advised, and if a tiny bit of lard be applied and the work be done at evening in clear, mild weather there is no dan-

No matter how loudly the chicks and their mother protest, keep them in their coops out of the rain, the dew and the cold, damp weather, for from whatever causes gapes accrue, we know that it seldom troubles chicks that are kept dry. warm and confortable. To insure this, I find it best to place the coops of my early chicks under a long shed, which is open on one side to admit the sunshine. Here their feeding coops are also placed, so in bad weather the little fellows are content with a nice dry run and their mother clucking in the coop near by calling them in now and then to nestle for warmth among her soft feathers. Such a shed as this-mine is 8 by 16 feet, with an overhanging roof earthen floor-may be built at very little expense, and after the season for young chicks is over it forms an excellent dusting place and resting place, too, for the rest of the flock .- H. C. Dudley in American Cultivator.
