SUNDAY AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Just at present there is a fulsome bandying of words over the disposition to be made of Sunday at the World's Fair. The religionists petition and insist that the great exposition shall be closed to all visitors on Sunday. The secularists insist that such an arbitrary ruling is irrational and discourteous. Taking the world as it is, and men as they are, it would seem the wiser course, to let the gates be open to all who choose to attend that day, while the devoutly inclined are left to seek such sanctuaries as they choose. The Great Teacher in true human Catholicity said, "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." The Puritanical doctrine that Sunday is a divine enactment and a holy time, in the sense of changing moral quality of one's actions, is fast yielding to more liberal views. The quality of man's thoughts cannot be determined by the day of the week, the phase of the moon or the particular season of the year. All good conduct should be in the eternal present. Right is right, and wrong is wrong, without relation to the days of the week. What is bad Tuesday and Friday cannot be accounted righteousness on Sunday.

Sunday is a good institution and most people are anxious to sustain it for its moral and practical utility. You all do not want to be dictated to, so to how your particular benefits from it are to be derived.

Ever since the grand old law-giver, Moses, with keen insight into the needs of man, tried to set to rest the idolatrous practices of the mystic East, whose star worshipping devotees were dreaming out uncouth relations between earth and heaven, has Sunday been a day of rest, of worship, of recreation, according to the benefit sought by him who recognized it?

The plea, that to open the fair upon Sunday would be a national attack upon the institution of Christianity is narrow and fanatical. Sunday never had its inception in Christianity, any more than the desecration, or the arts and sciences or the constitutions of nations.

If the history of Sunday proves anything, it is that the day has grown out of human want for rest, and recreation and comfort.

While these ends may include religion, they can never make the day exclusively religious. The Buddhist may worship at his shrine, the Christian meditate and pray, he who loves nature, seek solace amidst sylvan shades and flowers, while devotees of art, literature and science are left to exercise their choice in fields of research that shall be to them the most satisfying.

If the fair is to be made a religious institution, by closing its gates to the public on Sunday, it will be logically proper to have noon-day prayer meetings and devotional services on the grounds during the week.

During the fair there will be constantly within the city from 75,000 to 100,000 strangers. There will be open a thousand places of resort absolutely demoralizing, to which hundreds and thousands will seek access in lieu of attending the fair if this be closed. To be sure, those who know how to use leisure, will not be so diverted, but the great trouble with most people who abuse Sunday and all spare time, is, they have not yet learned this valuable lesson. Thousands of respectable people do not know how to be wisely idle, or to enjoy rest when it is within their grasp. To wander amidst beautiful flowers, master-striking paintings, to look upon the master works of genius in any field, to listen to grand music is to be lifted up. To surrender to carnal desires is to be bound down. If the people who urge this fanaticism were at all familiar with life in a great city, they would, as did Charles Kingsley, the greatest English divine of his time, declare in favor of the opening of the Crystal Palace upon Sunday as a means of saving strangers from the puritanical haunts of London during that great exposition.

Every great city of the world in modern civilization, has learned that the best means of making Sunday a peaceful, useful day to its over-crowded population, is to furnish recreation, educating entertainments to those whom the strife for bread, immures in the shop and the office during the week. Tens of thousands could visit the fair Sundays who would have no other opportunity, and it would be a sermon to them, more potent for good than all the divines of Chicago might be able to preach. For there are sermons in art and artifice, and subtle mechanism, to touch the inmost recesses of the soul that target language can never reach. Let the gates of the fair, the doors of the churches, swing open Sunday, and human minds will be awakened, and the educating process, that makes such bigoted opposition to progressive ideas possible, will be encouraged. Facts will supplant superstition.

It is hoped that our people will carefully consider the proposition of H. V. Gates, and dispose of it to our best interests. What will be paid in taxes, in the event that the measures carry, will be saved in the low rate of insurance which will then be established. Besides the protection to property, and perhaps life, will be such as to warrant the adoption by our people, of the plans offered. Again we say, people of Heppner, consider carefully every feature of the proposition. Don't decide one way or the other till you are positively convinced, from every point of view, that you are on the right track, then go ahead. Your decision means much for Heppner's future—whether we shall continue, as business men, to take unusual and unshared for risks, or go ahead as of old at the mercy of the sea, and whether we shall further add danger and disaster by the continued use of coal oil

A Pure Cream Tartar Powder. ROYAL. TAYLOR'S ONE SPOON. Contains Ammonia. Contains Alum and Ammonia.

Dr. Price gives larger and fuller cans than those of any other Baking Powder manufacturer.

Above cut represents the comparative size of one pound can each "Dr. Price's," "Royal" and "Taylor's One Spoon." These cans were set side by side, then photographed down in exact proportions to admit the plate in this space. Ask your grocer to set a one pound can of any other brand alongside 1 lb. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder, and observe the difference, as illustrated above.

Adulterated powders may usually be detected by their heavier bulk, as shown by the small cans, and these scantily filled, often containing a circular to help fill out the cans. It is a singular fact that many of the ammonia and alum baking powders are advertised as "Absolutely Pure." All official examinations prove that it would be safe to reject all powders labeled absolutely pure.

The economy in using Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not consist alone in the fact that much larger and fuller cans are given, but Dr. Price's is a stronger, purer and more wholesome baking powder than any other known. Does better work, and goes farther, hence more economical in every way.

What woman would use an ammonia or alum baking powder if she knew it? Such powders not only undermine the health, but ammonia gives to the complexion a sallow and blotched appearance.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is reported by all authorities as free from ammonia, alum, lime, or any other adulterant. The purity of this ideal powder has never been questioned.

or adopt a cheaper and safer mode of lighting; whether we shall continue to pay three prices for insurance in order to save a smaller amount in taxation or vice versa; whether we shall use the best means at hand to render our existence one of health and happiness or continue the risk and eke out a miserable existence. There must be a gain to offset the expense called for by the proposed improvements, else it is not a good business proposition. Look it over and the Gazette thinks you will find a corresponding item of credit for every debit.

A few months ago Benjamin P. Hutchison, better known as "Old Hutch," was the recognized king of the wheat pit at Chicago. The price of our staple food and export cereal depended upon his combinations. The fortunes of thousands were the playthings of his speculations. He was regarded with something of awe as an operator whose skill, pluck and luck were inevitable. He was a great speculative genius in the public estimation. By and by things took a turn. "Old Hutch" got on the wrong side of the market. He went up like a rocket and he came down like the stick. The latest news of him after a long chapter of eccentricities is that he is running a little establishment in New York which seems to be wavering in its development as between a cheap restaurant, a whiskey saloon, a junk shop and a museum. Here "Old Hutch" eats, sleeps and does his own washing on the premises, and talks semi religious and philosophic nonsense to the boys and men who besiege the place out of curiosity. Now he is said to be crazy; but was he not also crazy when speculating in wheat? His successes meant misery and want to many poor, and he knew it. The desire to obtain unlimited wealth was a mania, and his present antics are but the logical outcome of a diseased mind.—Oregonian.
