QUAINT EASTPORT.

The Far-East Town That Was the Scene Eastport, the scene of the recent seizure of American fishing boats by a dominion cruiser, is not, as is popularly spun cloth put on by its original owner-supposed, the most easterly town in The Washington Post says that the the United States, as a part of Lubec book is wonderfully preserved for its extends about a mile farther toward age and all of its pages are still intact the sunrise, but it is far enough east to except the first five or six that were be commonly known as "the jumpingoff place," and it is an old and interesting town. Eastport, says the New York
Sun, occupies the whole of Moose in it is of the marriage of Augustine island, which is connected with the Washington and Mary Ball in 1731, and mainland by a bridge twelve hundred the next is of the birth of George Washfeet in length and separated from the ington, February 11, 1732 (o. s.). queen's dominions by picturesque Prasamaquoddy bay. Moose island is about two miles wide by five miles long, and Eastport village is situated at its southeastern extremity upon a harbor which is open the year round, never having been closed by ice. Eastport has suffered more from disastrous fires than any other town in Maine, having been practically wiped out three times within the past half century. In 1839 the business section was swept away by the flames, and this was repeated in 1864. when two hundred and fifty thousand dollars' worth of property was burned up. Again, in 1886, the town was visited by a conflagration which destroyed one hundred and sixty-two buildings, causing a loss of eight hundred thousand dollars. The people, however, soon rebuilt their town, this time in a more substantial manner than before, when nearly all the buildings were of wood. Eastport is to-day a handsome town of something over five thousand inhabitants, the greater part of whom are connected in one way or another with the fishing industry, and all of whom seem to prosper better than the average of mankind. This is the great center of that interesting industry whose product is "little fishes biled in ile"-the sardine business. Here, annually, millions of small herring are boiled, spiced and packed in oil in little tin boxes covered all over with artistic French inscriptions-and they are just as good as any sardines, if you only want to think so, and ninety-nine people in one hundred don't know the dif-ference. If fine scenery could be boxed up and sold like little herring Eastport would soon be as rich as New York The whole place seems designed by nature for a summer residence, and when Gen. Butler was down there he declared that if the people who built Bar Harbor could have seen Eastport first the great resort of the nabobs would have been located at Passama-

They Build at the Bate of One Inch in Six Months.

The coral animal can be tamed. I be-lieve I am the first person in the world who ever accomplished the result, says George L. Bancroft. Here is a piece I tio 00 17.50 to learn how fast the coral grows, so I placed it in water where I could visit it every week and note the change. When I first visited the specimen the polyps would dart into their cells. After several visits they became so bold as to remain outside, and finally our acquaintance ripened until they would lo their work while I remained a I have stood by the hour watching the little fellows at work. They taught me that the claim of scientific men that the coral does not grow more than one inch in one hun-dred years is the sheerest nonsense. My pets builded an inch in six months. How do they work? Well, that is a rather difficult question to answer. The little animal is a sack; that is, his stomach is the biggest part of him. He is a compound animal, and increases by germination, young polyps springing from the original polyp. The upper surface is arrayed with tentacles, and the body is separated by a number of partitions that extend from the stomach to the outer skin. Between these walls the carbonate of lime is deposited.

PUT DOWN AS A HOSIER.

Amusing Incident Apropos of James Whitcomb Riley's Reputation Abroad. James Whiteomb Riley went abroad ecently, and on the vessel coming back volunteered for the regular ship's ert for the benefit of destitute mariners, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. He read a number of his poems, which were rapturously received by everybody present with the exception of two very stolid Englishmen in the front row. The following conversation ensued between them later on in the smoking room: "I say, Arthur, what was that chap's name who read the verses?" "Aw, that's Wilcox Riley-he's quite clever tradesman."

"Bless me, who'd 'a' thought it! I neard he was a literary chap and all that sort of thing."
"No, I'm told he's a hosier."

"You don't say so? Really, what a pity it is that a man like him should be tied down to a shop." And this is what it is to be the Hoosier poet 255

One day a German band began to play on the road which divided the house from the field. The cows were quietly grazing at the other end of the field, but no sooner did they hear the music than they at once advanced toward it and stood with their heads over the wall attentively listen-
