Hatter's Comb Oil is rapidly coming to the front as a leading medicine. J. A. Harrison, the Powell constable, applied it to his leg, which was recently kicked by a horse, and next day he was as active as ever. "It's the best!" Harrison says. Lyman Brown tried the oil for rheumatism with which he has been troubled for years, and this is what he says: "It kicked it after two applications."

Union Journal: Judge James D. Lamm, postmaster of Walla Walla, died Tuesday morning, after a somewhat long illness. Judge Lamm was one of the best known men in the Island Empire, and his death will bring a deep shade of sadness over those who have known him so well and respected him so greatly. For nearly forty years he has been a resident of the territory and state of Washington, and for about twenty-five years a resident of Walla Walla.

We call the special attention of our readers to the important letter which Mr. J. H. Kolman has just received from the interior.

Arthur Smith showed ye reporter, last week, a beautiful sunset, made from gold taken from the claims of Boyd & Harrington, in Grant county.

Ogleby Bros., of Birch creek, Umatilla Co., were over last week to buy cattle. They are old Lane Co. boys, former neighbors of the Matlock Bros.

John M. Brown and Tom Scott were over from Lone Rock last week, the latter leaving Friday for Philadelphia. Mr. Brown returned to Lone Rock Thursday.

Ed. Lawrence, who has been prospecting all summer in the Granite section, and with considerable success, will remain in Heppner over winter.

The Large took the "skyfuged" down at the A. F. & A. M. last Saturday night. After the degree was conferred, "the boys" indulged in an impromptu oyster supper.

A reporter called on Clerk Morrow this morning and found him busy as a bee, assisted by Deputy Wills. But a five minute wait in that neighborhood.

The M. E. (South included) and Baptist churches will unite in a Thanksgiving sermon on Thursday at 11 o'clock a. m., at the M. E. church. Rev. Palmer presiding.

The "Northwest" east of the Rockies, have been frozen up by blizzards for the past week, while our own Oregon soles like a daisy, with moss, chickadees and bully range.

Our friend A. J. Hicks is one of the editors of the C. Walla Journal, a good republican paper over at Castle Rock, Wash. Mr. Hicks is a rascal, and deserves success.

The Gazette acknowledges an invitation to attend the ball which occurred at the residence of Chas. Elder last Friday eve. We were unable to attend. A good time was reported.

Miss Martha Neville's school at Porterville closes Friday next with appropriate exercises. Miss Neville has justly earned the reputation of being one of our leading educators.

Ben N. French was over from Camas last week. Snow fell over there to the depth of two inches a few days ago, though none remained when he left home but a little on adjoining hills.

E. G. Roberts, representing the firm of Roberts & Roberts, Walla Walla tomato dealers, was in Heppner over Sunday. While here he put up an elegant monument at the grave of the late Henry Welch.

Jay Devin has added to this office's cabinet, an agricultural oddity in the shape of a carrot which is a veritable "Siamese" triplet. It occupies the same shell as the prize snake and mammoth potato.

Grant Co. News: J. N. Brown, of the law firm of Douglass & Brown of this city, came over from Heppner last week accompanied by his stenographer E. L. Freeland, to prepare a number of cases for the circuit court.

Win Jones, Joseph W. Hart and E. H. Test, of Malheur Co., came in Friday leaving this morning for home. Mr. Test is the county clerk of Malheur county, and is so popular that he has been elected four consecutive terms.

The Gazette notices that carriage No. 6, the big parade car at Portland last Thursday evening, contained the following notable passengers from Morrow county: Senator Henry Blackman, J. J. McGee, J. W. Morrow and J. P. Rhea.

"Aren't you ever going to grow old, like the rest of us?" asked a man of an acquainace he had known for some time. "Well, not so long as I can purify my blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla," was the apt reply. This man knew what he was talking about.

Mayor T. J. Matlock is laid up with a lame back, occasioned by overlifting while constructing his barn up on his Buffalo creek ranch. The building in question is complete, except painting. It is the most complete building in the county, if not in Eastern Oregon.

Many people suffer for years from rheumatism and repulsive sores, boils, and eruptions, without ever testing the marvelous curative properties of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The experiment is, certainly, worth trying. Be sure you get Ayer's Sarsaparilla and no other.

CAL SMITH INDICTED—Cal Smith, of Colfax, who made a deadly assault on his wife and daughter last summer, was indicted this week by the grand jury in session for assault with a deadly weapon with an intent to kill, and was locked up Tuesday by Sheriff Combs. Mr. Smith has been a council employee, but it is the general opinion that he will be found guilty as charged, in which case a term in the penitentiary is the lightest penalty.

LECTURE BY FORBES LAMDA—The lecture of Miss L. Ella Miller, at the Baptist church last evening, was largely attended, standing room being at a premium. She spoke of her experience in foreign lands and especially India, which was most interesting. A collection of $18.25 was taken up for the benefit of foreign missions.

IS BROAD DAYLIGHT—N. A. Long ago one of Gilman & B. Co.'s stores disappeared. If the sidewalk, in front of their store, for a time they thought they were the victims of a joke, and paid very little attention to it, but as the store was not returned, it soon became evident that the joke intended to carry this far to the fullest limit; and to this day, neither the partner or partner has put in an appearance. Practical thievery is mighty common in these parts, and won't stop till some one gets his hide stuck so full of buckshot that it won't hold shucks.

The Gazette has enough respect for law and order not to advocate such measures, but one extreme is sure to bring on another, and a considerable pilfering is going on at night, it is sure to come in time.

SUDDEN DEATH.—The friends of John Willingham were startled to hear of his death this a. m. at 11 o'clock. The old gentleman was stricken with paralysis some years ago, from which he never entirely recovered. Mr. Willingham was an old settler in Heppner, coming from Missouri to this country. His age was 71 years. Services will occur at the grave Thursday morning at 11 o'clock.

BYRD IS Elected.—The latest returns indicate the election of W. C. Byrd as joint representative for Grant and Harney counties, by a majority of 9 votes over his opponent A. W. Gowan. The official count in this county gave Gowan 84 majority, while that of Harney county gave Byrd 45 majority.—Eagle.

MOUNTAIN HOUSE.—Mr. Joseph Crank has lately leased the house known as the Mountain House, refitting and refurnishing it throughout. Board and bed, per week without b. d. $4.50; meals and bed 25 cents each. Mr. Crank asks a portion of the patronage, believing that he can give as good service as anyone in Heppner, and for less money.

HARVESTING POTATOES. Cheapest and Simplest Ways of Handling and Storing for Winter Use.

If the soil be clean and mellow, the patented potato diggers do good service, saving as these do both time and labor. On the majority of farms, however, these diggers are not available, and in their absence a shovel plow will answer very well. Where the crop is dug by machine or plow, it is well after the bulk of tubers have been picked up to run a smoothing harrow over the ground. This will bring to light potatoes that have been covered up or hidden from sight.

As a rule, the potatoes are left on the ground for a short time and then drawn to the cellar, roothouse or pit. A correspondent writing to the New York World says: "I aim to harvest my potatoes as soon as I find they have stopped growing. This can be easily told by the appearance of the tops. As long as a portion of the tops remains green it shows that the roots are at work and the tubers are increasing in size. After the tops die down and the skin remains smooth and firm on the tubers, as shown by rubbing them after they are dug, I prefer to have them in a cool cellar rather than in the ground where they grew. Potatoes should be dug in dry weather and be stored away in a dry condition. They should, however, be air dried and not sun dried, for exposure to the sun for any considerable time is injurious both to their quality and color. On the average I consider the potato as profitable a crop as I can raise, and about the only one where it pays me to buy fertilizer for it."

In a bulletin issued from the North Carolina station a summary of the replies given by a number of southern growers about their methods of winter storing of Irish potatoes makes it appear that all agree that the late crop is easy to keep. Many prefer to store in barrels or crates in an outbuilding; some spread on barn floors and cover with straw, but the majority prefer storing in hills outdoors and covering with earth. Nearly all agree on the necessity for keeping the potatoes cool and dark.

A Five Years' Rotation. A correspondent writing to The Rural New Yorker says:

We practice a five years' rotation, sowing timothy in the fall and clover in the spring. After the wheat has been harvested, the portion seeded down lies in grass for two years. By mixing red and alsike clover, some of the latter is found alive the second year, but nearly all of the red disappears after the first season. After two annual crops of grass have been cut, the piece is manured and plowed in spring. A part is planted to corn, the rest to potatoes. Cuts follow in the spring of the next year, followed by wheat in the fall. Two hundred pounds per acre of commercial fertilizer on the wheat is the only fertilizer used, except stable and hen manure. The latter is the most lasting in effect of all I have ever used. It is most excellent for corn. It can be spread on the sod which is to be plowed the following spring at any time after the grass is cut, or it may be applied after the plowing and harrowing in. Its effect on grass was plainly visible in one place four years after a portion of a corn field had been thus manured.

When to Cut Corn Fodder. The usual practice is to cut corn for fodder, also for silage, when the kernels begin to glaze. From the Pennsylvania station the report comes that, while small varieties increase in food value until nearly mature, in large varieties the gain is so small that it is considered better to cut when the leaves are tender. At this station, according to the bulletin quoted, fully one-half of the total food material in corn fodder was found in the ears, one-fourth to one-third in the leaves and husks (stover) and the rest in the stalks. As the cobs contained one-tenth and the stover of the stalks contained four to five times as much as the tops, it is inferred that there is considerable loss when the stalks are fed whole, which might be saved were they cut fine before feeding or preserved in silos.

Onions require to be kept in a cool and dry place, but free from frost. Vick tells in his illustrated monthly that there is probably no better way to keep them than the one usually adopted of storing them in a barn. A layer of hay is spread on the barn floor of sufficient thickness to guard against frost from the cracks below—a layer a foot thick when pressed down would be a safe one. The onions are spread out over the hay and then covered with a thick layer of hay or straw. When the onions are pulled, which should be in a dry time, they should be allowed to lie on the ground two or three days to partially dry off. They can be spread out in any dry, cool place until severe weather makes it necessary to put them into winter quarters for protection.

LONG CREEK, Or., Nov. 16, 1892.

J. H. Kolman, Heppner, Or.: DEAR SIR—The Bill of Goods I purchased from you when I was in your city last week, I am well pleased and satisfied with. Must admit that I bought them from you at almost one half what I would have had to pay elsewhere in your city. The farmers and stockmen of this and adjoining counties congratulate you on your good and noble work in opening up at Heppner and throwing a bomb shell into high prices. It is our duty to patronize you and we shall all unite in extending our patronage to the Boston Cash Store.

Brother Kolman, keep up the good work, and bless you for the bargains you are extending to us all, and hope your trade will increase tenfold, as you deserve it. With best wishes, Respectfully Yours, J. M.
