THE LEOPARD MOTH.

It Grently Damages Elms, Maples and

An insect pest which threatens to be as formidable as the gypsy moth is the leopard moth, or Zeuzera pyrina. Its preference seems to be for the various kinds of elms and maples, but it in-cludes in its ravages the oak, linden, ash, tulip and other forest trees, as well as apples, pears and currants among the

The leopard moth is large and white, with black markings, and is easily recog-nizable. The damage done by them is generally the first warn-

THE LEOPARD MOTH. Concerning this comparatively new insect Mr. Nicholas Pike, of Brooklyn. tells in Insect Life that he first noted its appearance about five years ago. A number of maple trees near his house were somewhat injured by boys (as he then supposed) breaking numerous branches, particularly on some young trees. The next year he noticed branches broken near the top of some old trees quite out of reach of the boys. These he had cut off, and after careful examination discovered the work of the insect, which he later identified as the leopard moth, Zeuzera pyrina. In 1801 it had begun its ravages all over the city of Brooklyn, and it has already spread to numerous surrounding towns. The hatching of young takes place early in June and they at this time cluster together for some hours before they separate at 1 begin life each on its own account, and this is the time when trees known to be affected should be carefully examined. The eggs are laid in a group and are covered with a loose fluffy covering. They could be very easily destroyed at this time, perhaps with some of the insecticides recommendad by the department of agriculture. Among other suggestions, Mr. Pike says it would be a good plan to build fires in the vicinity of trees that are affected, in the month of May, before the eggs are deposited, as the flames would attract the moths and probably many would be destroyed. HISTORIO BRITISH HOMES.

Mansion Three Centuries Old to Which Gordon-Cumming Took His Bride. Wollaton Hall, Lord Middleton's seat in Notts, where Sir William and Lady Gordon-Cumming spent the first days of their honoymoon, says the Pall Mall Gazette, is one of the most perfect specimens of Elizabethan domestic architecture in the country. It took eight years to build it, and it was com-pleted in 1583 by Sir F. Willoughby, the material used being Ancaster stone brought from Lincolnshire horses and exchanged for the coal found on the estate. During the reform riots of 1831 the house was threatened with the fate of Nottingham eastle, but the yeomanry was brought up in time to drive back the advancing mob. The park, which comprises some seven hun-dred and fifty agres, pleasantly undulating and well wooded—a fine avenue of lofty limes leading up to the hall—is on the edge of Nottingham, but is shut off from the vulgar gaze by a high brick wall which must have cost a small fortune, and on which, tradition has it one man spent the entire period of his apprenticeship. Picturesque as is the seat, however, it is little in favor with its noble owner, who finds the air of Notts prejudicial to his health, and his real home is at Birdsall, in Yorkshire.

Gordonston, near Elgin, is the smaller of the two Scotch country houses owned by Sir William Gordon-Cumming. Situated midway between Eigin and the Moray Firth and less than three miles distant from either the edifice, considerably smaller than Altyre house, is surrounded by rich agricultural land. Adjoining the house is the old burying place of the Gordon-Cummings, and al though the present baronet has not re-sided much in the district the great respect entertained for the memory of his father, Sir Alexander, secured for Sir William a hearty welcome from the tenantry and country people.

THE SHIP'S DOCTOR.

He Rarely Feels the Absolute Authority of the Captain.

There is one person on board a United States steamship who never, or, at all events, rarely, feels the absolute authority of the captain or commander, said a naval officer to a St. Louis Globe-Democrat reporter. That person is the ship's doctor. He is exempt from the harassing duties that the other mem bers of his mess must perform, and he never knows what it is to bear the brunt of a surly commander's displeasure in a petty affair. Everything scens to be established on shipboard to fence the captain with that dignity which doth hedge a king. He eats alone in solemn state in his cabin, and has his apartments entirely separate from those of the other officers. After awhile, unless he is naturally a good fellow, he must re ecive some impressions of the power that he may wield, and of the isolated dignity of his position. He can't be affable or cordial, and he grows to not want to be Such a man was Commander McCalla who got into that scrape recently, and was convicted of offenses by the courtmartial. McCaila was naturally a good fellow. I knew him when he was a lieutenant, and he was a very different man from the commander that behaves so brutally to his men. The com-mander may blackguard the executive officer, may saub his subordinates and treat everybedy hershly, but he must leave the ship's doctor alone. He is exempt from annoyance and abuse and his life is about the pleasantest or
