AN INCOME tax is not such a bad thing after all. It men will pile up millions of money, they can well afford to help pay the expenses of a government which gives them such grand opportunities. A man with $10,000 income per year has more to protect than one who only makes $1,000 a year.

The Grant County News is worried because the Gazette may have ventured an opinion on the question of the division of Grant county. It is a matter that will be settled by Grant county and that county alone, but the owners of the Gazette are, perhaps, as much interested in that county as the News man.

We understand there is a member of the legislature from one of the Eastern Oregon counties who has in his pocket a road bill. It would make absolutely certain good roads all over the state—the same as all those that have been passed and gone before have done. But we would caution this Eastern Oregon politician to get the bill very early in the session, and introduce his bill—for we suspect there are about eighty-nine other members who have road bills in their inside pockets, and there is nothing like getting in your bill early.—Salem Statesman. How about Marion county? She's generally at the head of the list of "wants."

WM. MORELAND, of Portland, Or., is in Kansas City looking for Jennie Semond, sometimes known as Jessie Earl and Nellie Sherman, who is heiress to an estate of $36,000, now being held by the public administrator in Portland. The woman was born in Whitehall, Ill., 31 years ago. John Brendle deserted his wife, disowned his child and went west and settled in Portland. Mrs. Brendle married John Semond and the child took his name. Mrs. Semond died ten years ago and Brendle died recently in Portland, leaving this estate. The estate is now held by the administrator and is claimed by distant relatives. Moreland thinks Jennie Semond is the rightful heir. He traced her to Omaha and to Hastings, Neb., and thence she came to Kansas City two years ago.

The future problems that will be up for consideration of the voter will be financial ones. Many voted against protection, believing that the evil existed, when in fact, if anything, the present tariff laws have been in America's favor. But let that be as it may, the tariff is of minor importance, as compared with the condition of America's finances. The people of this country are beginning to feel that any reasonable and equitable system of getting revenues will suffice, provided they are relieved from the intricacies of a money system that makes it more difficult, day after day, to meet obligations. If the creditor class would allow the debtors a premium on their appreciated money, which, if debts are of very long standing, takes more of every thing to buy it, consequently worth more to the creditor, then the American people would have no room to complain. But that's the sticking point. Debt must be paid dollar for dollar. The forty per cent appreciation given to gold by legislation, does not belong to it, and is being wrong from the pockets of ever-producing in the country to help the capitalists. Every acre of land, bushel of wheat, of corn, oats, etc., have gone down with the discount placed on silver by its demonization. The people are beginning to see that bimetalism is more sorely needed than tariff tinkering, and the victors don't take a tumbler until the victors, there will be another and more serious tidal wave in 1896.

The financial outlook is not encouraging. Little will be accomplished this congress and for nearly two years there is bound to be uneasiness and uncertainty. It is the realization of this fact that has given rise to the prediction of hardships that are already appearing in the Eastern States. The West of course will suffer, too, if these predictions are realized, but the principal sufferers will be in the East where there are thousands who are not in a condition to stand prolonged money stringency, and whose struggle for existence is far more acute than here.—Spokane spokesman. Four years more of gold inflation and further debasement of silver will wipe out the eyes of most people the film that they have chosen to call an "honest dollar." A silver dollar was as good as any other dollar till it was debased by legislation.

The time is approaching for another city election, occurring this year on Feb. 7. We do not know how a majority of the people of our city feel on the subject, but do know that a number favor the re-election of the retiring councilmen, Frank Gilliam, S. P. Garrigues and Thos Morgan, as they are thoroughly familiar with the work which is now in the hands of the council, and which, at the expiration of their terms, will not be completed. There is also considerable sentiment in favor of the re-election of the present mayor and recorder, presumably on the same grounds, but the editor, as a hold-over councilman, will endeavor as one to work in harmony with the best interests of Heppner with whomsoever our people see fit to elect in these responsible positions—more so this year on account of the many financial matters with which they will have to deal.

THE FINANCIAL ISSUE.
From the Daily Rocky Mountain News.
If the Eastern banking interest should abandon the attempt to repeal the present silver law this winter, as the dispatches intimate, it will not be until every available effort has been tried and proved unsuccessful. The opponents of silver are now rallying all their strength for a test vote soon after the holidays, and there is reason to believe that the issue will not go over to the fifty-third congress without a close struggle.

Bimetalism is gaining ground unmistakably in this country and abroad, and there is no doubt that a pressure upon the members of congress from the people they represent would materially stiffen the silver phalanx in the present crisis. A form of protest has been prepared by The News against the repeal of the Sherman law without the concurrent enactment of a free coinage measure. It will be mailed upon application to any part of the country, and should be signed as numerously as possible and forwarded to members of congress without available delay.

While it is true that the cause of free coinage is brightening and that its ultimate triumph is assured, no disastrous measure should be precipitated for the want of vigilant action on the part of silver's friends. Silver was debased by conspirators and the fight is now being prosecuted against the white metal by a compact, sagacious and wealthy combination which scruples at nothing to gain a point. It would be folly to expect success in a conflict with such power without equal organization and vigilance. To the silver mining section belongs the task of shaping and stimulating a victorious campaign.

Should the opponents of bimetalism be foiled in their purpose in this congress, they make no secret of their hopes in the next, nor of their confidence in Mr. Cleveland's co-operation and determined influence. Hence the greater necessity for agitating the financial issue and organizing the people on that question. Mr. Cleveland was the choice of the money power in the Chicago convention and is credited with financial views that suit the bankers and other holders of money. He has announced himself an opponent of the joint and equal mintage rights of gold and silver. Since Mr. Cleveland made that announcement and even since his nomination for the presidency a remarkable change has taken place on the silver question. Thoughtful financiers in Europe and America have recognized and proclaimed impending monetary danger from the enormous artificial enhancement of gold brought about by money sharks. The bimetalist organization of Great Britain has been wonderfully reinforced and there is an even chance that the present ministry will be compelled to go before the country on the financial issue within six months. The cause has also made great strides within the same time in the United States and is taking a form in this country that means a sweeping victory, which a political party is old enough or great enough to prevent.

It remains to be seen whether Mr. Cleveland is oblivious to the forces which are at work and will continue in that state of mind. The money changers, relying upon his help, make no allowance for a revision of his views. Those who have given the subject attention and are not warped by the interests of money brokers, know that bimetalism has enriched and is enriching one class of society at the expense of others and much larger classes; that it adds 50 per cent to the value of gold as compared with general prices, and in reducing the volume of the circulating medium, it has vastly augmented the wealth of the creditor class and at the same time depressed nearly all forms of industry, not especially agriculture, which has been reduced to a point that has occasioned loss of homes to a large percentage of American farmers and that has left 40 per cent of farms ostensibly owned by the occupants covered with ruinous mortgages, while another 40 per cent have become tenant holdings, the titles having passed in the main to money lenders.

There must be an end to the undue influence of the money power in financial legislation and a reassertion of the rights of plain people in the enactment of our laws.

CHAZA AFTER GOLD.
The city of Durango, Colorado, has gone crazy over the reported discovery of the rich placer diggings, located 150 miles from that point in Southern Utah, where the San Juan river empties into the Colorado. The excitement is unparalleled since the days of '49. Along the line of the Atlantic & Pacific railway, from Gallup to the Needles, the towns are almost depopulated, and 1000 men are already at the scene. The placers were discovered less than a year ago by a Navajo trader named Williams. He interested Eastern capitalists, and hydraulic machinery was shipped to the place under pretense that it was to be used in developing coal fields. The shipping point was Winslow, Ariz., and an old prospector named French noted the style of machinery followed the outfit and came back to Winslow with his report, which was in effect that 60 miles of rich yellow placer grounds lay 240 miles to the north of Winslow, which ran from a color to $5 a pan. Since then every available means of transportation has been headed for the diggings. In Albuquerque are nuggets on exhibition ranging in weight from one to five ounces of coarse gold, and all classes of people are leaving their business and hurrying to Utah. The gold is described as similar to that discovered in California at the time of the first Leadville excitement.

SHERMAN'S VAUGHAN'S.
From the Salt Lake Tribune.
Senator Sherman continues to talk about silver, as the following paragraph shows:
The fact is that silver is going the way of the other metals probably, such as nickel, and copper metal. The methods now used to cheapen the production of silver diminish its value as a standard of coin, such as it had when it presented a large percentage of labor. We had copper once for coin, but its fall in value was inevitable upon the cheapening of its production and the quantity produced. Nickel, once $1.30 a pound, has fallen to 30 cents. Steel iron is worth about $13 a ton, and rail iron, once $100, are now $30 a ton, or nearly a cent and a half a pound. Nails, perfect nails at that, superior to nails of other times, are but $2 a keg. The falling off of the cost of production in other metals used for coinage has produced a monetary appreciation of gold. I think we shall not be able to sustain ourselves against the financial attack of the commercial world, which is inclining toward the gold standard more rather than less decidedly. Europe is too closely connected with us to slow us to be above her opinion.

When Senator Sherman compares silver to the base metals and talks about the methods to cheapen the production of silver, he talks with his mouth and has not a backing of proof in the world to sustain his position. There never yet has been a silver dollar mined that has not cost a dollar; we mean that if any territory or state has produced in any year a million ounces of silver, when the wages of men working for silver, prospecting for silver, opening mines with the hope of obtaining silver, are figured up, it will be found that the expenses have been more than $1,250,000. It does not cost as much to get an ounce of gold as it does an ounce of silver; that is, gold rock that pays $7 a ton can be worked at a profit, but there is no silver rock in the world that can be worked except at a loss. If by increased facilities the production of silver has been cheapened, then gold has still more been cheapened in production. A Chinaman, who only cost $20 in Hong Kong, with an outfit that only cost $20 more, has very often made $20 a day in placers in California, but that achievement on his part did not reduce the value of gold at all; and when Senator Sherman compares silver, which is never found except in limited quantities, to other metals, the production of which is only limited to the demand, he talks as the foolish talk. In point of fact, the increase in the world's business brought about by improved machinery, by the swift ships, and the facilities of exchange which ships and locomotives have made between countries, has been in greater proportion than the increase of silver. The only reason silver has declined is because three great nations have through their bankers asserted that they do not wish to have silver money. That is all there is to it. Those bankers, reaching out their long tentacles, strike at governments and compel them to accept debasement. Stretch out their long tentacles to all the realms of business and compel business men to accept their statements. And gold is today inflated 40 per cent. The man who does business does it on a standard that is inflated 40 per cent, and the result is that most men are working for nothing except to keep the interest accounts of the banks solid. It this keeps on a little longer, then the banks themselves will have to look to their securities, because a just world will not always submit to a double-edged dict of a government which doubles the debts of the people and takes away 60 or 80 per cent of their capacity to pay their debts.

AN IMPORTANT RULING.
All Applying to Purchase Forfeited R. R. Lands After Feb. 3, '93, Must Have Been Residing on Same June 25, 1892.
The Gazette is in receipt of the following from the La Grande land office, which, as our readers will perceive, is a copy of very important correspondence regarding the rights of settlers to purchase forfeited railroad land after Feb. 3, 1893. We publish it in full, that our readers may become acquainted with the methods of a quorum tute to lands such as are referred to:
UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE.

THE DRAIN OF GOLD.

From the Salt Lake Tribune.
Here is a characteristic item from the Philadelphia Press:

Exports of gold are increasing in volume every week, and there is no telling where or when the drain will stop. Doubtless the free silver bonanza will rejoice that this country is so rapidly getting rid of her stores of yellow metal to banish gold with the hope of thereby strengthening our monetary system in like the old idea of bleeding a man to make him strong.
Of course the Press takes the same view that the other Eastern papers do, that the Old World is unloading its securities upon us, through fear that in a little while our treasury will be reduced to a silver standard. We would like to ask the Press, if having the facilities at hand to publish a statement of about how much in interest, dividends, and in the expenses of tonnage, this country has to pay to the Old World every year. We would like to have it figure up our trade balance with the Old World, then to subtract that trade balance from the amount expended in interest, dividends and tonnage's expenses, and see whether, after all, the drifting of gold across the sea is not a natural process, which would have to go on just the same even if silver should be entirely repudiated by our government. When the press and other papers assert with so much apparent certainty that Europe is unloading her securities upon us, we would like for the rest to cite some examples of property owned by Englishmen in this country which the Englishmen are trying to sell. They own great breweries, they own mines, they own a great many homes, a great deal of land. Is it true, in point of fact, that they are trying to unload this property in order to get their funds out of this country?
Again, it is easy enough, through the banks of New York, to ascertain nearly the exact amount of American securities that have been sent over in the last three months to be realized upon. When the Baring Brothers failed, England unloaded $1,200,000,000 and they did it not because they were afraid their securities would be paid in silver, but because they were the very best securities they had to realize upon; they were in such a condition financially that they had to realize upon something or go to the wall. Through the dictation of the Rothschilds several countries of Europe are just now trying to get a reserve of gold enough to establish in those countries a gold standard. Those people are selling everything they can, not because they fear their securities will be paid in silver, but for the sole purpose of obtaining the gold to make a reserve so they can put their countries on a gold basis. They are doing exactly what the merchant does when he has to raise a certain amount by a certain hour on a certain day; he converts whatever he can of property in his possession into money.
We believe there is no class of men in the Old World who would not prefer, to day, American securities to any other in the world, because over there the people are different from what they are in our eastern cities; they have a mighty and profound respect for the government and resources of the United States, and believe that it is the great country of the earth, that while it has in sight more facilities for paying debts than any other country, it has yet undeveloped resources enough to pay all the debts of the world. Hence, we believe this talk of our Eastern contemporaries that the reason the gold is being drained from the country is because of their rash to unload American securities lest they eventually shall be paid in silver, is altogether a dishonest claim which is as humiliating as it is dishonest, for it shows a disposition on the part of our great newspapers to degrade their own country.

Fry, S. Wilson, of Monument, met with a serious mishap Tuesday evening west of Long Creek, while returning home from this city. He was on horseback leading a wild horse, which became unmanageable, causing Mr. Wilson's riding animal to fall, resulting in body bruising. Mr. Wilson's hip and shoulder and deltoid muscle left collar bone. Although suffering intense pain he was taken to Hamilton where medical attention was summoned, and the patient made easier.
