THE legislature of Alabama has recently passed a bill prohibiting the sale of sigarettes, oigarette tobacco and papers. It is a misdemeanor punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both, to smoke cigarettes in a public place in that state.

THE house of our legislature has passed a combined repeal of the mostgage tax law and deduction for indebtedness clause. A poll of the senate standing "pat" on the proposition.

A SALEM disparch says: There is a well-defined feeling here tonight that Harry Grady, of Pendleton, has the inside track on the United States marshalship: that George Noland will be ef customs; Henry Blackman, collector mortgage tax law and the indebtedness internal revenue, and Pat Powers, ap-

Sounleading republicans of high standing view askance Geer's bill to make the railroad commissioners elective. The result will be, they say, to ring rairoad companies into the state conventions and eventually to the polls with money to defeat a candidate inimical to them, says a Salem dispatch to the Oregonian. Not half so apt to corrupt the whole people as a legislature. Geer's bill is not in the interest of the "short card" politicians. that's the trouble.

Tue president has raised somewhat of a farore in the ranks of the republicans by nominating as successor to Justice Lamar, Judge Howell Edmunds Jackson, of Tennessee. Judge Jackson is a democrat of the old school, hence the object tion. It is said, however, that he stands high as a judge, and that the president's selection was brought about by the threat that the republicans in the senate would not confirm the nomination of a republican, and as he desired to make the nomination during his term of office, concluded that the selection of a democrat would be acceptable to the senate's democratic members, and with the aid of a few republicans, he would be confirmed. Tun correspondence of our Sand hollow friend on the subject of assessments taxation and the repeal of the mortgage tax law, as expressed in the bill now before the Oregon legislature, is to the point. And doubtless the new law, if passed, will, for a time, show up a few inconsistencies and evils. But they will be small in proportion to those existing under the old laws, and, in time, will pass away. We have no objections to the enforcement of the new law being deferred one year, but probably at that time very many people whom it would affect unjustly would be no better prepared for the new system of assessments and taxation than now, for very many have debts standing against them that will not be due then. The repeal of the mortgage tax law would relieve immediately those who pay directly the taxes of the lender, but those who are doing so in the form of interest will, of course, have pects. to pay the same old rate till the debts | Our school closed Friday, the teacher
