RELICS OF BONAPARTE. Articles of Apparel Worn by the Little Corporal in the Campaign of 1814.

The last genuine relics of the first Napoleon have now been transferred from the Louvre museum to that of the Hotel des Invalides, says the London Telegraph. They comprise an authentic "Redingote grise," which cost 160 francs at Lejeune's, and the "little hat," which was blocked by Poupard & Co. and was afterward worn by the emperor in the campaign of 1814. A great deal of dispute and discussion has arisen about these two articles, the transfer of which to the Invalides has long been delayed, as in January last a representative of the Empress Best that can be constructed and in which accommodations are both free and furnished for colders of first or second-class rickets and Eugenie put in a claim for them as iects lent to the museum. After careful search there was found in the archives of the Louvre a letter dated A Continuous Line connecting with all February, 1854, signed by the imperial grand chamberlain, the Duc de Bassano, in which the chief conservator of the Louvre was told that the emperor wished the coat and hat to be placed as historical relies in the Musee des Souverains. On the strength of this letter the state has now asserted its rights to the curiosities, and a presidential decree authorizing their transfer to the Hotel des Invalides was issued recently. Among the other Napoleonie articles sent to the Invalides are a little tri-color cockade in silk, which the emperor wore at Fontainebleau when bidding farewell to the Imperial guard, and the first consul appeared at Marengo; a Stockholm: a flag of one of the regi-ments of Cnasseurs of the guard; the seat used by the emperor in Saint Helena, and, lastly, the camp bedstead in which he died. This object was given to Napoleon III. by Prince Murat. Visitors to the Invalides will soon be subdue them. No testinony is stronger subdue them. The tuberous begonias are now largely grown as bedding plants. Their colors are more varied and brilliant than geraniums. The Rex begonias, with their large ornamental leaves, are also greatly prized. Begonias are increased by seeds, by divisions of the rhizomes and by cuttings which strike freely in sand and leaf mold. Leaf cuttings succeed best when laid on sand and shaded from

ALONE AMID SKELETONS.

The Only Inhabitant of an Island Where 3,000 Indians Had Been Buried.

Two prospectors recently visited the island of San Nicholas, off the Ventura coast, with the purpose of taking up land. They found the land on the island, which is four miles wide by twelve long, utterly burren. On the western side sand is about the only thing seen, and this has been blown from the beach clear to the top of the island, seven hundred or eight hundred feet high.

On the other side of the island, says the Ventura Free Press, they found human bones for a distance of five miles along the beach. They were very thick, and it looked as if it had been a graveyard. They also discovered the remains of human bodies on the ridge, which runs lengthwise through the island. In some places two skeletons were seen close together, as if they had been buried in the same grave. The wind had blown off what covering of soil had been thrown over them. Bones were thickly strevn along this ridge for upward of three miles. From appear and answer the county of Morrow R. L. Hughes, Plaintiff, Summons, Sum

It seems that when her party was leaving the island she jumped overboard and swam ashore in the night. Years went by before she was taken off.
