Rev. W. E. Potwine's private secretary writes us as follows: "Snow Blockade! Accident! No train, no preacher, no service. Heap cold, heap freeze water pipe, heap beat, heap big plumber bill—too much like the same North Pole." This is sufficient explanation for the Reverend's non-appearance last week.

Senator Blackman is slated over the passage of his bill to divide the $35,000 in the state treasury applicable to road building among the counties according to area. This will give Eastern Oregon the lion's share, to which it is fairly entitled. Umattila's share will be about or above the average, which is nearly $3000.—E. O. Correspondence.

Tribune: Rev. W. E. Potwine has not only shown his ability to save souls by his doctrine, but also has shown his equal ability to save property as evidenced by his labor and skill as a volunteer fireman at the disaster fire which our city was visited with on Monday night. It is said that he worked with an energy which would put to shame some of the oldest firemen in our force.

LYCUM DOINGS.—Last Friday night occurred the regular meeting of the W. C. B. Lyceum, of Heppner. Our reporter was very gratefully remembered with an invitation to attend, and, of course, gladly accepted. He was highly pleased with the way the young folks entertained the audience, which consisted of a crowd of some 100.

LINK SWAGGART RETURNS.—The friends of Link Swaggart will be glad to learn that his eye has been much benefited by the treatment he procured for it in Portland. He returned this morning, and informed "ye scribe" that the ulcer on the eye ball had been cut away, with considerable agony to himself, but that he has since been relieved from the severe pain in the side of his head. Although the damaged eye is very painful and is healing but very slowly, it is but a question of time, when our friend Link Swaggart will again look into the future of the people's party with undimmed visage of both eyes.—Tribune. The Gazette had not heard of Link's misfortune, but hopes he will suffer no further inconvenience.

some feed for stock about two miles from his home, down below Lexington, and when he returned, found that he had badly frozen his face, and the second and third fingers of each hand to the first joint. He was not aware until he reached the fire that he was even cold. It took him fully 24 hours to recover from the chill received, and is yet unable to use his hands, though he thinks that his fingers will come around all right in time. Mr. Brown considers that he had a very narrow escape from freezing to death.

NEW MANAGEMENT.—J. S. Delevan, who recently leased the Heppner-Monument stage line, has got control of the line from Monument to Canyon City, making a through line from Canyon to the railroad. The consummation of this deal has been wished for some time, as it will not only be better for the owners, but the public will reap considerable benefits therefrom. New vehicles will be put on immediately, and Mr. Delevan will use every effort to get passengers and freight through in good time. One thing sure, Mr. Delevan knows how to run a stage line, and the comfort of passengers, while in his charge, will be the first consideration with him.

THE WAY TO VICTORY.

From the Rocky Mountain News. In the struggle against the evils of contraction, caused by the money lenders' conspiracy against silver, the greatest present need is a central bureau of information, through the agency of which pertinent facts may be placed before the people by which they may learn the enormous burden that has been placed upon production by legislation which was enacted solely in the interest of bondholders and money brokers. To supply this need should be the leading purpose of the National Bimetallic league which meets in Washington on the 23d of this month.

Demonstrate in simple language to the farmers of the South and West why it is that so much of their product is now required to buy a dollar or to pay a dollar's worth of debt, and it will not take long to make their votes count for a return in a just currency. They will see that the issue is vital to them, because the depreciation in the price of farm products, caused by the debasement of silver and consequent enhancement of gold, has already turned about one-third of American farm homes into tenant holdings and loaded another third with debts the bulk of which can never be liquidated without relief through just legislation.

The power which cheated producers by debasing silver from the position it held from the earliest dawn of history, being backed by limitless wealth, has been able in large measure to mold public opinion to its false financial views. One New York publishing house issued last year a round dozen volumes treating on the money question, in one form or another, and every one of them is devoted to wretched goldbug pleas, for which every example must of necessity be taken from human experience less than twenty years old, since all preceding history sustains silver in regal position as the true measure of value. Who can doubt that this mass of Wall Street fallacies was inspired by Wall street money and by the influence which have retained most of the great metropolitan dailies for the money power in support of the most blighting form of class legislation?

With such potent forces at work for plottery and against the people the necessity for the systematic and extended spread of information should be apparent. It is the certain path to victory; nor does it imply the enormous expenditure that has been made in goldbug literature. An attempt to delude the people, the goldbug conspirators have been obliged to pervert the facts and experiences of history and ignore as misrepresentations the conclusions of all standard financial and economic writers from John Locke to John Stuart Mill.

On the other hand, the advocates of a return to free coinage are sustained by all these facts and authorities. The enlightenment of such producers and wage workers as have not given the financial question attention is an easy task and a comparatively inexpensive one. As an illustration of this, the experience of the late campaign may be ated. The News, believing the money question to be at the root of national prosperity, discarded party allegiance as the only way by which it could champion the cause of the people. As the result of an uncompromising fight for silver in that canvass the entire section west of the Missouri river was politically revolutionized. Since then one of the most influential papers in the Mississippi valley, the St. Louis Republic, has run up the free coinage colors, undoubtedly as a result of the presidential battle and the fight made in that contest for the emancipation of the masses from the crushing power of Eastern money sharks.

The agitation of an unseemable wrong against the tolling millions during the brief period of a national campaign has awakened a sentiment for the right that today commands the chief attention of the country and has relegated to the rear all other public questions. This sentiment is so strong that it has driven the money influence, represented by the banks, trust companies and great corporations, to a combined counteracting effort in behalf of class legislation, such as has no example in our country or perhaps anywhere.

The wave which has been put in motion is so brief a time and with means so considerable should encourage the National Bimetallic league to inaugurate a winning campaign of education through the diffusion of crisp and pointed literature and by utilizing the rostrum to the extent that may be practicable. The emergency calls for energetic action, if the work is undertaken in the right spirit and is wisely directed such results will follow that not even Mr. Cleveland's wealth of patronage will suffice to wane the next congress from its duty to the people and to the country.

SOME EAGLES. From our Long Creek Paper. Arthur Hamilton, who has for some time resided on Mahogany ridge, is holding the reins over the fiery steeds on the Monument-Canyon City mail route under the new management.

The election passed off quietly Tuesday, it being too chilly to permit of much alighting. However, some of the candidates in the field kept matters from dropping below freezing point. Mat Kerwin informs the Eagle that he will soon leave for Elk creek to do some work on his Big Five ledge. It is located on Quartz gulch and is destined to be valuable property some day.

F. W. Silvertooth returned last Saturday from an extended trip down in the Antelope country. He reports everything in good shape down in that country. Stock of all kinds are doing well. A letter from Greenhorn of the 4th states that "it is bitter cold, and have had severe snow storms during the entire week." The usual amount of snow will yet deck the Greenhorn mountains.

Eleven inches of snow fell in this vicinity last Saturday morning in about four hours. Since, however, it has been piled up in huge drifts, making traveling well nigh impossible. Mrs. Minnie Davis lost about thirty head of sheep during one of the drifting snow storms of last week. It's hard to prevent loss of sheep during such fierce wind storms as have prevailed in Grant county this winter.

The mails are put through on scheduled time at present under the opening of the new mail contractor's administration. However, while G. F. Harris, of this city, had charge of the line, the mail was put through in a business-like manner, carrying the same on a schedule when possible, and horseback when otherwise.

Although the city election passed off very quietly Tuesday, much hard work was done for various candidates in the field, the fight being principally for the marshaling. The officers elected were: Mayor, C. H. Lee; councilmen, E. N. Crockett, Oscar Rinehart, C. W. Cogger and Orin L. Patterson; recorder, C. E. Goff; marshal, S. C. Hardisty; treasurer, P. W. McRoberts.
