MODERN SAMSONS.

Many of the Strong Men Kill Themselves by Their Exertions.

The strong-man mania has subsided somewhat, says the Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph. Three months ago it was at high tide. Scores of exponents were going about the country on the museum circuits, the objects of ardent admiration. They performed various feats, some good and some hardly out of the ordinary. All issued challenges by the scores, many of them for notoriety. Of course this kind of business developed numerous novices. Men who thought they were strong tried their hands, and as soon as they cultivated the sleight, which it must be admitted is behind all actions of this kind, they could accomplish clever feats. Each large workshop developed its strong man.

Heavy-weight lifting is hardly much of a developer, although the leading exponents are pretty well developed. Here are the chest measurements of the leaders: Cyr, 53 inches; Sandow, 45½; Sampson, 44; Blatt, 42; Miller, 47½; Apollo, 44.

Practice of the sport is attended with much danger. Early death has been the penalty of many. They exhausted their vitality in the performance of herculean feats.

Charles A. Bennett, of San Francisco, died of consumption in 1889, and was a man who lifted 967 pounds of pig iron with his hands alone, lifted fourteen tons of iron in a minute's time, put up 158¾-pound bell, swung a pair of 10-pound Indian clubs 4,389 times in less than an hour, and turned 205 back somersaults in fifty-four minutes and ten seconds. He lived to be only thirty-five years of age.

Richard A. Pennell, who twenty years ago was one of the strongest men in America, and put up a 201¾-pound dumb-bell (making a record which stood for years), was an invalid all the last years of his life, his vitality having been impaired by overexertion.

A Fish That Carried a Watch.

A salmon taken at Astoria, Ore., recently had a silver watch and chain in its mouth. The watch had evidently lain in the water for years, as the steel portions crumbled to dust when touched. Its presence in the salmon's mouth is accounted for by the fact that salmon at this time of the year will eagerly bite at any bright object, and the watch and chain had been caught by the net dragging on the bottom. As it was hauled in it attracted the attention of the salmon and he took it in.

A DEFAULTER AND ABSCONDER.

C. F. Goff Takes a Sudden Departure for Parts Unknown.

From the Eagle.

"How much did he owe you?" to which was answered, $10, $50, $75, $150, $300," was the course of conversation heard on the streets of Long Creek last Saturday when the news was circulated that C F. Goff, for several years a resident of this city, had skipped to parts unknown.

He made arrangements to go to Heppner Wednesday, April 5th, on some business with the banks, and would return in a few days, but left the impression that he might visit Pendleton before he returned, and if so, he would not return for ten days or such a matter.

Wm. Crowley sent $103.00 to deposit in the bank to his credit. Wm Studio sent a small check to redeem an express package at the express office at Heppner. To date neither of these amounts have been accounted for by the respective parties to which it was to have been paid. This led his business affairs to be investigated more thoroughly. It was found that all money in his possession belonging to the town of Long Creek was missing from the safe, which will not amount to $50.

To his wife he stated that he had used considerable money deposited with him on land business, and due to the present financial times it was impossible for him to raise any part of it. To remain in the country, inevitably meant a term in the "pen." As it is, his sudden departure means something for his bondsmen as city recorder, and commissioner U. S. circuit court. Although it is not known at present the amount of public money he has used, but those who were intimately acquainted with his business, says it will not fall short of $5000 and may possibly reach $1000 This does not include the amounts for which his bondsmen will be responsible.

C. F. Goff came here several years ago, and has had every opportunity to reach the highest round in the ladder of honor, but due to an uncontrolable mania for gambling, he has brought about his own downfall, and wrought serious financial injury to his many friends.

VERY SARCASTIC.

Renting a Flat to a Woman Is Not an Easy Matter.

"Most women are easy suited as to houses and flats," said a Harlem real estate agent to me the other day, says a New York correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. "There are a few, it is true, who object to very small things and will refuse to take a house if they find a fly-speck on the door knob or a girl chewing gum in the same block, but as a general thing I can always come to some agreement with a woman who really wants a house or flat."

"I thought the contrary was the fact," I said.

"Not at all. For instance, there was a woman who came here for a nice flat on Friday. I saw at a glance that I could induce her to take one which has been on my hands for seven months. So I left the office in charge of that boy you see smoking cigarette stumps and catching flies over there and went with the woman myself and showed her the flat. She seemed pleased with it, and after she had hesitated a few minutes I said:

"'Nice flat, isn't it?'

"'Yes, I rather like it.'

"'Take it?'

"'Well, I'll tell you. It's a double flat, isn't it? The parlor is a little small, but if you'll tear down the wall and knock the two parlors into one, raise the ceiling about three feet—it's a little low, you know—build a servant's stairs, put up a passenger elevator, introduce steam heat, change the light shaft into a court, reduce the rent from seventy-five dollars to thirty dollars and move the house a little further west, I'll take a lease for six months.'

"Oh! no, I never have any trouble with women. All you have to do is to be a little accommodating."

DANGEROUS FREIGHT.

Cargo That Steamship Men Do Not Like to Carry.

The recent discussion as to whether ocean liners should carry cotton as well as passengers, and at the same time as brought out another fact. It is says the New York Recorder, that they carry other kinds of freight that makes the danger of fire just as great as from cotton. A person who knows something of such matters states that just at present there are being made large importations of French silk that are especially dangerous as a freight.

"At present importers here," the gentleman said, "are receiving large consignments of a heavy-dyed silk known as French twist. The French manufacturers do not spare the dye of these goods, for it adds to their weight. In this dye chemicals of a peculiar kind are used, and it is this fact that makes this silk dangerous freight.

"There is always fear of spontaneous combustion unless the greatest care is taken in packing the goods. These come in bales of various sizes, but generally averaging about five hundred pounds. They are wrapped in cotton bagging with underlying layers of straw and brown paper, and are made compact by hydraulic pressure. There is constant danger of fire originating from them, and they must be watched with care while in transit. There have been cases where bales have been destroyed from the causes mentioned, and not many years ago a serious fire was caused on a French steamer by these same goods."

Steamship men generally say that they are aware of the danger of carrying these silks, and that the greatest care is taken whenever they are carried as freight. One or two lines, indeed, discriminate against this freight and will not carry it.

My wife was confined to her bed for over two months with a very severe attack of rheumatism. We could get nothing that would afford her any relief, and as a last resort gave Chamberlain's Pain Balm a trial. To our great surprise she began to improve after the first application, and by using it regularly she was soon able to get up and attend to her house work. E. H. Johnson, of C. J. Knutson & Co., Kensington, Minn. 50 cent bottles for sale by Slocum-Johnston Drug Company.

A Rabbit in Ice.

A professor of the Paris Academy des Sciences has been making experiments which have resulted in convincing him that the rabbit is of all living things the most capable of withstanding a very low temperature. Inclosed at night in a block of ice a rabbit was found next day getting on very comfortably and evidently not aware of anything very peculiar in his circumstances.
