AS TO DUCKS. A man from the City Finds Nothing to Admire in the Ambitious Fowl. The Boston Transcript doesn't seem to like ducks. It is a mistake, it says, to regard the duck as a commonplace, cheerful, amiable creature. It is really a restless, eager, unhappy fowl with a want long felt, an aching void in its crop that is never filled. A duck is simply a waddling appetite. The farmers have taken to raising ducks to supply eggs for the Boston market, where they bring higher prices than hen's eggs, though the farmer himself and his family seem to eat them. The pond is not considered a requisite for ducks. "Give 'em plenty to eat and plenty of water to drink," says Uncle Ira, "and they don't want any water to swim in." Perhaps they don't ask for it, but it is hard to believe that they don't want it. It is a terrible thing to see ducks eat meat. They shove it with their bills until their throats are crammed, then waddle to the trough and drink a lot of water and then shovel a great deal more of the dough. In drinking they do not lift their eyes to heaven after the pious fashion of the hens. Uncle Ira took a fork and went to digging in the earth near the chip pile. Instantly the ducks swarmed quacking around and fell to picking up the earth-worms that came up with the fork. Nothing could parallel their greed. They eat until they are sure they can no more, and Uncle Ira dreads for fear of killing them, and then they run off and go to hunting insects as if they had had nothing to eat for a week.

A DEER WHIPS A BULL.

The Fight in a Pasture Not That Far from Goodrich, of Panther Hill, says. Abner M. Goodrich, who lives on Panther hill, thirteen miles south of Scranton, Pa., says the New York Sun saw a buck deer strolling along the edge of a piece of woods on his place a few days ago. Suddenly the buck stopped, threw back his antlers and began prancing toward the farm buildings, in a hillside pasture field, twenty rods below the buck, Mr. Goodrich's herd of cattle were grazing. All at once the buck caught sight of the cattle, and, leaping over the fence, bounded down the hillside toward them. The cows became frightened at the buck's sudden appearance, and with their tails in the air they scattered to a corner of the pasture. The bull in the herd did not run. When the buck saw the cows cowering away he came to a sudden stop. The bull immediately faced the strange animal, bellowed savagely and began to paw up the dirt. At first the buck stood as if he didn't know what to make of the noisy bull's actions. He backed off a few feet and the bull slowly followed him. Then the bull made a lunge at the buck with lowered horns, and the buck got out of his way by bounding to one side. This was repeated a number of times, the bull becoming more angry at each failure to gore the buck, while the buck eyed his antagonist and kept out of his reach.

Finally the buck began to get mad at the way the bull was making him shift his ground. When the bull again lunged at him he uttered a loud bleat, bounded into the air and struck the horns of the bull in the neck. One of the bull's horns pierced the buck's shoulder, and then the buck's fighting nature was aroused to the highest pitch. He danced all around the bull, jammed his prongs into the bull's sides, struck him with his sharp hoofs and didn't give the bull another chance to gore him. Soon the buck's energetic and fierce attack completely demoralized the bull. He made one more effort to down his lively antagonist but failed to hook him, while the buck got in another telling strike on the bull's ribs. Then the bull gave a belated retreat, turned tail like a flash and ran at the top of his speed to where the cows were huddled. For a moment the triumphant buck stood and gazed at the fugitive bull. Then he whirled, leaped to the hill, scaled the fence and disappeared in the forest. The bull was so badly injured that Mr. Goodrich had to kill him.

Since its first introduction, Electric Bitters has gained rapidly in popular favor, until it now stands in the lead among pure medicinal tonics and alteratives—containing nothing which permits its use as a beverage or intoxicant, it is recognized as the best and purest medicine for all ailments of the stomach, liver or kidneys, will cure sick head, acid, indigestion, constipation, and drive malaria from the system. In the library of the Moravian school for boys at Nazareth, Pa., which was founded in 1741, and whose sessions since were interrupted only for a brief period by the revolution, is a series of quaint old volumes containing the compositions, graduating colloquies and essays, together with sketches in pencil, made by scholars whose hands came down half a century ago. The main building of the school on the academic green is the stone Pomeranian "castle" erected by Count Zinzendorf in what was then the wilderness of Pennsylvania, and which attracted many curious visitors in the last century.

There is nothing I have ever used for muscular rheumatism that gives me as much relief as Chamberlain's Pain Balm does. I have been using it for about two years—four bottles in all—as occasion required, and always keep a bottle of it in my home. I believe I know a thing or two about rheumatism, and Chamberlain's Pain Balm has done more for me than any other medicine I have ever met with. W. B. Denny, dairyman, New Lexington, Ohio. 50 cent bottles for sale by Slocum-Johnson Drug Co.

AN ENORMOUS FORTUNE. The Useful Discovery Which Was Its Foundation. The story of the enormous fortune accumulated by Mr. Cunliffe Lister (one of the "birthdays peers") is one of the romances of "Fortunes Made in Busy London." Going one day into a London warehouse, says the Pall Mall Gazette, he came upon a pile of rubbish. He inquired what it was and was told it was waste silk. "What do you do with it?" he asked. "Sell it for rubbish," he was told. Mr. Lister bought it as rubbish at one-half penny a pound and turned it into gold. He discovered, that is to say, how to use silk waste for the manufacture of plush and other such stuffs, and this discovery was the foundation of his second fortune. His first fortune was won by his invention of a wool-combing machine. Mr. Lister is an exception in one respect to the general rule of industrial millionaires. He did not begin life with only a sixpence to bless himself with, nor was his early training that of an errand boy. On the contrary, he was destined to be the fourth son for the church. Instead, however, of accepting this role of "fool of the family," he insisted on developing his natural talent for mechanical invention, and persuaded his father to give him a mill instead of a university education. As soon as the mill was built he became, as we have described, the architect of his own fortunes. Mr. Lister, besides being the proprietor of the largest industrial establishment in the world, owned by one man, is now one of the largest landed proprietors in the north of England. In 1883 he purchased the Swinton Hall estate of twenty-two thousand acres, and in 1887 the Rivalry Abbey estate of ten thousand acres. The combined value of these two estates is said to be seven hundred and eighty thousand pounds sterling.
